

Advice to Lovelorn and Others

BY MRS. ELLSBURY

A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address Your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbury, Care Roseburg News-Review.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I have been with a boy of 20 for the past six months, and as it is beginning to be serious, I thought I would write and ask you what to do about it. I tried to go with him first just for fun of it, and more as a joke than anything else. But he is crazy about me, and I am beginning to like him enough to think of accepting him if he proposes to me. Now this is what the matter. I am nearly 22 years old, and I feel that a boy of twenty is certainly too young for me to think of marrying. Would you advise me to quit going with him?

MARY ELLEN.

Ans. The difference in your ages is really nothing at all. If he is able to support you, and you love him, there is no reason why you should not marry.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: As you answered one question for me, I am going to try again. Can you answer this right away, as I am leaving town and want to decide a bet. Who were the champion batters of 1921? SPORT.

Ans. Hornsby of St. Louis National A. League, .358, and Heilmann of Detroit Americans, .390.

After Pirate Lafitte's Chest of Gold. Two energetic young men have established a camp on the lower part of Padre Island in the Gulf of Mexico, the Texas shores, in an effort to locate the gold-laden chests of the pirate Lafitte who, according to the legends of the country, frequented those parts and it is supposed that one of the chests which he accumulated must be buried in the sands of that shore. The men say they are there to stay and they have brought some machinery with which the work will be facilitated. It is said that they have uncovered some interesting material which leads them to believe that they are on the right track.

Oh, Boy!

A filing clerk in a downtown department store, one of those light jazz models whose mind is always out toddling at the last dance of the night before, or the next one to come.

One day she went to the manager's desk with a salesman's report on a city customer. The report gave the customer's name and bore the notation that he was "hopelessly ill."

"Mr. Grant," she said indignantly, "I have looked through all the directories and I can't find any city like hopelessly in Illinois."—Los Angeles Times.

Truck Tent Stakes Driven by Power. The automobile truck has largely superseded the horse as a means of transportation for the itinerant circus. It has also relegated the usefulness of the former sledge-swinging skill of the canvasman.

Now the stakes for the tents are not driven by hand, but by a truck pulled especially for that purpose. It carries the stakes and the tent poles and is equipped with a miniature motor, operated by a belt from the truck's engine. All the canvasmen have to do is to hold the stakes under the hammer of the driver until they are started into the ground.—Exchange.

WIDE USE OF CABBAGE

Experts of Cornell College of Agriculture Estimate Humble Vegetable's Value as Food.

Lovers of cabbage will welcome the pronouncement of the experts at Cornell's College of Agriculture, acclaiming the merits of this succulent vegetable. Cabbage is a subject the discussion of which is not considered good social usage. For some inscrutable reason to acknowledge a fondness for it does not raise one in the estimation of professing epicures, writes H. Young in the Providence Journal.

Cabbage is rich in iron and other mineral salts, it contains a moderate amount of growth-promoting substance and the American people should eat more of it than is their habit, according to the Cornell propagandists. Have we not heard, too, that it contains these precious, if as yet unidentified elements called vitamins? This cabbage report suggests that Americans do not cook it properly, as a rule, and that may explain why appreciation of it is not more general. It should be "plunged into boiling salted water and left there for 20 minutes, no longer, uncovered"—instead of being confined to a tightly-covered receptacle for an indefinite period.

The practice of covering the dish has grown up because of a conventional disinclination to having the house filled with the perfume of boiling cabbage. But to a hungry cabbage lover this fragrance is one of the vegetable's charms. It exercises, as one may say, an agreeable psychological influence. There are, of course, divers ways of serving cabbage, all of them good. And since our tastes are often ruled by the judgment of authority, it may be believed that a widening circle of confiding cabbage eaters will be the consequence of Cornell's approving verdict.

SHORTAGE IN PANTS SUPPLY

Evidently Pioneers' Wardrobes Were, at Least to a Certain Extent, Unpleasantly Limited.

In the early days of central Illinois, a period when the settlers drove their hog, to market at Chicago, breaking a path in winter by means of a yoke of oxen and a heavy log, a certain young man was in the habit of walking eight miles to see his best girl. On the occasion of one visit a heavy snowstorm swept the prairie, and the young man found it necessary to remain until morning. He slept in an "outside" room, the space between the logs being unfilled. The old-fashioned feather bed with wool blankets protected him from the zero weather.

