REEDSPORT IS BUSY

J. H. Austin, of Reedsport, was in Roseburg today on his way to Medford. Mr. Austin reports that Reedsport is very busy, that all of the mills are working full shifts, giving employment to over 700 men. The Umpqua harbor has been definitely adopted as a government project, the people in that vicinity have been given in understand, Mr. Austin says, and future appropriations will include that harbor. The whole county should get behind the movement to improve the Umpqua harbor, he states, for it is of much benefit to the entire county. The people of the lower river greatly appreciate the spirit of cooperation which has already been shown.

Carl Reymers Receives Fall

It was reported here today that Carl Reymers, who is employed with the Southern Pacific company, was quite seriously injured in Eugene yesterday when he fell from the top of a box car lighting on his back on a rail of the truck. Details of the accident have not yet been received here but it is expected that Mr. Reymers will be brought to this city today.

PRIZE FOR BEST NAME.

Because of the general reorganization of plant, change in ownership, employees and management of the cleaning and pressing establishment formerly known as the OWL CLEANERS, we wish to re-name the shop; a substantial prize of $10 worth of cleaning and pressing for the best name that is suitable for a cleaning and pressing shop. No rules or restrictions except that we reserve the right NOT to use any name that in our judgment is not suitable, but the prize will be given for the best name submitted even though we do not use that particular one. Someone will win the $10 worth of service, so use your originality. The contest is open to everyone, regardless of age, size or complexion, but closes Wednesday evening at 6 p. m. Bring the name in and have it registered.

SCIENTIST POINTS OUT HOW THE RACE MAY SINK TO THE LEVEL OF LOWER SAVAGES.

"Some millions of years from now an entirely new and more highly organized animal may spring from some ancestral stock now relatively obscure and rise, at first slowly and then more rapidly, to even greater heights of achievement than anything which lies within the capacity of the human species."

After tracing the geologic evolution of the earth so far as man knows it, Dr. Elliot Blackwelder of Harvard university, at the meeting of the geological societies of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in Toronto, Canada, in these words suggested the possibility of a future surer of man's pre-eminent place on earth.

"As our modern civilization becomes more and more specialized and diversified, our relations to our environment become more and more complex and our adjustments more delicate," Doctor Blackwelder said.

"Eventually, after all the latest possibilities for advancement possessed by the human species have been exhausted, the race may conceivably sink back to the general level of the lower savages, which are but little above the other mammals."—Kansas City Star.

When Ingenuity Triumphed.

Caught short on time with a New York opening date booked, and facing a huge loss for each day's delay, a moving-picture producer made arrangements to edit, title, and cut the play en route between Los Angeles and the eastern metropolis recently. With a special car equipped as a laboratory and attached to a limited train, the work was found entirely practical even while speeding eastward at a mile a minute or more. Twenty-eight heavy steel containers carried the original film, which remained in the "can" all the time it was not actually in use. Editors and cutters worked continuously, stopping only for meals and for a few hours' sleep at night, and on these occasions every setup of film was returned to its proper container. The work was entirely successful; and by the time the train arrived in New York the film was finished and ready for delivery.
