Fruit Situation Looks Brighter

dried prunes. In the eastern Oregon prune sections, where the crop is practically all shipped as fresh fruit, the crop promises about the same as last year except in Umatilla county, where the production is estimated at less than 50 per cent of last year, with a possible crop of about 200 carloads. The total fresh fruit shipment for 1922 will probably be in the neighborhood of 500 carloads. The dried crop of the state is variously estimated between 60,000,000 and 75,000,000 pounds. The "June drop" is a very important factor in the production of the prune crop. The Douglas county prune orchards are said to be in better condition than usual.

Willamette valley cherries are estimated around 50 per cent of a normal "set." Good size may bring the total production to 40 per cent. The southern Oregon set is about average, with a crop of about 100 tons for shipment from the Roseburg district. The Dalles district is expected to produce about 700 tons. The Umatilla county crop was materially damaged by frost, and is now estimated at about 10 carloads. Frost damage is also reported from the Cove section of Union county.

The peach crop promises to be the best in several years. In the Willamette valley the peach acreage was greatly reduced by the severe freeze of December 1919. The remaining trees are pretty well set this year. In the Dalles district it is expected that the crop will be three to five times the production of last year. The Milton-Freewater (Umatilla) crop was injured to some extent by the general frost in that region. Malheur county reports "probably less peaches than last year."

More or less frost injury to the strawberry is reported from all of the eastern Oregon sections, including Hood River. The Umatilla injury is placed as high as 75 per cent by some growers. The Willamette valley crop is rather heavily set with considerable new acreage in bearing. Marketing of the 1922 crop has been under way in the earlier producing sections for about two weeks. Local grown berries will probably be quite plentiful in most Oregon markets about June 10.

The loganberry yield per acre promises to be lighter than usual, possibly not over one and one-half tons per acre on the average, compared with the usual production of 2 1/2 to 3 tons per acre. New bearing acreage is expected to bring the total production close to last year's figure of 6,000 to 7,000 tons, commercial. The newer plantings are in very good condition, but plantings four years old and over, in many cases, show an apparently weakened condition of the canes. Vines that were not trellised last fall generally show considerable "die back." In some tracts the number of bearing canes per hill is much less than normal. The prospective demand for loganberries for juice making is very light, outside of the "family" demand.

Raspberries and blackberries give promise of about an average crop. The wild blackberry (Oregon Evergreen) will most likely set a heavy crop, since the bloom has been very plentiful, and weather conditions very favorable for setting of the fruit.

Market prospects for small fruits are much more favorable than at this time last year. The cannery demand last year at the opening of the season, was very light, and considerable strawberry acreage was not picked. Loganberries opened last year at a very low figure. Right now contracts are being offered for practically all small fruits at better figures than prevailed three weeks ago, which in turn, were considerably better than those of last year.

Studebaker

PRECISION plays an important part in the manufacture of the Special-Six. It is largely responsible for the dependable service that has singled out the Special-Six as an incomparable value.

Six hundred and eighty inspectors safeguard precision in the Studebaker factories. They literally inspect every part that goes into every car—and every operation on every part. Before cars are passed for delivery 9,500 inspections are made.

In the Special-Six there are 1,120 mechanical operations to the accuracy of one-thousandth of an inch, 360 to one-half-thousandth.

As to the car's performance, a brief experience will reveal its superiority far more convincingly than we could tell it.

Studebaker cars make friends quickly, because they give most for the money. And they invariably keep these friends, because of the universal satisfaction they give in fine performance, economy and service.

Kindergarten Gives Splendid Recital

The little kiddies of the Kindergarten department of the Helmline Conservatory of Music pleased a large audience last evening with their class songs, games and piano numbers. With the exception of little Arthur Nerbas, who is only 3 1/2 years old the children all play from notes written on the staff. Little Arthur Nerbas is able to play the piano, but he reads his notes by letter. Betty Mould, who is not yet four, took part in the sight-reading contest and could name the notes on the staff without trouble. All the children played with correct fingering, correct phrasing and by note, which is unusual for such little folks. The piano teaching of the Kindergarten classes is under Mrs. Helmline. The kindergarten classes, songs and games is under the able direction of Mrs. Arthur Knauss and Miss Hazel James.

A number which was not on the program was a reading by little Ronald Spencer Hodge. This little boy is but five years of age, but his reading was exceptionally fine. Mr. and Mrs. Hodge, parents of Ronald, are recent arrivals in Roseburg. It is probable that Mrs. Hodge will teach dramatic art at the Conservatory next winter.

The kiddies were surprised after the program last evening when each was given a dish of ice cream for their good work.

Tonight is the advanced pupils of the piano, vocal and violin departments. The Conservatory orchestra will also give numbers. Those on the program for tonight are: Bertha Kohlhaugen, Velma McDonald, Florence Stinott, Harriett Groves, Vera Campbell, Ethel Marks, Helen Casey, Inez Calhoun, Hazel Caldwell, Mrs. O. D. McAllister, Marion Needham, Nova Laugh, Dorothy Cordon, Frank Grubbe, Omer Harper, Mrs. William Hines, Hazel James, Helen Church-ill, and Leodora Matthews.

This is the concluding recital of the year. One hundred and twenty-four pupils have been presented in this series of six June recitals. This
