ROSEBURG, ONE GON. APRIL 11, 1922.

ONE LESSON FROM THE WAR.

Governments in times of emergency can't foresee all the difficulties they will run up against. But they should learn a lesson from past experiences, and if they ever happen again, should guard against getting into the same troubles. There was one fundamental injustice committed during the recent war. It is no use blaming anyone for it now, and perhaps it could not have been helped. But it was radically wrong, that while the soldiers were fighting in the trenches, at a wage of $1.00 a day, many men who stayed at home were earning $10.00 a day and more in the war work plants. While our own boys were suffering in the trenches for a pittance, able bodied aliens who couldn't be drafted were drawing high pay and enjoying all kinds of luxuries. This contrast was one of the principal reasons leading the soldiers to look for some form of bonus to equalize this inequality of treatment. If ever the United States gets mixed up in another war, which God forbid, the principle should be laid down at the start that those who stay at home should not be permitted to fare so much better financially than those who serve their country. The men of military age should all be drafted. Those who are able bodied should do the fighting and the others should work on munitions or other essentials, and the rate of pay for unmarried men at least, should be the same. If any preference is given it should be given to the fighters. It has been said that public sentiment in 1917 would not have sanctioned such a universal draft to service. But after seeing how the thing worked, and how the cost of living was inflated by the high wages of the war plants, the people in case of another war should easily be able to see that those who go and those who stay at home must be given equal treatment.

REFLECTING THE PEOPLE.

Congress and the state legislatures have to meet a great deal of criticism. Many people speak contemptuously of the present congress, and they have frequently referred to previous assemblies of national lawmakers in similar terms. They may be even more scornful of the legislative bodies in their various states. Now whether or not such fault finding is justified, the people get as good a government as they desire or as they really want. If they are so easily fooled that many weak and incompetent men get elected, the fault comes back to the people for being so easily deceived. Or if people are so selfish that each individual considers only his own personal interest, and thinks not of the good of the country as a whole, they are bound to be represented by one-sided men, who are not capable of laying out broad plans for public good. If people take no pains to vote at all primaries and elections, if they fail to inform themselves thoroughly about the acts of their official representatives and the reasons therefor, so that they can vote intelligently, how can they find fault if things go wrong? It is then up to the knockers and kickers to do less growling about their representatives, but to put in more thought, study and action. No citizen has a right to complain unless he votes at every primary and every election, and does his utmost to discuss public problems with his neighbors and get them interested. The campaigns for the choice of members of congress will soon start, and people who demand better government should cease irresponsible growling, and try to do something constructive in their home communities and election districts.

Senator A. W. Norblad, of Astoria, has announced himself as a candidate for congress to succeed W. H. Hawley, who has been "freezing" on to this office for a long time. It is the general opinion that Senator Norblad is going to receive generous support throughout the district, many people being of the opinion that Congressman Hawley is accomplishing small results, and that he has about wore out his usefulness in the lower house. Coast counties have suffered greatly through lack of co-operation and visible concrete results attained by Mr. Hawley, it is stated, and it is for this reason that the people of this state who have its best interests in mind are anxious for Mr. Norblad's success at the coming primary election. He is thoroughly qualified for this important office and has the faculty of expressing himself clearly on all matters coming before him for disposition—a requisite decidedly lacking in a number of congressmen now serving the people at Washington, D. C.

There is still room for a few more candidates for governor of Oregon. The official ballot is going to be a little shorter than usual, and just as the stock does not cut to waste, the taxpayers might as well be given a good assortment to choose from.

Now if it will only rain a little more perhaps the weather will clear up for the May primaries.

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

It is not very often that this column has an opportunity to do good. But here's our chance—It's just this way: Chief of Police Mathews has started a drive. On automobilists who are in the habit of parking on the main drag hours at a time. And he has developed a unique system. To determine the length of time said autos are parked which consists of marking the tires with a blue pencil. And also a chunk of pavement with the same color. And ye ed. hopes that our readers will take heed. The young kids get a bunch of blue chalk. And Jim up the chief's bookkeeping system.

