ROSEBURG, ORE. MON., MAY 6, 1922.

GERMANY AND RUSSIA ALLIED.

The world was brought up against a new combination of forces when it was announced at the Genoa conference that Russia and Germany had made an alliance for mutual benefit. The government that has gained control of Russia and holds the same by force, abandons the former allies of that people, and seeks the friendship of the former enemy of the democratic countries. The world will ponder a good while as to what this means. Russia has today the worst government in the world. But that government has a certain power because it is in possession of the world's richest natural resources. It can trade and bargain with the countries whose resources are more nearly exhausted. When a dreamy and impractical man inherits a fortune of millions, he has for a time a position in the business world that he could never gain by his own abilities. The Russian soviet government can demand favors from other powers that it could never have been in a position to expect, if it had not come into possession of such lavish natural wealth. America and the powers of western Europe have now to decide whether it is better to let Germany and Russia go ahead and cement this alliance, and permit Germany to go in and reap the wealth of Russia, or whether it is more desirable to swallow the repugnance which one feels for the bloody soviet butchers, and take the risk of dealing with the unscrupulous gang of people now in power. The people who are asked to sink a lot of money in developing resources of that country, will probably be rather slow about it. They realize that any property they establish there may later be confiscated by these communists, who do not at heart believe in private ownership. Probably American producers will take their part in developing this backward land, but as long as the present gang is in control, they will do well to show extreme caution.

THE VALUE OF MIXED FARMING.

Where the farmer judiciously follows a good line of mixed farming he is pretty sure to make a profit out of at least one line, and if, on the other hand, he confines himself to one special line of production there is danger of taking it up just at the time when there is a depression in the very product he is striving to produce, remarks the Western Farmer. Diversified farming should be carried on in such a way as to make the farm operations blend, and where there is a failure in one particular crop or division of livestock work, there will be some crop produced or branch of livestock to come to the rescue.

There is danger, however, of getting too many irons in the fire. This should be avoided. Aim to develop those lines in farming where experience has taught that there is greater possibility of gain than loss. Branch out into new fields gradually, but keep ever on the alert for new ideas. New lines of work should be introduced into the farm plans slowly—but if done with care it may be valuable in the studying of new crops, different breeds of livestock, etc.

Diversified farming is coming to the front rapidly everywhere, due to the operation of small farms. The idea of intensive farming is spreading rapidly. The era of large farms is passing and the present success of our farmers, taken as a whole, in most sections of the country, comes from the carrying on of mixed farming along up-to-date lines and putting brains as well as brawn into the work.

The only way to put a republican governor over at the primary election against Ben Olcott is to center all forces on one man. If the republicans of the state are wise they will assemble their forces at once and pick out the winner. This can be done by striking off five candidates, the majority of whom stand no chance whatever of being nominated, and it would be a mighty good example to set at the forthcoming primary election and a good policy to follow out in future elections. The governorship race is a rare sample of our present primary method of getting "good" men in office. Matters are so badly "bawled up" that no one is able to foretell the results—which will probably be disastrous at the November election unless a concerted effort is made to stick to one man at the primary election. The race as it stands today is between Olcott, Hall and Patterson, according to state political prognosticators. Very little enthusiasm has been created by the other three candidates, and it is growing less daily. Then why not center all strength on either Mr. Hall or Mr. Patterson? If republicans want to defeat Olcott, and this seems the popular desire, there is no better or surer way than to throw their undivided support to either one of his two close opponents. A division of the republican vote will nominate Olcott without question.

Cleanup day is scheduled for many cities throughout the state during the early part of the present month. Roseburg will "come to it" pretty soon.

Loganberries to Be Short This Year

Loganberry production this year will probably be very materially reduced from that of last year owing to winter injury. The vines are in a very poor condition to produce a crop this year, and it is thought by growers that some yards will be a total loss. Die-back caused from the drought of last summer and the cold winter has killed the vines back 8 and 10 feet in many of the best yards which will seriously cripple the production. The tip ends of the canes are the producing parts of the plant and with these damaged materially, it is believed that the output will be greatly slackened. The Oregon Growers Cooperative association cared for over 17,500,000 pounds of logans this year and it was estimated earlier in the season that this would be greatly increased, but present indications lead to the belief that even with the increased bearing acreage, the crop will be much less this season. Haying has not been very extensive and prices to the growers, it is thought, will be better than 5 cents per pound.

