Lower Umpqua Case In Court

The petition of the Taxpayers' League of the lower Umpqua country versus the Port of Umpqua, to enjoin the collection of the 1921 taxes, amounting to $22,500, was in court here today. The league has filed the petition on the grounds that $12,500 of the subsidy is illegal. A demurrer was filed by the Port of Umpqua and sustained by the court on the ground that the taxpayers had not tendered the apportionment of the tax which is admitted to be due. The court gave the plaintiff ten days in which to tender the amount of taxes and file an amended complaint. The merits of the controversy will then be up for hearing and decision. J. H. Napier of Reedsport, and J. O. Watson of this city, represent the defendant, and A. K. Peck of Marshfield, appears for the plaintiffs.

OLD MINE STILL PRODUCING

That at Falun, Sweden, Has Been Delivering Up Its Riches Since the Year 1225.

On the outskirts of the town of Falun, in the north of Sweden, is the oldest mine in the world. It began to produce copper in 1225.

In the seventeenth century this mine was the chief source of the copper supply of Europe. Today it no longer produces copper in large quantities, but from its deep-cut galleries come the sulphur pyrites that are used for the manufacture of sulphuric acid and other chemicals.

It is one of the most old-fashioned mines imaginable. You will find no rapid hauling machinery, no cage that descends at lightning speed into the bowels of the earth. You walk into the mine through sloping galleries, and then climb down to its depths by means of long ladders. As you descend you wish that you had brought an overcoat, for the walls are covered with ice.

Ventilation and drainage are accomplished by means of the most antiquated pumping gear in existence in any pit. Besides copper and pyrites, the Falun mine produces gold. From it came all the gold used to make the Swedish crown and scepter, and it has provided most of the metal for the gold coinage of that country.

Photography of Words.

Devaux-Charbonnel, the French scientist, has photographed the variation of current in a microphone circuit by the aid of a Blondal oscillograph. The photographs are reproductions of the syllables pronounced by a human voice, and it is expected that they will be of use in the solution of various problems in telephony. In studying the impression made by syllables the experimenter found that each syllable is composed of 30 to 40 complete vibrations. The beginning and the end of the syllables are modified by the impressions of the consonants, but the modifications cover only four or five periods, so that each syllable has 20 to 30 regular vibrations corresponding to its vowel. The method permits the study of the higher harmonics, which give character to words.