It so happened that the young man wore the style at that date, buckskin pants. Thoughtlessly on retiring he laid his pants on top of the bedclothes. A coyote or wolf crawled through the cracks between the logs in the night and carried his pants away. The theft was revealed when the young man was called for breakfast, and to cap the climax, not an extra pair of pants was to be had. The young man was forced to stay in bed and send a boy eight miles to his home for pants. There was only one pair in his family, those worn by his father. Thus the father had to go to bed and send the boy these pants in order that the latter could get back home.—Indianapolis News.

Altogether Too Suggestive. Journeying along the border a few weeks ago, Tom Mix, a motion-picture actor, drove his automobile across the river into Juarez for a glass of beer, innocently parked in a space where parking was prohibited and walked off. He had made about two blocks when he was clapped on the back by a breathless Mexican policeman.

"You air under arrest for putting ze automobile where he do not belong. Come with me. Why you not stop when I call you?" panted the gentleman.

"Sir, senior, I call you twenty times. hees—like dees: Sussussus! Zat is ze way we call ze attention of a hombre in Mexico."

"Well," said Mix, "all I've got to say is that's a rotten way to call an actor."

Seasoned Autoist.

Virginia is three and one-half years old. She calls herself "Buddy." Her father owns an automobile. The other day while the family was enjoying a ride, traveling at a rapid speed, the auto struck a large bump. So violent was the jolt that it seemed as if every spring would break. As the car rolled on Buddy, seated beside her father, looked up at him with large, round blue eyes and said: "Daddy, why don't you say dammitheell?"—Indianapolis News.

Handy Bible for Blind.

The American Bible society has announced it is to bring out a "small handy volume" of Scripture selections for the blind.

The pages are 7 by 13 inches, and the volume will weigh about a pound. A complete Bible prepared in the embossed system used for the blind weighs about 150 pounds and comes in from 11 to 55 volumes.

Adopt United States System.

The American idea of public health nursing has been formally adopted by the city council of Warsaw, Poland. A corps of nurses has been organized to work with the school doctors examining children and investigating health conditions in homes. Fifty thousand children of local grammar schools make the first group to come under this new system.

REPUBLICANS!

Shall Oregon continue to hold the pre-eminence that is now hers?

Shall she forge ahead as a leader in the Republican party?

Answer "Yes"—Vote X13 for Ralph E. Williams for Republican National Committeeman

In the presidential election of 1916 when there was dissension and division everywhere Oregon was the only state west of the Missouri river to go Republican. Harmony!

Progressives and Republicans united in giving credit for this remarkable achievement to Ralph E. Williams, national committeeman since 1908.

In recognition of this and other services Ralph Williams was elected vice-chairman, the second highest honor within the power of the Republican National Committee to bestow. It is a position of influence to be reached only by years of faithful and intelligent service.

Ralph Williams is the first committeeman representative from any western state to be elected to the vice-chairmanship.

Ralph Williams is a veteran of the national organization. He stands at the head with the leaders. A new man would, of custom and necessity stand at the foot with the followers.

Republican leaders, in Congress and out, are Ralph Williams' friends. This friendship means much to Oregon and the Northwest. Without ostentation Ralph Williams enlists the aid of these leaders for the things the Northwest needs from the national government.

How It Happens.

Five villains, with graves upon their wrists, sat in durance vile.

"It is strange," said he, "that you five stalwart scoundrels, after robbing the bank and maltreating all persons who sought to stay you, should have allowed yourselves to be knocked down and hog-tied by a lone cripple equipped with naught but a crabtree cudgel."

"Alas, sir," replied the most low-browed of the lot. "Our lack of forethought was our undoing. We expected to encounter only the usual heavily armed guard, which could not run and capture a lost gosling. Instead, we met this lame lad with a club, who meant business and had no desire to show off. Of course, we did not know how to comport ourselves."—Kansas City Star.

Refused to Award Prize.

Eighty-three years ago the city of Frankfurt-am-Main, birthplace of Goethe and home of Germany's greatest bankers, established a Mozart prize to be awarded annually for the best musical composition along any line that the competitors might feel disposed to follow. Forty-five manuscripts were submitted in 1921, but for the first time in the history of the prize, worth 5,000 marks, no award was made, the reason being inferior quality of all the works sent in. One of the competitors was Engelbert Humperdinck.—New York Evening Post.

