Combination You Can't Beat.

The McCormick - Deering Line and "Your" Farm

You must not at any time be misled, that our credit system, service, and the stock of implements we carry for your inspection and comparison at all time cost you a cent. We handle no off-the-market brand of farm machinery, but IMPLEMENTS.

That can not be duplicated, or the International Harvester Company would offer them to you through us. For every dollar spent here, your dollar does its one hundred penny value—that's all—nothing else. What more can be offered you anywhere else at any time than 100 per cent value?

June 10th the club will entertain all the children and their mothers at the school house, from 2 o'clock until 5. All children cordially invited.

Announcement

The Roseburg Service Station

INCORPORATED

Wishes to state that we did not erect a beautiful Service Station in your city, with no other object in mind, than to stay with you. We expect to do business, also, on most business principles, taking care of overheads, and make a fair margin of profit.

In order to do this we must maintain prices.

We are a new firm in the field and do not wish to start the cutting of prices. However, we realize that competition is keen in our line, and we are ready to meet any demand forced upon us.

Love's Masquerade

A Dramatic Story of Love and Romance by Idaho McGlone Gibson

A QUARREL

"And then one morning, Dr. George," wrote Margaret, "when I had given up hearing from him, Harry called me on the long distance telephone. He had been home four weeks, he said; called back by something very important which, by the way he did not explain to me.

"Wasn't that just like Harry to let me wait and wonder all those weeks? But I, like any other loving woman, was so glad to hear his voice that I would not let him make any excuses.

"Harry," I said, "when you have to make excuses for staying away from me, I shall feel that coming to see me has become a duty with you; and I shall know then that the little poem you sent me with your picture no longer holds true.

"Don't you realize, dear, that I want you to come only when you want to come? And I want you to write when you just can't keep from writing to me, and not at any other time. And I want you to think of me only when pleasant thoughts of me come to you, and not at any other time.

"But the moment you have to come, write or even think of me because of some inner call of duty, why then—

"Harry interrupted me saying: "But I want to know that I have been trying my best to get away to come to see you. It just seems as though I cannot live another day without seeing you. Don't you suppose you can come over here?"

"That, too, was very characteristic of Harry—to ask me to come over there; to ask me to throw up any important business that I might have on hand just because he wanted to see me. This time, however, I think I surprised him, for I said:

"No, Harry, I can't come. I am very busy just now with a series of magazine stories. They must be in by day after tomorrow, which gives me very little time to finish them.

"Oh yes, I see," he said in a hurt voice. "You do not want to come."

"No, I don't, Harry," I answered honestly. "I do not want to see you badly enough to come to you, and it seems that just now you do not want to see me badly enough to come to me, so I guess we will let it go until we both have a little more enthusiasm about the matter."

"Why, what is the matter, Margaret? You're not hurt, are you?"

"I lied a little, for I was hurt. It did seem to me that he might have at least wired me, but I tried to make my voice as casual as possible, when I said:

"I am not hurt the least bit in the world, Harry. Surely, you remember that we always insisted that this arrangement of ours would only last as long as we wished it to last; that we would never be bound by any duty to each other; it should always be inclination only. If your inclination was strong enough you would be with me, you know."

"But Margaret, you don't understand. It is still inclination with me. And because I want you so much I am trying to bring something to pass that I know will mean much to me and I hope it will mean quite as much to you.

"Up until now I was almost sure it could never be, but now it seems to me that I can see a little light at the end of the long, grey path."

"Did your wife tell you she had called upon me?" I interrupted.

"No! How strange! She did not even tell me she had been out of town. Was there anything of mine lying around the studio during her visit?"

"It seemed rather strange to me, Dr. George, that Harry should think of that only in connection with his wife's call upon me, but I made no comment. But back in my brain was laid away the thought of how afraid Harry was at the speech of people.

"Please, please, Margaret, understand," he said after a short silence as if waiting for me to speak. "Please understand I want to come and will be with you as soon as possible, although I cannot tell you when that will be. When I do come, dear, I am sure you will accept my explanation and I hope you will help me carry out my plans."

"All right, you will find me here. Goodbye."

"But Margaret—"

"I am quite sure, Harry, that you cannot call me 'Extravagant Lady' after this. Why, you have been talking at $1 a minute for at least a quarter of an hour. Goodbye, dear," and not waiting to hear any more, I hung up."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

BY MRS. ELLSBURY

A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbury Care Roseburg News-Review

Hereafter no questions will be answered in this column aside from those pertaining to advice to lovers. The questions concerning other subjects that are already on hand will be answered, and their completion will close that part of the column.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: My husband has only one fault that I seriously object to, and I am writing to know if you know any means by which I could cure him of this. He drinks all the time. I do not mean that he is a drunkard, or that he goes on booze parties, or comes home in the middle of the night drunk or anything like that. He rarely ever goes out nights, and only then to the club or lodge, and I have never seen him drunk, but he keeps liquor around his business all the time, and about every time he comes home he has liquor on his breath and I know he has taken a drink of two, just enough to "make him feel good."

