W. C. T. U. Met at Marsters Home

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. held at the home of Mrs. A. C. Marsters on Wednesday afternoon was a very important and enjoyable occasion. Child welfare was the subject and many new and good points were brought out in the discussion which concluded the meeting. The meeting was opened with a hymn by the Ross Evangelistic company which was followed by devotions led by Rev. Hilton. During the business session a large sum was pledged for the Children's Farm Home near Corvallis. Musical numbers during the afternoon were: Music by the Ross Evangelistic company and a vocal duet by Miss Anna Bryan and Mrs. De Lany. Mrs. Muriel Falles of Rhode Island, who is here visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. W.

Metzger, gave a splendid talk on the work in the Memorial Medical hospital at Pawtucket, Rhode Island. Mrs. Falles is a social worker for that institution.

A lively new membership contest is now running in the W. C. T. U. The two captains for this contest are Mrs. H. G. Wilson and Mrs. Paul Nygren. Already a number of new members have been taken in. At this last meeting, including both old and new members, about 60 were present.

Love's Masquerade

A Dramatic Story of Love and Romance
By Idaho McElone Gibson

PUPPY LOVE

"Before my father married my mother he told her the whole story of his first love; and she, blessed woman that she is, offered to share with him the burden of caring for the child.

"She wanted to bring the child home after they were married but he would not allow that. He said it was quite enough for her to share his income with the ghost of his past and that he could not have her heart-strings torn as they would be by the care of the unfortunate bit of humanity that the child had become. You'll remember it was scintally unsonnd.

"My mother, in telling me all this years afterward when the child was dead, said that she had never seen it but the affair had completely changed my father's life and character. It had stunted his ambition, for the child lived long enough for my father to form habits too strong for him to break in later years. And so, dear Jim, we see the tremendous influence of events upon character. I did not know all this, however, till I myself had been married some years.

"My mother and father determined that their children should have an education and my mother especially took great pride in me because I seemed always to have a liking for good books. I used to read a great deal and often she compelled me to tear myself away from something I would read to join in the childish sports of my boy companions.

"I remember distinctly the first time I ever took any interest in a girl.
"Up until that day girls had seemed to me absolutely unobscure. They could not play ball; they yelled and shuddered at the harmless little words we carried about in tin cans for bait. They turned up their noses if you showed up at school with dirty hands and otherwise made themselves obnoxious.

"One day when I was about 12 a little girl of 9 was called up and scolded roundly by the teacher before the whole class. I felt it was not fair as I knew that one of the boys was more to blame than she. He had been annoying her all the morning—of course I realize now it was the lordly way of the male to attract the attention of the female—and finally when he started throwing paper wads at her she had returned the compliment and the teacher caught her. I could not help but admire her courage in taking her punishment and not telling on the boy. It was the first time I realized that girls had any courage and I felt that the boy was a yellow dog for not taking the blame upon himself. The whole schoolroom was hushed. The girl looked about like a small hunted animal brought to bay and suddenly her eyes looked straight into mine. I will never forget that thrill. The blood rushed to my heart and from my heart it seemed to pour out all over my body. For the first time I seemed to know that that little girl was a lovely and precious thing. I wanted to put my arms about her and comfort her and I grew happy because through her tears she smiled her gratitude to me. Perhaps you will remember, Jim, that after school she asked you to bring me to her party. I accepted with alacrity and thoroughly disgusted with the boys I had promised to play ball with. I also surprised my mother beyond measure by voluntarily taking a bath before I asked permission to wear my Sunday clothes to the party that Saturday afternoon. Sometimes, Jim, one finds certain memories of childhood growing brighter as the years pass.

"I believe that even after all these years I can account for every moment of that afternoon.

"The girl's name, as you will remember, was Alice. In spite of her mother's commands she seemed quite determined to play with me as I was happy to be with her. I had not yet gotten used to girls. I was still averse to paying any attention to the others of her sex. Alice seemed to me to be something unique and set apart—something just for me.

"I remember how I was torn between two great inclinations.