Pope's White Mule.

The coronation of Pius XI, which took place in Rome, was the last solemnity completing the election of a new pope. Prior to the loss of temporal power, in 1870, however, the papal coronation was always preceded by the cavalcade, or procession in state, with which the new pope rode forth to take formal possession of the famous Lateran church. On this occasion only the holy father would be seen riding a white mule. Pius VIII first dropped the custom in 1820, by choosing to drive in a coach drawn by six horses, his white mule being led behind.

Destructive Landslide.

The picturesque island of Mount Saint Michel (Normandy) appears to be jeopardized as the result of a landslide which has occurred there. The main street of the island has given way, leaving a gap 25 feet wide by 20 feet long. Engineers have been summoned to carry out an examination of the foundations of the beautiful old abbey which crowns the rock, as it is feared that the landslide may extend to the vaults on which the abbey stands.

PICTURE HUNG BY "SPOOKS"

Rejected Portrait Appears Mysteriously on Walls of Salon in Big New York Hotel.

A phenomenon, as startling and mysterious to the officers and directors of the Society of Independent Artists as were the recent ghostly manifestations in Antiquish to the MacDonalds and Dr. Walter Franklin Prince, was revealed at the artists' exhibition on the top floor of the Waldorf.

The New York spirit nulled a rejected drawing to a wall, and above it hammered four tacks in a card which told that the picture was the work of Mrs. Emma Mabel Field of Chicago, and was called "Impressionistic Personality Portrait of Miss Edith Bennett."

"Spooks or no spooks," said A. S. Baylison, a director and secretary of the society, "that picture has got to come down. No one gave Mrs. Field permission to have it exhibited, and our walls aren't open for spooks." A special delivery letter from the artist to Mr. Baylison, arrived a few days later.

"I am starting for home now," her letter says, "and will be under way before this letter is mailed. And I beg to inform you that I have left the matter entirely in the hands of my guide, who has assured me that my poor little picture will be exhibited there whether you wish it or not."—New York Times.

GLENDALE NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Greninger started this morning to Cottage Grove for a visit with relatives at that place. This estimable couple are "sunshine makers" wherever they go and our best wishes for long life and happiness is our living wish for them.

Church night at Olivet is drawing large crowds of young people and are very interesting and instructive. S. J. Jones of Roseburg is calling on Glendale friends today. Mr. Jones is not a candidate and we do not think he is looking for moonshiners. If he were he would get some of them.

D. S. Beals who is a candidate for representative is greeting Glendale voters today.

C. O. Garrett who is a candidate for county commissioner is attending to his property interests and all other interests of Olivet church in which he is an elder and also teacher of the Bible class. He is one of our leading citizens.

Mrs. Viola Nail has purchased the small farm of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gillons, north of our city. It joins the home that the Nails have owned for many years. Mrs. Nail expects to establish a modern dairy on her new possession.

We are pleased to note the success of our efficient juvenile officers and our sheriff in catching crooks. They each scored a success. Nobody has found them around our city so far. Perhaps Chief of Police Branham has scared them all out.

Our city officials are all very carefully filling their respective offices so we opine that a wireless code must be in use that reaches the law breakers ahead of our officers.

I wish to endorse Bess A. Clough as a candidate for representative. She has excellent opportunities in acquiring an education. She has traveled extensively. She spent two years in the Orient. While her brother was a soldier in the world war she came home to supervise their large farm and their splendid prime orchards. She is a splendid housekeeper, a good cook and delights to dispense the generous hospitality of her parents in their mansion. She actively engages in the line of hostess of her parents and seems to enjoy taking their guests into their spacious parlors and playing choice music on the piano. She has many flowers and plants that claim her attention. She has diligently studied politics and is an authority on all matters that will serve the best interests of our country, our state and our nation. She will be true to the statement she makes in her platform. A vote for Bess A. Clough will mean economy in the administration of our state affairs. I have known her all her life and shall feel that I am rendering our own beloved Oregon and our native land a service in voting for her. XX. u esthefupomarand qab:eoAsandn 1
