WIDOW REUNITED MOTHER AFTER YEAR SEPARATION

(International News Service).

ANIMAS, Colo., June 10.—A young cry and with her eyes with tears, Mrs. Elizabeth of Chicago, clasped to her Miss Dolores Foulk, her 18-daughter, at the railroad station when mother and daughter reunited after a separation of on a bench in the station from Mrs. Braham told, with tears and laughter, of the long she had made for the girl, a baby, she had left in the relatives in Telluride, Colorado, she had become widowed and to make her way to success in the world.

many months Mrs. Braham touch with her daughter, but went on the line of communication between the mother and Mrs. Q. N. Foulk, of Telluride, who had the baby in charge.

grew up in the Foulk never knowing but what she and sister to the other children household. It was only a few that she learned her real identity. Six years ago the Foulk family came here from Telluride. Dolores graduated from the Bent county high school in the class of 1921 and immediately took a position as bookkeeper in a Las Animas store, where she is now employed.

The Foulks, not having heard from Dolores' mother for many years, concluded that she was dead. Mrs. Braham, the young widowed mother of Dolores, disclaimed any intention of deserting the baby. Bowed with grief and driven by a desire to secure lucrative employment in order to establish a home for herself and child, she started out. But the trail was long and winding and constantly led her farther away from Telluride.

In Chicago Mrs. Foulk met and married a man named Braham, who was killed in a railroad wreck in that city in October, 1921.

Following her second bereavement Mrs. Braham took up the search for her daughter, and, after exchanging many letters with persons in Telluride, Ouray, Pueblo and Las Animas, she located the missing child, now a young business woman herself.

Mrs. Braham left Chicago immediately and for the past week has been enjoying the loving companionship of her daughter.

Mrs. Braham plans to leave here for Chicago soon to close up her business affairs, but declares she will return and make her home here with Miss Dolores.

The Seaside Follies of 1922 Are Here

THE Seaside Follies of nineteen-twenty-two are here. The show last year was indeed a show of follies in which the leading roles were played by the daintiest bathing suit and the fur-trimmed suit. But this year the follies are more sensible, if one may say so, but just as diverting, for we have the little gingham bathing suit as the ingenue and star of the season. Fresh from the country, it is making a big hit at the seashore. It is made as simply as a suit of rompers. A sunbather comes with it, and very often a large beach parasol to match.

Next in lead is the knitted suit with striped borders and short cape to match. In this season when every little outfit has a cape that's all its own, the bathing suit is not to be left out. And it is a very sensible costume, and preferable and better looking than a towel or a sweater thrown over the shoulders when sitting on the beach.

Other things that play important parts in this summer show are the sets of gaily colored rubberized material consisting of scarf, bag, garters and hat and all trimmed in appliqued designs of the same material in contrasting colors. Betty Compton, pretty star in Paramount pictures, in the photo shows wears a rubberized cape that is trimmed in appliqued circles. It is a very effective thing, and she wears it in her forthcoming picture, "The Bonded Woman." The suit is a simple black satin blouse and bloomers without any superfluous fullness. A shirred apron over and over gives the effect of a short skirt all on each side. This little device allows freedom for swimming and tools the censors at the same time, for the suit is practically a one-piece suit, ramondaged to look shirred. There are with many touches where they demand that women try to swim with as many clothes on as possible.

LATEST VOGUE

Novel Knitted Swimming Suit

Dame Fashion has been prompted in decreasing the simple and practical bathing suit by the fact that so many women, the country over, have become devotees of the art of swimming. Since the sport has become so popular, there is little room left for the cumbersome bathing outfit of yesterday. The comfortable form fitting suit, cut wide at the shoulder to insure freedom of arm movement, is the order of the day.

While the fashionable set experimented with bathing suits of woven materials, during the past Palm Beach season, this was but a flare of fashion, that soon gave way to the welcome return of the knitted suit. The non-irritating and non-chilling quality of knitted material now leave the knitted bathing suit unchallenged in its field.

In addition to suits of one color, some of which bear embroidery varying from pure geometrical designs to conventional sea subjects, there are two-color efforts. Here we have a most attractive example, made of pure worsted. The skirt is faced and allows for fullness. The upper part and the knickers are of a different color and may be had in cardinal, Kelly green or sand combination.