Several business firms have installed phonographs in their offices. They figure that with music the stenographers will do more or less work. But a lot of stenographers don't do more and couldn't do less.

Girls used to hunt for positions where the hours were short. Now they'll look for jobs where the music is good.

The firm may pay big wages, but the stenographers won't stay unless the boss is a good dancer.

Whenever the manager rings she wants to know whether he wants to dictate or twostep.

He'll ask her to take a letter and she'll tell him she'd rather sit this one out.

Can you imagine a stenographer writing a letter while three or four phonographs are going? She'll start out, "Mr. Smith: Dear Sir, Your letter received I'm a Jazz Baby and in reply would state that I Ain't Nobody's Darling that the carload of Tuck Me to Sleep—"

The guy who received the letter wouldn't know whether he had ordered number of music.

The manager would call the chief clerk and the chief clerk would say he'd be there as soon as he finished his waltz.

The cashier would be in with the president and in the middle of the conference he'd hear the phonograph start playing "Home Again Blues" and say, "Tardon me, but I have this dance with your secretary."

Employees wouldn't care about working in places where they had the newest appliances, they'd want to work where they had the latest records.

No stenographer wants to listen to the boss on the telephone when she can hear an opera star on the phonograph.

Music will take away the effects of work and the clerks and stenographers will start going to the office by invitation only.

It won't be long before they start wearing their evening gowns.

As the automobile season opens we are informed that this year's air for the tires is fully up to the high average established heretofore.

A boat load of Russian ex-generals has arrived in New York, so there will be no water shortage.

SPRING IS HERE.

Lay away the faithful checkers, the chess and dominos.

Our zeal for them is waning as we don our flannel clothes.

Bring out the trusty horseshoes, the peppy, fox croquet.

From morn till night we'll play them all the happy livelong day.

A controversy has been raised over the question whether "the first hundred years are the longest" or "the first hundred years are the hardest." We hazard the opinion that the first hundred years are the most plausible.

THE RUNABOUT.

"Estelle is as pretty as a picture."

"Say a moving picture—she is always on the go."

The idea that an airplane can lick a battleship can never be generally accepted until Tex Rickard has charge of the press-agenting.

NEVER HERE.

"It's a hard world."

"Oh, I don't know. We can always look for happiness, either forward or backward."

JUNGLE STUFF.

"What are you cramming your handkerchief into your mouth for?" "I'm trying to keep from laughing. Did you hear what that fatpup called the spindle-shanked, lashed youth who is escorting her around?"

"No."

"My Tarzan?"

THE CONDITION.

Overheard in Antlers theater: "Do you think you could care for a fellow like me?"

"Oh, yes—if he wasn't too like you."

Elks to Send Queen to Festival

PORTLAND, April 11.—Elk lodges throughout the state have been asked to nominate a queen contender in the contest that has been arranged by the festival commission in charge of Elks' Prosperity Week, May 15 to 21.

The winner in this popularity contest will preside over all the activities of that week beside being presented by Portland lodge with a high class automobile. An automobile also will be given the young woman second in the race and to the third will be tendered her choice of a diamond ring or a trip to San Francisco at the lodge's expense during the Shrine convention. The unsuccessful candidates will be taken care of, too, for they will be brought to Portland and be made attendants upon the reigning queen. Thus they will have a prominent part in the spectacular "Pageant of Peace, Progress and Prosperity" which will be staged each evening at the municipal auditorium.

Boys Are Held For Grand Jury

J. H. Jenks and A. F. McFarland, who were arrested Sunday evening when found in a rooming house with two girls of the Glendale vicinity, were arraigned yesterday evening on a charge of lewd cohabitation. Upon their appearance before Justice of the Peace George Jones they asked for time to consult an attorney and employed Attorney Albert Abraham. Upon his advice they waived preliminary examination and were ordered held for the grand jury, their bail being fixed in the sum of $500. The father of J. H. Jenks was in the city today and arranged to secure his son's release by providing the necessary bail. McFarland, however, will probably remain in jail. The girls are in the custody of the juvenile court.

