THE FAIREST LAND

Suddenly my father remembered Eddie and asked about him. For answer I went out and found Eddie. As we entered the room arm in arm, I noted with joy the expression of approval on my father's face. Years of worldly experience had trained my father in the fine art of measuring men. Eddie stood the test.

"How happy I was that I could present to my father Eddie Montforth as the man who had proffered me the honest love and devotion of his life instead of fearing that he would suspect some sinister affair between Theodore Stratton and me.

"Father," I said, "this is Eddie Montforth, who grew up with me in the old Virginia home town."

My father eagerly accepted Eddie's invitation to drive back with us to meet Aunt Virginia. The meeting between them was very affecting. Eddie left the room and I unostentatiously followed. As we got beyond the doorway Eddie turned and gathered me up into his arms.

"All through the world she followed him," he murmured, quoting my little verse.

"Come, Eddie dear, let us go back and tell father and Aunt Virginia," I whispered.

Hand in hand we went back and stood like happy children before my father and Aunt Virginia. With feminine intuition she seemed to sense the situation immediately and threw her arms about my neck. "Oh, Virginia, I am so glad. Eddie is the only man in the world worthy of you."

I had not noticed until then that my father held in his hand a letter, yellow with age and that his eyes were misty with tears.

"Virginia," he said, "your Aunt and I have been talking of our future home out here in the land of sunshine and I have been reading to her something that your mother sent me years ago just before we were married. I have carried it with me in many lands. Read it, my daughter. Your mother's presence is with us."

I took my mother's letter, inscribed in girlish writing, and read:

"Traveler, by the camel's side, You who wander far and wide, Tell me, since you yearly go, Where the sweetest roses blow? Tell me on what foreign strand, Thou hast found the fairest land?"

He replied, "Tis near and far, 'Tis where home and loved ones are, Though a dark and dreary place, Though a desert is its face, Where thy friends and loved ones stand, That I call the fairest land."

Clasping Eddie's hand in his, my father bent and kissed me. Then, looking into Aunt Virginia's face, he said: "At last, I've found the fairest land."

MARGUERITE SNOW FAMOUS ACTRESS OF THE SCREEN

Marguerite Snow, who has the role of Mary Almsie in "Lavender and Old Lace," the Hodgkinson released feature, which is to be presented at the Majestic theatre tonight only, is one of the best known and most popular actresses of the screen.

She was starred by one of the largest producing companies in the United States for more than a year, and is especially well known to film lovers for her work in serials, notably "The Million Dollar Mystery" and "The Eagle's Eye." Other big successes in which she appeared include "Romany," "Second in Command," "The Silent Voice," "The Upstart," "The Woman in Room 13," and many others.

ELINOR GLYN HAS TALENT AND CHARM

Seldom has a personality with more outstanding characteristics been associated with art and letters than Mme. Elinor Glyn, whose original Paramount photoplay, "The Great Moment," has been made with Gloria Swanson as star, as a feature of more than ordinary interest. It will be shown at the Antlers theatre for the last time tonight. It was directed by Sam Wood, scenarized by Monte M. Katterjohn, and is the first picture in which Miss Swanson appears as a star in her own right.

Mme. Glyn is a striking woman, keenly intelligent, highly intellectual and possessed of a magnetic quality that is hard to define. She speaks in epigrams. Hardly a word escapes her that does not indicate an original trend of thought and expression.

Gloria Swanson found her charming to a degree and everyone associated in the production of "The Great Moment" voices similar sentiments regarding the distinguished author of such notable novels as "Three Weeks" and others of equal fame. The example set by Mme. Glyn was an inspiring one and has assuredly resulted in the production of a photodrama that will prove one of the season's most successful offerings. Milton Sills is the leading man in the picture.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN AND OTHERS

BY MRS. ELLSBURY
A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbury Care Roseburg News-Review.

I have never combed my hair the same way that the girls do that I go with because I thought those big gobs they wear over their ears are silly, and I preferred my hair the way I had always worn it. Now they are all bobbing their hair, and I won't do that either, because I don't like it. They are half mad at me because I won't bob my hair like theirs. We are in high school. Do you think I am right to do as I please about it, or do you think I should do as they do?

Ans. I think you are just right, and am glad to know that you have enough courage in your own convictions to stand by them. I don't like hair combed just alike, and all the young girls nowadays seem to want to make themselves after a pattern. It is much better to be just yourself and have a little individuality. Don't be a follower, be a leader, and set your own styles.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am a girl of 17 and I wonder if you would tell me what would be good for a hobby. I go to high school, and go to the usual parties and dances, but outside of high school there is nothing that really interests me. Shouldn't everyone have a hobby? What would you suggest for good one?

Ans. The best thing you can have for a hobby is something that you are especially interested in. Don't have someone else select it for you. If you like to read, make reading your hobby, or dancing, bird study, flower study, dogs, anything that you are interested in. But don't "ride your hobby to death." That tends to make you narrow. You must broaden and have other interests too.

BATTERY TALK IS OF AID TO DRIVER

"Where does the water go to?" is the question of the inquiring visitor to the battery service station. His battery gets thirsty and needs refilling with distilled water frequently. But just why this is true is something most car drivers have never given much thought.

The Willard Storage Battery Company has spent thousands of dollars on booklets and advertisements in their efforts to impress the need of regular battery filling upon the public. They have even gone to the trouble of having a moving picture film made on this subject, which shows how the water evaporates through normal use, which necessitates replenishing regularly. This film will be seen by thousands of people who would not otherwise get the few simple rules of battery care.

The purpose of this film is primarily to help motorists get better service and greater mileage from their batteries and in order to accomplish this result a great deal of pains were taken to make it more vivid. Its direction was placed in the hands of an experienced feature play director and actors were selected who could best meet the requirements of the different roles.

The Auto Electric Station, who represents the Willard Company in Roseburg, are enthusiastic about the newest All-Rubber Willard Battery which contains the well known Thru-Rubber Insulation. This company specializes in free testing and filling service for all makes of batteries. The station is at the corner of Oak and Pine streets.
