Love's Masquerade

A Dramatic Story of Love and Romance
By Leah McGilone Gibson

THE ANSWER

"There is nothing to tell," answered Harry somewhat impatiently when I explained that I was weighing his reputation instead of my own.

"Don't you understand, Margaret," he asked, "that to pay as you call it, means nothing if you can pay it and it is worth the price?"

"That's just it, Harry. I'm afraid you do not realize the price you would have to pay—and that in time you would think you were paying too dearly."

"No man that I have ever known is as gregarious as you. The love of your friends, the admiration of acquaintances you make is like wine to you. I do not believe that any one woman could compensate you for this. Your semi-political position would make you a first page sensation story all over America. You do care for the speech of people although perhaps you do not realize it."

"As editor of your magazine you would lose all influence with your readers, which you know are mostly women and young girls. The reading public is queer, my dear."

"I am afraid, Harry, you never could get that influence back."

"What do I care for a lot of people that I shall never know? If I have you, Margaret, I have everything."

"I'm not so sure, Harry. The great reason for what you call your failure is not getting more out of life is that you tire so quickly. Above love, above friendship, above interest, above everything else in the world you must have change. Your friends, your ambition, your work, your pleasures—even I, Harry, could be put in the balance with change and it would outweigh us all."

"You have had love before, Harry. Many of them and there came a time in all of them when nothing but change would assuage your hunger and unrest."

"True, I have seemed to have given you a new kind of a thrill if the restfulness and content which you say I bring to you can be described as a thrill, but would you be perfectly satisfied to be with me alone if you never had any emotional episodes outside to come back from to me, I think you would grow very tired of even me."

"You were not meant to live away from your fellows."

"Scandal, my dear boy, travels fast and although today people are not so puritanical as they were once, you would have many little shafts of light to endure."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

BY MRS. ELLSBURY

A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbury Care Roseburg News-Review

Hereafter no questions will be answered in this column aside from those pertaining to advice to lovers. The questions concerning other subjects that are already on hand will be answered, and their completion will close that part of the column.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: What is appropriate to wear to a church wedding in the evening? Does one wear hat and gloves? What time should one be at the church if the wedding is at 8:20? How soon do guests leave the church after the bridal procession passes out? Thanking you for the information.

WORKED.

Ans. A street costume is appropriate for evening church weddings, but one is privileged to elaborate on this to any extent desired. An elaborate silk dress, with hat and gloves, would be really the correct costume, although a formal street suit, or street dress, would not be out of place. Always wear hat and gloves. About 8:15 or 8:20 would be the correct time to arrive. If you arrive at 8:30 and many others do also, the wedding would have to take place later than 8:30, as the guests are all supposed to be in their places before the arrival of the bridal party. The bridal party passes out immediately after the ceremony in the same form in which they marched in. The guests depart immediately after. Ushers are usually provided, and each section of seated guests passes out in order fixed by the ushers to avoid confusion.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I was much interested in your answer the other day to the girl that asked you if there was such a thing as love at first sight, and you answered her by saying that there was an attraction at first sight but that this could not be counted a real love. I would like to tell you about my case, and see if you think that there is such a thing as love at first sight, or not.

I met my husband at a dance one night, and we danced together, and he took me home. We were married a week after that, and thought that we were violently in love. He was very handsome, just the kind of a man that I had always thought that I would want to marry. I was 20 years old, he was 28. I found out in the month after our marriage that his hands were dirty, his clothes were shabby, and his manners were bad. I could not have lived with him any longer if I had wanted to.

I am married again now, and am 25 years old. I know my husband and went with him for 2 years before I gave up with which to contend.

"Women would invite you places to which I would not be welcome. You would have to either reject these invitations and stay with me, or you would have a feeling all the time as though you were hurting me by going. This would make you nervous and irritable; perhaps I could tell, do I am sure that after a while—oh, I am very sure that you would grow tired of it all."

"And I do not think you could come back and pick up your many friends just where you left them. Some of them would sympathize with your wife who would have been on the ground asking for it all the time."

"And what of you?" Harry interrupted. "Aren't you describing your own doubts and fears rather than mine?"

"No, I do not think so. I do not think that you know what a solitary woman I am; how independent I am of people. I do not think you understand that I could probably return and find my few friends—which I think I can count on my two hands—still mine. Each one of them, I know, would stick by me through thick and thin—and of course you know that I have no relatives to be shamed by anything that I may do, and you won't misunderstand when I tell you that I never tire of anybody or anything that I have ever loved."