NOTICE TO REBEKAHS.

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

Chawncie Olcott
 Will warble in our village
 Tonight in his show,
 "Ragged Robin"
 And we suppose he'll sing
 "Mother Machree"
 For an encore.

THE EYES HAVE IT.

The Rev. Josiah Tipton did not get out much in a social way. Occasionally one of his parishioners invited him to the house for a square meal, and on the evenings when the Ladies Aid Society gave an oyster supper in the church basement, he was generally awarded the oyster at the end of the evening. Aside from that he dined out seldom.

One memorable evening, however, he was one of the guests at a fashionable banquet and was invited to sit at the speakers' table. As an added distinction he was asked to say grace. Across from the Rev. Josiah Tipton sat a stunning woman in a décolleté gown of extreme cut. The Rev. Tipton was unaccustomed to such opportunities.

Everybody's soup got cold while the Rev. Tipton said grace.

CHARGE OF THE SKIRT BRIGADE.

Legs to the right of us,
 Legs to the left of us,
 Legs in front of us—
 How they display them;
 On they go trippingly,
 Daintily and skipingly,
 Frost that bites nippingly—
 Does not dismay them.

Straight legs and bandy ones,
 Bum legs and dandy ones,
 Awkward and handy ones,
 Flirt with the breezes;
 Round legs and flatter ones,
 Thin legs and fatter ones,
 Especially the latter ones—
 Showing their knees.

Knock-kneed and bony ones,
 Real legs and phony ones,
 Silk-covered tony ones—
 Second to none;
 Straight and distorted ones,
 Mats and ill sorted ones,
 Home and imported ones—
 Lord, ain't it fun!

Life is one continuous hurdle race to the people who make it a habit to jump at conclusions.

RESENTMENT.

 But here is something slicker;
 The man who goes after what he wants
 Gets it a darn sight quicker.

First Methodist Church, on South Main street at Lane, William Steward Gordon, Pastor.—The program arranged for Sunday will be one of the most attractive of the entire year. It will be celebrated as the anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society, of which Mrs. A. C. Marsters is president. The pastor's topic at 11 o'clock will be, "Modern Triumphs of Christianity," some concrete examples of what the gospel is really accomplishing in many lands. Cold facts are what count, not mere opinions. Mrs. M. C. VanLeyven will give an interesting short story, and there will be a special number by the choir. The Standard Bearers, a young ladies' missionary society, will also sing. In the evening at 8 there will be a realistic playlet which illustrates practical work in an Indian mission. Those taking part are Mrs. Dale Kelley, Mrs. J. B. Bailey, Miss Vivian Orcutt, Miss Carmen Atterbury and Miss Ruth Dowker. The unique Indian costume will be a feature and there will also be special music. There will be a short sermon on "Why We Shall Know Each Other in Heaven." This subject is being given unusual recognition and attention of late both by pulpit and press. Mr. Gordon is a firm believer in future recognition, and had a large audience in Portland last year when he spoke on the topic. If duty does not call you elsewhere, you will want to hear it. The Sunday school will meet as usual at 9:45; the Junior League at 2, and the Epworth League at 7. Notice the change in time of the evening services, but the mid-week service will continue at the usual hour, Wednesday at 7:30.

Chauncey Olcott at the Antlers Theatre Tonight

Chauncey Olcott, America's foremost exponent of Irish romantic roles, will appear at the Antlers tonight in his greatest play, "Ragged Robin."
 Mr. Keene Abbot, dramatic editor of the Omaha World-Herald has this to say of Mr. Olcott and his current offering: "With its elements of fantasy and Celtic folk lore, 'Ragged Robin' is unquestionably the best play in which the actor-singer, Chauncey Olcott, has appeared. His lyric tenor voice retains its sweetness. It is a pleasure to hear once again the remarkable clarity of his enunciation, a quality that has always characterized his singing of ballads."
 "The play is elaborated with incidental music. The harp and violin are an asset of conspicuous excellence in the action of the comedy."
 "After the second act the enthusiasm of the audience persuaded Mr. Olcott to sing two old favorites: 'My Wild Irish Rose' and 'Mother Machree.'"
