SEN. BORAH FORSEES IMPERIALISM IN PACIFIC

Declares U. S. Foreign Policy Is Becoming Tinged With Superior Nation Idea.

By WM. K. HUTCHISON (International News Service Staff Correspondent). WASHINGTON, March 24.—A taint of imperialism has been manifested in the foreign policy of the United States through its constant participation in the affairs of Pacific insular dominions, according to Senator Borah, one of the republican "irreconcilables."

Senator Borah opposed American participation in control of the Isle of Yap and voted for the recent treaty placing it under Japanese mandate because he "wanted the United States to get rid of it." Senator Borah declared that American participation in Pacific insular affairs was in direct contravention to the foreign policies outlined by George Washington.

"I have always thought that when we took the Philippines we repealed the Declaration of Independence," said Borah in discussing the Pacific dominions. "When we enter treaties covering the control of any other islands we disregard the teachings of Washington. We had to have the treaty of Yap, according to its opponents, because it was necessary to insure peace in the Pacific."

"Compelled to Adopt." "Thus, step by step, after we entered upon this course of imperialism, we are compelled to adopt all the methods and customs and practices of imperialists."

Borah was utterly opposed to any sharing of responsibility with the United States with other nations in the control of the Pacific islands. He declared that such "cotennancies" always led to wars.

"You will find that the first controversy that ever took place on earth with reference to property was when Abraham and Lot had a quarrel over their cotennance," Borah added. "I think there has sprung up in this day and age the idea that some superior nation ought to take upon itself the obligation and the duty of administering to all the dependant peoples of the earth. I have observed how the idea takes root, particularly where vast wealth or natural resources are discovered to be in the possession of the dependent people."

"Depriving Them of Wealth." "They are administering to them by depriving them of their natural wealth. You will find that whenever a dependent people are discovered to be in possession of vast natural resources immediately some nation feels a benevolent desire to lift them up to the common level of civilization and give them a better form of government."

Borah declared he was opposed to this doctrine. "I think each people have in a measure got to work out their own salvation," he continued. "I do not think that democracy and free government are things you can bestow upon a people over night. I think our United States can best serve humanity by showing the world a republic—a form of government can be adapted to the growing industrial conditions which now confront the world."