Yes, $20.⁹⁰ for a Battery with the famous PREST-O-PLATES

It is a top-quality battery, too, no special model. Better than those "just as good" boxes.

A real Prest-O-Lite, built around the famous Prest-O-Plates. The plates of unusual hardness, combined with peculiar porosity. The plates with ready power in winter and great, heat-resisting, non-buckling strength in summer.

The $20.90 price is our trade-in price for a 6-volt battery for popular makes of light cars. We have correspondingly low prices for Prest-O-Lite Batteries for other types of cars.

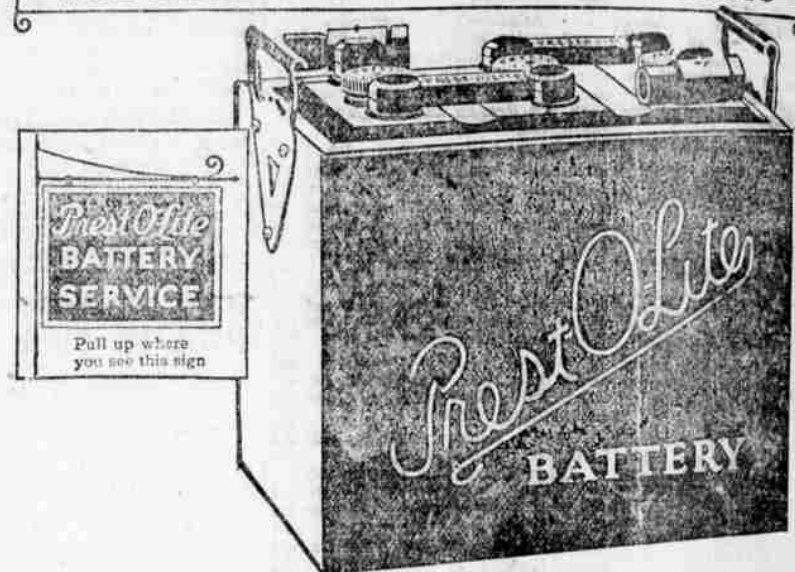

Prest-O-Lite Batteries are specified as original equipment by 87 leading manufacturers, and backed by the regular Prest-O-Lite guaranty, a generous, definite obligation, plus a spirit that says the car owner must be pleased. How is your battery working anyhow? If its pulse is low, if it lacks vitality, come around, no matter what make it is, and let our battery specialists prescribe the right tonic. We never tell you your battery is through until it is. It is our job to prolong the life of any good battery. Drive around today.

Many Irrigation Permits Issued

During the months of January, February and March 74 permits have been issued by State Engineer Percy A. Capper, for the appropriation of water from streams throughout the state of Oregon. The permits cover the irrigation of 10,100 acres of land, the development of 1,803 horsepower, and the use of water for mining, municipal, domestic and various other purposes. The estimated cost of construction work under the permits is approximately $213,000.00.

During this period, four permits to construct reservoirs for the storage of 741 acre feet of water were issued, and the estimated cost of construction work is $15,000.

In Douglas county the following permits have been issued:

To G. Waterworth, of Glendale, covering the appropriation of water from an unnamed stream for irrigation of a five-acre tract.

To S. H. Rockhill, of Riddle, covering the appropriation of water from Cow Creek for irrigation of 20 acres, at an estimated cost of $1,000.

To V. N. Peole, of Days Creek, covering the appropriation of water from Peole Creek for irrigation of 20 acres, and for domestic water supply the cost of construction amounting to approximately $600.

To the Hinesdale Estate company, of Gardiner, Oregon, covering the appropriation of water from an unnamed creek for domestic water supply for two places, at an estimated expenditure of $1000.

To Smith Brothers, of Glendale, covering the appropriation of water from Cow Creek for irrigation of 103 acres. This development will include the construction of one mile of canal or ditch at a cost of approximately $500.
