Famous Comedy "Cappy Ricks" Coming

Dramatization of Peter B. Kyne's Delightful Saturday Evening Post Stories, to Be Presented at Chautauqua on the Fifth Night by the Percival Vivian Players

"Cappy Ricks" will prove a feature attraction the fifth night at the Chautauqua this year. This delightful American comedy, dramatized from Peter B. Kyne's famous Saturday Evening Post stories, is to be presented with full scenic equipment by the Percival Vivian Players of New York City. A carefully chosen metropolitan cast, selected and personally coached by Mr. Vivian, will give the production. "Cappy Ricks" is a play of the Frisco waterfront; the story of a weather-beaten, old sea-dog, whose rough exterior concealed a heart of gold: it is a play of quaint character types, and a wholesome atmosphere, with a delightful love story and a vein of pathos running throughout. Mr. Vivian is perhaps the best-known of the New York actor-producers. His productions are solid and dignified, and through his professional standing in New York he is enabled to secure the best and cleanest of American plays for Chautauqua presentation. He was for many years playing leading roles with the Ben Greet Players and for some time was manager for them. Two years ago he staged "The Wayfarer" at Madison Square Garden, the largest religious pageant ever presented, in which over 5,000 people took part.

DUSTIN IS GOOD OUTLAW

AT ANTIERS THEATER
An outlaw who does not deserve the title—this is the character portrayed at the Antiers theater tonight in "Iron to Gold," the Fox photoplay now running there, by Dustin Farnum, the celebrated star. The picture is one of sterling worth, and the acting is worthy of the picture. Margaret Marsh, as leading woman, is a charming foil for the virile Farnum. There is some fine comedy.
