Babes Buried in Sand.
An infant in Guinea is usually buried in sand up to its waist whenever the mother is busy, and this is the only cradle it ever knows.
The little Lapp, on the other hand, fares most luxuriously in his mother's shoe. These Lapp shoes are big affairs of skin stuffed with soft moss, and can be hung on a peg or tree branch safely out of the way.

"Thirty days in the workhouse. That ought to cure you of speeding."
"It certainly will, your honor. Would you like to use my car while I'm in duration ville?"
"No, thank. I've seen you riding in that old bus of yours. It couldn't do over forty miles an hour."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Robin Native in Three Continents.
English robins have namesakes in three continents, for in China and New Zealand as well as in America, settlers from England gave the familiar name to a native bird. The American migratory thrush recalls by its reddish breast the brighter gorget of the English species. Though duller of plumage, the New Zealand robin earned the name by its tameness; and there is a touch of the same friendly nature in the Chinese bird.

Several English birds are distinguished by a human nickname; tom-tit, jackdaw, magpie, jenny wren and even phillip sparrow. But only the robin redbreast has made friends so thoroughly with man that its full name is almost forgotten, while its nickname is coexistent with the English language.

Big Tree as Reservoir.
In central Africa the gigantic baobab tree, whose trunk sometimes attains a diameter of 40 feet, often serves as a natural cistern, retaining rainwater in large quantities in a cavity formed at the top of the broad trunk.

Taking the hint thus afforded by nature, the Arabs artificially hollow out the trunks of large baobabs and fill them with water during the prevalence of rains as a provision against the dry seasons.

These cisterns are in some cases twenty feet in height and eight or ten feet in diameter. The water is used both for drinking and for irrigating melon patches.

Road Contracts Are Very Low

Douglas county has saved approximately $25,000 by advertising its spring and summer road work during the winter months, it is estimated. The exceptionally low bids received, compared with those submitted by contractors during summer months on work of like character indicate that calling for bids during the winter when work is scarce, results in lower proposals and on the work let thus far by the county a large sum has been saved. On the six proposals received last week by the county, all but one was below the engineer's estimates, the estimates being based on the county's force account jobs of last summer. Last year the county was not satisfied with several bids received and made several improvements by force account. A careful check was kept on all expenditures so that the engineers might use the data in preparing future estimates. It was upon these findings that the engineer's estimates of the jobs on which contracts have been allowed, were prepared, and when the contractors bid below these estimates it shows that the county is getting the very best in the way of contracts. Machinery salesmen who are well acquainted with the road activities throughout the state, say that Douglas county is receiving better proposals than any other county and much better than the highway commission. The projects on which contracts are now being let are to be completed out of the new bond money and the court is endeavoring to make every dollar count.

Because of the prevailing sickness the chamber of commerce meeting scheduled for tonight has been postponed until a future date.

The Sartorial Waistline Drops Some Six Inches Below Normal

FOR the past few seasons, evening gowns have been but variations on the simple theme of the camiccio waist, gathered skirt—and normal waistline. The new note this season is sounded by the appearance of the low waistline and the Russian blouse. Heretofore the appearance of the Russian blouse has only been on the street frock, the suit, and the afternoon gown, as its entrance into the ballroom is revolutionary.

One may or may not have one's waist blossomed—that freedom of choice is left to madame's own individual taste, but one thing Dame Fashion does insist on, and that is that one's waistline be low.

For the woman who does not prefer the blossomed effect, there is the semi-fitted blouse that is drawn low over the hips. This mode is the perfect complement to the long skirt that reaches to the floor. It creates

THE RUSSIAN BLOUSE BECOMES FORMAL

The dress shown in the sketch to the left is a simple one to make. It is composed of a satin slip, covered with the lace over dress. Over the lace skirt are two apron-panels of satin, one in front, and one in back. The lace hangs below the slip and the panels.