"I wanted to go out on the lawn and play some childish game that the others were playing, because in doing so I would get a chance to take hold of Alice's hand.

"But I was also afraid that if I did some other boy would claim her. I wanted her to myself—already that masculine idea of possession obsessed me although I was too young to really define it.

"I wanted her to be near me and I didn't want anyone else around. That was as far as I then got in my analysis of the situation, and I have found in the years that have passed since that that has been as far as I was usually gotten in defining my position in regard to the world at large, when I became interested in any woman."

ADVICE TO LOVELORN AND OTHERS

—BY MRS. ELLSBERY

A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbery Care Roseburg News-Review.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbery: I am just an average husband, and make an average income, and am struggling to get ahead. My wife and I usually get along as well as most couples. About six months ago, my wife met another lady, a newcomer here, and they started going together. This other lady spends every cent her husband makes just putting up a show. She buys clothes all the time and is always driving their car around the streets, and entertaining and things like that. My wife has been going around with her a lot, and now for the past month she has been nagging me for new clothes, and wants me to refurbish the house. If I do this it will take everything I have saved and more too, and I won't do it, and I told her so. She is never home to cook my meals any more, and I have come to the point where I don't know what to do. I suppose the next thing that will happen will be that this woman will be leading her to step out with other men, as she does. What shall I do about it? Is there anything you can do in a case like that?

PERI-WINKLE.

Ans. Why not have a serious talk with her, before the break between you goes any further. These misunderstandings are the most dangerous things in the world if they are allowed to go too far. Have a talk with her, and explain that you are trying to save and get ahead, and that she will get all these things as you can afford them. Show her that her part is being a partner, and being contented, not nagging you for things you cannot wisely buy. Don't think that this trouble is unique with you. Many young married couples have passed that same dangerous point, and it is up to you and your wife whether you will pass it successfully or not.

Movies

A MOTION PICTURE THAT WILL STRIKE HOME

A motion picture that will strike home to many young American married couples is "Dangerous Curve Ahead," a Goldwyn feature, written by Rupert Hughes, which comes to the Majestic theatre for the last time tonight.

The story of the play concerns the early married life of a small town girl who was the belle of her community before her marriage to an easy going, domestically inclined husband, inwardly shading under the restraints imposed by the cares of her home, and the rearing of her two children, she sees the first opportunity to taste again of the butterfly life in society, while her husband is away on business.

How she avails the "dangerous curve," and is brought to her senses by the illness of her little child, eagerly recounting the yoke of domesticity, is dramatically portrayed.

THEIR HOBBIES IN FOOD

Motion picture stars all have hobbies. When they enter the dining room here's what they prefer.

A dinner of Chinese food for Gloria Swanson.

Romance with Jim is the finest ever, says Wallace Reid.

A spaghetti dish of spaghetti for Rudolph Valentino.

A juicy beefsteak pleases Thomas

Moihan.

Corn flakes and cream strikes Betty Compson just right.

The dish of the stars—corn beef and cabbage—in Theodore Robert's shoes.

Spaghetti wins first place in Babe Daniloff's lists.

For Rayfield Walter Heals would walk a mile.

Fried chicken, Maryland style, just suits Julia Faye.

South Carolina rice and gravy for Lois Wilson.

Lambster Newburg brings joy to Agnes Ayres.

Mince pie catches Lila Lee's eye.

Lovely Luncheon at Kohlhaagen Home

Mrs. George Kohlhaagen and Miss Frankie Howell were hostesses today at a lovely luncheon given at the Kohlhaagen home on South Jackson street. Two large tables were attractively decorated with artistic place cards and favors and centered with bouquets of pansies and flowering peach blossoms were used throughout the rooms and the spirit of springtime was everywhere in evidence. The guest list included 24 ladies. The afternoon was spent with music and social conversation.

WIFE DOING GOOD WORK.

"I have been bad off with stomach and liver trouble and bloat for many years. No doctors or medicine helped me. On the advice of my druggist, I bought a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and I don't want to miss a single dose. It has given me more benefit than all the medicine I have ever taken. I feel I am doing good to recommend it to others." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. For sale at all druggists.
