Here is another perfect baby garment—the idea of a famous baby specialist. When days and nights are cold the soft, warm knit Gertrude just the protection needed, and is very absorbent. ## Love's Masquerade

A Dramatic Story of Love and Romance
By Idaho McPherson Gibson

ON DANGEROUS PATHS

"It was this characteristic of Harry," continued Margaret's letter, "that I loved best of all. He made me feel always that I had a perfect right to any money that he had and that he felt the same freedom with mine. It was a camaraderie that burned up all hypocritical conventions and made us one in thought to a greater degree than any other thing."

"I hate men, Dr. George, who have so intensely selfish and self-satisfied, as though money was the greatest thing in the world and their money even a little better than any other man's. Consequently, when they bestow it on anyone they expect one to be proportionately grateful."

"I never had any interest in the purely money-making kind of a man, and one of Harry's greatest charms for me was his contempt for money merely as money."

"Although he had always been poor, and was still having a hard time to make both ends meet, he never worried over finances in the least."

"I used to devise ways and means to give him things. Oh, what a joy it was to give him things. This, I suppose, was the result of the maternal feeling I had for him. Isn't that why a woman's love is always sweeter and purer than a man's, Dr. George?"

"When a woman loves she wants to give. When a man loves he insists upon taking. We women cannot get away from the care that we, as mothers of the race, must give to everything we love."

"Harry was as pleased as a boy with the gifts I gave him, and our shopping expeditions, where we wandered through the shops and stores, gazing alternately at the crowds in the street and the beautiful things behind the window panes, were among our most enjoyable times."

"Particularly was he happy when he could find something that he thought I wanted, something that he was able to buy, for, as I told you before, he rarely had any money."

"His pet name for me was 'Extravagant Lady,' and the name that seemed to fit him best was 'Inconvenientest.' You see I named him that because of all the men who have said they loved me, he was the most inconvenient because he had interested me most. He kept me from turning my attention to my work. He used to keep me always waiting, for he had no more sense of time than he had of money. He was married and he was poor, although his salary was large. He was never very well and most of the time we were in different cities.

"How he loved that foolish little title."

"On one of our shopping expeditions he bought for me a pair of little gold lingerie pins and had the word 'Inconvenientest' engraved upon them."

"Of course, I gave him all the usual things a woman gives a man, but I think the thing that gave us both the most pleasure was the purchase of a Panama hat, which was as fine as a piece of exquisite tapestry."

"He came over to my apartment on the morning train one day, and said, 'Let's go shopping. I have to buy a hat and I hate to buy hats. I never am quite sure whether they are becoming or not.'"

"Let me buy you a hat, 'Inconvenientest.' I'd love to feel that your hand had to touch the hat I had given you when you raised it to some other woman."

"All right, come along, if a little thing like that will make you happy."

"Slowly we sauntered down the avenue. It was late spring and the joy of regeneration was in the air."

"In the hat store Harry tried on numberless straw hats. None of them pleased either him or me. At last I found a beautiful Panama which had the shape of a fedora that was extremely becoming to him. He was pleased with it as a child. He studied himself from every angle, and I stood back and enjoyed the episode as I would had I given a toy to a precocious boy."

"But when the salesman named the price, without a word, Harry took off the hat and laid it on the counter."

"What is the matter?" I asked innocently.

"That is much too extravagant for even 'my extravagant lady' and he insisted that I should not buy it for him."

"At last I overcame his scruples by telling him that he could have it reblocked year after year and he confided to me that he had never paid over four dollars for a straw hat in his life."

"It is a silly little episode, isn't it, Doctor George, but I am telling it to you to show you that love really makes their Heaven out of the same foolish little things that children make their playtime joys."

"I wonder if all lovers are as happy as we were. We never had a misunderstanding. There never was a time when I was not able to analyze his motives—and these motives were not always the best—for his every act. He was just a big irresponsible boy and I was as happy in loving him as he was in being loved."

"Pop" Gates Removed from Board

SALEM, May 30.—C. E. Gates, of Medford, was last night notified by Governor Olcott of his removal as a member of the state fair board, effective June 1. The removal, the governor explains in a letter to Gates, is made for the "good of the service."

Farther than this Governor Olcott refused to comment on his action in removing Gates, who was appointed to the fair board shortly before the state fair last fall.

Speculation here, however, has it that the removal of Gates, who is said to be an active Ku Klux Klansman, signifies a general housecleaning which may be expected to include all Klansmen who might be found within the list of the official board.

The name of Gates has been prominently mentioned as an independent candidate for governor in the November contest with the backing of the K. K. K. Gates, it is understood, sought the endorsement of the Federated Societies for his candidacy and only withdrew from the gubernatorial race when this endorsement was not forthcoming.

The letter of the governor to Gates reads as follows:

"This is to advise you that you are removed as a member of the state fair board of directors, such removal to become effective June 1, 1922. This action is taken under the provisions of section 4043, Oregon laws, for the good of the service."

The governor stated this afternoon that he has another man in mind for the post and that the announcement of his appointment could be expected within a few days.

GLENDALE NEWS.

Prof. Glen Wardrip and family, of Glendale Pass, spent the week in this city the guests of Mrs. J. Hagen.

The Glendale public schools closed an exceptionally fine year this week. Principal C. K. Robinson and Prof. S. K. Robinson, together with a fine corps of grade teachers, have all contributed to the success of our schools, and the school board, of which C. Nabel is chairman, have been tireless workers in perfecting every department of our school system.

Prof. H. Seemus, who is a noted pianist and musician, and who has spent some months traveling on account of ill health, is visiting his wife at their home in this city. They have decided to spend the summer here, which will add greatly to our musical riches, and also to our social entertainments.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Quantie, of Hillsboro, spent the week attending commencement exercises, as their daughter, Miss Hazel, was one of our graduates. Their son Fred came with them.

Mrs. Elizabeth Winkelman will leave on Monday on a visit to friends at Portland and at Tacoma. She will be gone two months.

Miss Susie Cornell, who was principal of the school at Hood River last year, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cornell, in this city.

The K. K. K. announce that they will entertain at the auditorium in this city Saturday evening. They will appear "en costume" and no doubt will draw an audience.

Mrs. Kate Anderson, of Portland, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Johnson, in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fiel, of Wolf Creek, have moved to Fernvale.

Mrs. S. Whitsett, of San Francisco, is visiting her many friends in this city.

Our nominating election is history now, yet it was one of the most strenuous elections ever recorded in Oregon, and we bow to the mandate of the choice of our voters and will carry our successful candidates to the final decision this fall.

Born, at Vallejo, Cal., May 12, to Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Brown, a son. He bears the name of his great-grandfather, who was an Oregon pioneer.

S. J. Baseel, of the Glendale Cash Store, has installed an ice plant in his building. W. H. Drost, of Portland, has the work under his direction. It is in operation and the water that will be used will be from our city reservoir, taken from Section creek, and has passed the highest government test, so the ice will be of the greatest purity. It is a very progressive and valuable asset to our city. Mr. Drost certainly handled the machinery very skillfully.

The News-Review is growing in interest and popularity with every issue, and the sporting column is read by everybody. And we all appreciate "Mickey" and "His Heck" and we are sure to look at "Prime Pickins" before we note the election returns, etc. We note great improvement with every issue and the mechanical part is simply perfectly done.