The other frock is of moire, and has an uneven skirt—longer at the sides than in the front and back. There is an individual touch employed in the blouse. A peasant flower-motif done in colored silks, charm, made unusual by a lace "cupe." Bugle banding collars this "cupe" and likewise edges the panels.

Less formal gowns, or dinner dresses, are shown in the sketches. They both have the long Russian blouse and the long skirts—the long panel in the back that forms a train. A gown of dignified

TELMEN AFTER SCALPS OF PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

PORTLAND, March 6.—Abolition of the state public service commission, as now constituted, substitution of a commission to be appointed by governor, and the restoration of telephone rates prevailing previous to March 1, 1921, is the program which the Oregon Hotel Men's association will submit to the election of the state in the November election.

Without a dissenting vote the hotel men adopted a resolution to that effect this afternoon and directed machinery be set in motion to bring about fulfillment of the objects of the resolution.

The president of the association and the executive committee were authorized and directed and instructed in conjunction with the attorney of the organization, to prepare an act to be submitted through the initiative, for the November general election. Immediate action is promised.

Hotel men, as well as the general public, have been disappointed in the refusal of the state public service commission to restore the old rate after the hearing.

Commission Storm Center.
Since the commission declined to modify the rates there has been a commission to restore the old rates making body.

The movement launched by the hotel men has no connection with the talk-of recall. The hotel men are adopting an entirely different policy and aim at a different result from what could be attained through a mere recall.

In a broad way, the hotel men do not upset the house services commission as such, but merely change the law so that instead of being elected, members of the commission shall be appointed. Under the plan of the hotel men the commissioners would owe their appointment to the governor, as is the case with the state highway commission and a number of other important state bodies.

Two Measures Required.
Probably two initiative measures will be required, one changing the commission from an elective to an appointive body, and another to deal with the restoration of the old phone rates.

Under the initiative quick action is possible, for as soon as the state returns are in, such measures become operative upon proclamation of the governor. The movement of the hotel men will probably have an effect on men who contemplate entering the primaries as candidates for public service commissioner to succeed Mr. Williams, whose successor is to be nominated on May 19.

Veterans Asked to Use Patience

SALEM, March 7.—Bonus applicants are asked to be patient in regard to the payment of their claims, in the statement issued by Captain Harry Brumbaugh, secretary of the commission.

The offices of the commission are being swamped with letters of inquiry as to when the writers will receive their allotments. Due to the fact that each claim has to be passed upon by the commission, and that every question regarding the eligibility of the applicant fully answered, necessitates a considerable amount of time being spent on each application.

Out of a total of 26,354 applications the commission has passed upon 13,324; of these, 6289 have requested loans and 8035 have requested cash.

Examinations of applications are made at the rate of 300 a day. About 40 per cent of the initial applications have to be returned to applicants for correction due to carelessness or circumstances over which the ex-serviceman has no control.

DRUGGISTS TO BE WARNED.
MEDFORD, March 6.—"It is not so much the drinking of moonshine that is causing the drunkenness in Medford as it is the drinking of patent medicines and extracts with large alcoholic content, especially Jamaica ginger," said Chief of Police Timothy today in speaking of recent arrests in the city for drunkenness. "I will advise the druggists of the city to exercise more caution as to whom they sell such medicines and extracts, especially Jamaica ginger. It makes men fighting drunk."

Three men in the city prison last night were so drunk that the police and firemen had to drench them with water from a large hose to quiet them.

IF YOU'VE—

Ever Shucked Corn

You Understand Advertising

Suppose you shuck a couple of thousand ears of corn! You're SURE to find some red-and-purple ears among 'em!

But suppose you shuck just ONE ear. Not much chance of finding a kissing ear with but one try! Selling is just like that. The first man you talk with probably isn't interested. But advertise to, say, 5000 families and then you'll sell things quick!

The more ears of corn you shuck, the more purple ears you find.

The more people you reach with advertising, the more sales you will make.

That's why it is important to phone your want ads to a newspaper with a great, overwhelming city and country circulation like the News-Review.