Now I know that this isn't right, that it isn't good for his business or anything else, and I certainly don't like it about him. Every time I say anything he says it is his own business and that he will do what he pleases about it. In every other way, but that he does what I say or never does anything that I do not want him to. How can I break him of it?

ANS. I would stop talking to him about it if he will not stop it and it does no good. Just ignore it from now on, and it is very probable that he will stop it before very long. It is just a habit that he has fallen into for a time, and there is a chance that if you make an issue of it that it will grow worse instead of better.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: Is there an iron bound rule that a girl should return an engagement ring to a man if they break off the engagement, and can the man compel her to? Why should the girl return it, doesn't it belong to her after he has given it to her? I know girls that have not returned them.

ANS. There is no iron bound rule as you say, but there is certainly the custom that you should return the ring, and it is in existence because of all rules of common sense and justice. The man gives the girl the ring with the understanding that she is to become his wife, and in case this does not take place then the ring should be returned. I know there are some girls that think it very clever to collect engagement rings, but they have not the respect of the men to whom they have been engaged, nor anyone else that knows.

FRESHMAN NURSED SICK CHILDREN

CORVALLIS, OREGON, June 10 (United Press)—A certain freshman at Oregon Agricultural College nursed children suffering from whooping-cough as a means of earning money to defray a portion of his college expenses, according to Mrs. Lutz Howard, secretary of the college employment bureau. The young man first ascertained that his fellow student had passed successfully through the valley of this so-called "plague" whatever caused it to visit others over the same path. His nursing was successful.

FAMOUS PAINTER IN THE YOSEMITE

YOSEMITE, CALIF., June 10 (United Press)—Some folks "see" Yosemite Park in four days. But a Swedish watercolor landscape artist, has been in Yosemite Park for more than a year painting pictures every day, and still finds a wealth of materials to choose from. Widforss (Paris Salon 1912) has been all over the Pacific Coast, but under his American travels in search of scenic subjects when he reached the famous valley. He wintered here and found a new Yosemite. He was one of the most ardent participants in winter sports, skiing being his favorite. Widforss works as regularly as any park artist. Every morning he mounts his bicycle and starts in search of a new picture.

Vertical falls, Widforss says is the most beautiful water fall in all the world from the artist's standpoint. This is not because of the water itself, Widforss explains, but because of its wonderful setting of mountains, rocks, and trees and mist.

Following a recent raid Widforss pointed out to guests of Yosemite Lodge that the atmosphere was so clear that it was possible to see individual branches on trees atop Glacier Point. This afternoon, he said in typical of Sweden, and is responsible for the brilliant colors in which Swedish artists paint.

Bran Muffin Recipe By Washington Chef

ANTHONY GIACOFCI

Housewives may now regale their guests with the same kind of bran muffins Marshal Foch and many other noted visitors at Washington have talked about. The opportunity is presented through Anthony Giacofci, chef of the New Willard Hotel, one of the big hosteries of the National Capital. Here is the recipe which Chef Giacofci says will make one dozen muffins: Four tablespoonfuls flour, four tablespoonfuls bran, one tablespoonful lard, one tablespoonful butter, one tablespoonful baking powder, one tablespoonful sugar, two eggs, one-fourth pint cold milk, a pinch of salt. Mix the above thoroughly, flour with baking powder, add lard and butter, mix and add bran, eggs and milk, bake in hot oven twenty minutes.

ASTORIANS ON CAMPING TRIP

EUGENE, Ore., June 10.—A party of Astorians, headed by H. R. Hoefler, left Eugene Friday morning for Lake Tahkenitch, in Douglas county, on the coast, to spend a month fishing in this lake and other lakes and streams in that portion of the state.

The baggage of the party has preceded them a day, and a guide at the lake promised to have the camp ready for them when they arrived. A radio outfit is included in the equipment and the members of the party expect to get the world's news and the latest in musical entertainments hot out of the air.

Besides Mr. Hoefler the party consists of his son, Raymond Hoefler; John A. Stern, Dr. C. W. Barr, Carl Koestad, Andrew Van Duzen, J. T. Ross, F. J. Donnerberg, and Carlton W. Quirk.

Children are born Imitators

Unless they are taught by example that they should take good care of their teeth they are very apt to fall into the ways of their elders. Show your child a perfectly fine pair of teeth. Then the child will understand.

The most costly neglect that can be practiced by mankind is the neglect of teeth. These physical instruments used to tear apart and grind our foods should not become impaired. If they do our health will suffer. A dentist should be consulted whether your teeth are ailing or not.

THREE REPORTS MADE ON FORD'S OFFER

(By Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, June 9.—Three separate reports with recommendations for action by congress on the Muscle Shoals project were made to the house today by the military committee. The majority report favored the acceptance of Ford's offer provided the Gorgas steam plant not be included. Another report concurred with the majority report, but urged that Gorgas plant be included, saying that to eliminate it would defeat Ford's offer. The third report opposed Ford's offer unless modified in other sections than that dealing with Gorgas.
