FARMERS SHOULD RAISE MORE HOGS

Not Enough Hogs Raised to Dispose of Waste Products Livestock Expert Says.

CLUBS BEING FORMED

Meetings Being Held in Endeavor to Interest Boys and Girls and Their Parents in Raising More Hogs Throughout the County.

There are not enough hogs raised in any county in the state to consume the waste products of the farm, L. J. Allen, assistant state club leader, who is now engaged in a speaking tour of the county, stated today. Mr. Allen is a specialist in the livestock industry and is making a close study in the industry particularly as it pertains to hogs and their use for the consumption of waste products and for their food value on the average farm.

Mr. Allen is endeavoring to link up the club work more closely with that of the county agent and secure the aid and cooperation of the parents and adult farm bureau members in aiding the boys and girls of the pig clubs to bring the industry to a point where the production will meet the demand.

"On every farm there are a great many products which are a complete waste," Mr. Allen says. "There are fruits, vegetables, skim milk, etc., which must be thrown out unless fed to the hogs. These waste products if combined with a little green feed and corn, will support several head of hogs which would be of much benefit to the county.

"There is hardly a farm in Oregon that is producing enough hogs to take care of the waste products. The average farm can support two to four hogs just with the food which otherwise would be a complete waste. During the past year, Oregon shipped in over 50,000 hogs when we should have been shipping them out.

"There is no reason why the boys and girls of the county should not relieve this condition and at the same time make a profit for themselves. It is our aim to interest the children and their parents in this task. We do not desire to have a few farms raising a large number of hogs but rather each farm raising a few, just enough to consume the food which otherwise would be a total loss. We are endeavoring to work these clubs in connection with corn clubs so that green food could be provided in addition to the waste products of the farm."

Mr. Allen states that demonstrations will be held throughout the county showing home butchering and curing methods. Every farm family should have from 500 to 750 pounds of pork, he states. At the present time he states the dogs in the county are valued higher than the hogs. An effort is also being made to interest boys and girls in calf clubs and also in turkey clubs. At Oakland a bank there has offered to finance school children who desire to buy eggs to hatch, for the purpose of raising better breeders. Attention is also to be given to the raising of certified seed potatoes.

Mr. Allen, accompanied by School Supervisor H. M. Cross, is visiting a number of the schools of the county, lecturing on this subject and exhibiting slides demonstrating the work now being done.

Alleged Stock Rustler Leaves

Sheriff R. M. Bruce from Rushville, Nebraska, arrived here last night and left this morning with Tracy A. Dunham, charged with the crime of cattle rustling. Dunham was arrested near Perdue after a warrant for his arrest was received from Nebraska. He was visiting with his parents, his wife and children being with him at that time. He denies all knowledge of the crime and says he knows nothing whatever of the occurrence. It is claimed that he drove off cattle belonging to a neighbor. He waived extradition.

Small Boy Lost Monday Afternoon

Little Jean Daudel was found yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock having a good time playing on Rose street, near the Roseburg Garage, while his mother was almost frantic over his disappearance. Little Jean, who is about two years old, was playing in front of the Daudel home on Rose street with his wagon, but instead of remaining in front of the house he strayed farther down the street and out of sight of the house. His mother being unable to locate the child, immediately notified the neighbors and a search was started. At the same time Mrs. C. W. Parker, of the Roseburg Garage, noticing the child began a search for the mother. Through the News-Review, who had been notified of the lost boy and the found child, Little Jean was restored to his home.

Improbable Story Beginnings.

Vladamintch noticed the excellent diction of the street car conductors in announcing the stations.

When Shamalback pulled up at the garage he found the prices had not been arbitrarily raised because he was a tourist.

The maid opened the door and Coralia entered with the umbrella she had borrowed the week before.

Before Ann Chovie left for Hollywood to take up film work she openly admitted she was not as good as some of the stars and therefore, never expected to reach stardom.

Our hero had sent a copy of the latest book of his favorite author to the writer himself, asking that it be autographed. The simple request was complied with and the book promptly returned.—New York Sun.

Webster's Lost Opportunity.

Daniel Webster, expounder of the Constitution, great senator and eloquent orator, had set his heart on becoming chief magistrate of the American republic. All efforts to secure the presidential nomination proved abortive. He could have had the nomination for the vice presidency in 1840 by simply indicating his willingness to accept. Disdainfully he brushed the suggestion aside. He considered himself above playing second fiddle with William Henry Harrison. Had he been equipped with more self-abnegation than haughtiness he would have accepted, and had he done so he would have become President April 8, 1841, an even month after the inauguration of Tippecanoe and Tyler, too, as a result of Harrison's death.

Animals Blush.

Poets have for ages regarded the blush as a thing of beauty in the gentle sex; but, after all, it is only a rush of blood to the face, caused by modesty or some other emotion. Animals blush, too, we are told, but through fear. Horses blush in their ears, especially the left one. When a horse is frightened his left ear will be found to be very much swollen. This is also the case with rabbits. Cows and similar animals blush just above the hoof while the dog uses his tail for this purpose. When a dog is frightened his tail hangs limp, as he has lost all control over it. Even insects are said to blush. They do it in their antennae, or feelers.

When Lincoln Practiced Law.

Once in the old courthouse at Metamora, Ill., a prominent citizen of the town sought Lincoln's advice because a neighbors' pigs were in his cornfield. Then no one had fences, and pigs were privileged property. After listening to the man's grievance, Lincoln said: "Well, you will have to civilize both the man and his pigs." Another leading resident of those early days waited until Lincoln was through speaking to inquire what he had better do about a bad debt. Lincoln asked how much money was at stake, and upon finding that the sum was $50 remarked: "Well, just throw it at him. A man can't go through court for $50."

FIT MATE FOR DARING OUTLAW

Maid Marion by No Means the Least Valued Member of Robin Hood's Brave Band.

Belonging to that shadowy band of characters who hover somewhere in the borderland between fact and fiction, Maid Marion and Robin Hood, whimsical, charming, picturesque people of medieval England, deserve a chapter in the history of happy lovers.

Marion was a beautiful, graceful little maid, loving the errant Robin with all her youthful heart. She helped him in his self-appointed task of robbing the rich to aid the poor, and was a thorough little out-of-doors creature. No forest hardships were too much for her. She excelled in archery, was a fleet runner and, in fact, was splendid in every form of sport.

But Marion's family, so the story goes, objected to her union with the country-wide reprobate, and every effort was made to force her to wed a middle-aged man whom she did not love.

However, the jolly band of Robin's followers, by employing their ever-ready wits, succeeded in foiling parental plans. Robin Hood and maid Marion lived together in the woods many happy years, known always as the enemies of the rich and selfish and the friends of the poor and needy.