"Oh, Margaret! Why do you say all of these things to me? Cannot I make you understand that I have never had the same feeling about anyone that I have had about you. I have never been interested in anyone for so long a time as I have been interested in you. I have never thought of anyone so continually as I have about you. I think really that you are the last person I think of at night and yours is the first name that comes into my mind when I awake."

"The cry of my body for completeness."

That is a cry to you; My blood beats out your name to me unceasing, pitiless—your name."

I quoted softly: "Yes, that is it, Margaret. At the time that Doris was sick and I thought that I had lost you—Forever your name—"

Your name—Margaret—Margaret kept pounding, pounding in my ears, until I almost wished that I could forget not only your name and how you looked, but what you had said to me."

Tomorrow—Temptation.

New Department Added to School

The Heinline conservatory has announced the addition of a Dramatic Art department which will be under the management of Bertha Eliza-beth Hodge. This department includes voice placing, public speaking, physical training, oratory and children's story hour and playground. Mrs. Hodge is a graduate of the Cum-nock School of Oratory, Northwestern university, and in addition to her teaching experience in the high schools of Lincoln, Nebraska, Med-ford, Ashland and Portland, Oregon, also has been a Chautauqua reader and playground supervisor. During the summer months, Mrs. Hodge will give either private or class lessons and since she has made children's work a specialty, she will conduct morning classes of playground and story hour after the Chautauqua has finished its course here.

This new department will be formally opened in the fall with a public appearance of Mrs. Hodge, assisted by the conservatory faculty.

COOKED FOOD SALE.

Riddle Ladies to Give Minstrel

A ladies' minstrel show is to be one of the best entertainments Riddle has had for some time. The show is to be given at the Riddle theater on Saturday, June 17, for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid. The minstrel troupe is composed entirely of Riddle ladies who have been working hard to make this event a success. They will bring a number of new jokes, songs, instrumental music and other entertainment and will follow this with a laughable farce comedy, "Mrs. Black's Pink Tea."

DRUGGISTS MUST REGISTER

At this time of the year all physicians, dentists, druggists and others permitted by law to sell, dispense or prescribe narcotic drugs are required to renew their registrations by filing application therewith with the collector of internal revenue and paying their special tax. Blanks and instructions were sent out to all registrants by the Portland office on May 20.

"Returns for registration have not been coming in very promptly," said Clyde G. Huntley, collector of internal revenue, and he urges all those who are affected by the provisions of this law to send in their applications and tax with as little delay as possible. "I am sure," continued Mr. Huntley, "that when physicians, druggists, and dentists realize that if they do not complete their registrations before July 1, they will be prohibited from possessing, selling, prescribing or dispensing narcotic drugs, they will make every effort to respond promptly to the request sent out on May 20; and at the same time they will be conferring a favor upon collector's office by relieving the congestion which usually occurs at the end of June."

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, a bankrupt, will on and after the 24th day of June, 1922, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, sell to the highest bidder all of the property belonging to the estate of said bankrupt, consisting of tools, implements, machinery and sundries now in the building formerly occupied by John C. Krasse at streets in the city of Roseburg, Oregon, the corner of Main and Washington the inventory and appraisement of which may be seen at the office of the referee in bankruptcy, here to be submitted to the undersigned, trustee, Roseburg, Ore. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check for ten percent of the amount and an affidavit of good faith.

Dated and first published this 12th day of June, 1922.

A. G. SUTHERLAND,
Trustee in Bankruptcy,
Roseburg, Oregon.

We Admit it

Some of the Moline implements may be off the market. Where are they? They are on the farms doing satisfactory work for satisfied owners.

The Moline is the first, and so far the only line that has said that "farmers' profits are more essential than dealer's profits."

The Moline is the first, and so far the only line that has recognized the right of the farmer to buy his implements at prices he can afford to pay.

The Moline is the only line with the courage to cut loose from old methods and insist that dealers' profits should be proportionate to farmers' profits, and that farmers should have the benefit of all price cuts.

Is it any wonder that farmers have bought so many of Moline implements that sales have overrun their highest estimates and they are not always able to fill orders at once.

SLAPPING OF STUDENT IS OBEYED BY JUDGE

(International News Service).

BRIDGEPORT, Ill., June 15.—School teachers are sometimes justified in slapping their pupils and may even go to the extent of pulling their hair. Brought into court on a charge of assault and with pulling a hair from a pupil's ear, Miss Mabel Spear, a local teacher, was discharged by the judge.

One witness swore that he believed the complaining pupil had not taken a bath for two years.
