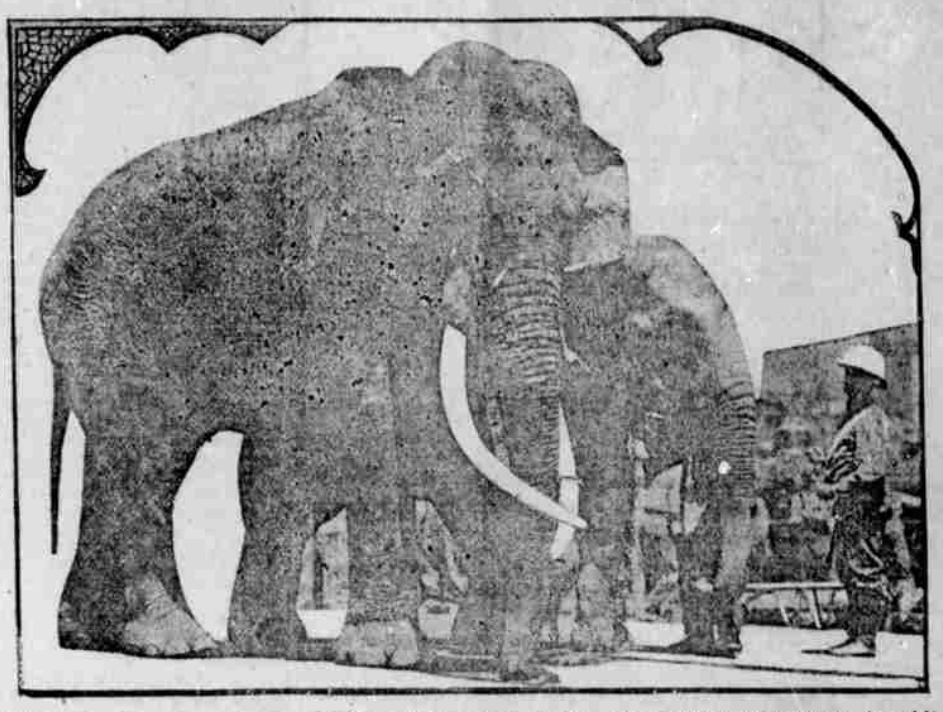
AL G. BARNES MAKES GOOD HIS BOYISH BOAST AT JUMBO'S BIER



Thirty-seven years ago a farmer lad stood in the railway yards at St. Thomas, Ontario, and gazed at the huge, huddled hulk of Jumbo dead—killed by a Grand Trunk railway switch engine.

The lad was Al G. Barnes, known throughout that part of the province as "the boy horse trainer," a lad whose father had a standing forfeit of $100 posted for anyone that could produce a balky equine that young Al G. could not drive off in ten minutes.

Gazing on the dead Barnum elephant, young Barnes declared, "Some day I'll have a bigger circus than this one and I'll have a bigger elephant than Jumbo!" By-standers laughed, but there were some who gave a second thought to the lad's boast, for they had a lively respector his way with animals.

The next year the boy took the road with a pug dog and a greyhound. His rise to the ownership and operation of the world's largest wild animal circus is the greatest individual achievement in white top history. And this year, Al G. Barnes has made good—more than made good—his boyish boast by presenting to the American public Tusko, the largest elephant in the world, a foot taller than Jumbo, and a ton and half heavier—an elephant with tusks six feet long, a veritable mammoth. When the Al G. Barnes wild animal circus comes to Roseburg Thursday, May 4th, be sure and see Tusko. He is an education in himself. The world will never see his like again.
