THE PRODUCT OF ORGANIZATIONS.

The last ten years have seen a notable development in the life of young America, through the formation and growth of organizations conceived and worked out for their training in a very original and intelligent way. Societies like the Boy and Girl Scouts, garden clubs and canning clubs, and many others, have developed a tremendous power of initiative. Athletic development has gone on. Playground work has become a feature in thousands of cities. These forms of activity are affecting the temper of the young folks. The results of the movement are wholly good. These activities lead young folks to be somewhat too self assertive, too confident of their own powers, too little inclined to accept suggestion from those competent to give it. But on the other hand, they not merely create initiative, but tend to give young people a sense of fair play and team work. Young people learn to give and take, to subordinate their own desires to the good of their team or organization. They are led to make sacrifices to accomplish ends that interest them. Formerly the characteristic outcry from the kid crowd was, "I won't play." Youngsters were constantly getting mad and quitting. They had no sense of community effort, or submitting to the sentiment of their group. Today they are learning that they must yield their own personal desires, to work for the good of their organization. They are taught to give time and effort to civic causes. In these ways they are learning lessons that ought to make them better citizens. They have plenty of faults, due to their new found and ill regulated sense of power. The fathers and mothers must learn how to control that power with more efficiency. But there is a great potential force there for better citizenship and civic life.

PIECE OF STRIKING PUBLICITY.

On the sultry Sunday, June 11, when New York City was struck by the terrible storm which caused the loss of so many lives of people who were seeking recreation in the amusement parks, there appeared in the rotogravure section of the New York Tribune a double page spread showing in marvelous artistry the most alluring scenes of Washington, Oregon and British Columbia with an invitation from the Pacific Northwest Tourist Association to spend their vacation in this perfect summer climate.

Illustrated with fourteen different views carefully selected to show the variety of attractions offered by "America's Summer Playground"—mountains, rivers, bathing beaches, golf, motoring, fishing—inland and coast scenes, all were brought out strikingly and the lure of the pictures emphasized by a brief description of this "land of enchantment, business opportunity, family happiness and contentment—the most glorious of the glorious west."

As a piece of striking publicity it is probably the most impressive advertisement of the Pacific northwest ever produced, while its timeliness, appearing just at the very hour when the east was being ravaged by storms and oppressed by heat, made it particularly effective. This is one of the ways in which the Pacific Northwest Tourist Association is making known the beauties of this region and enticing people to visit it for their vacations.

Other dominant advertising has been appearing this spring in fifty newspapers in important cities of the United States.

In addition to the double advertisement, the same section of the New York Tribune also carried nearly a quarter of a page of illustrations of Pacific Northwest scenes as a news feature.

Some years ago people became greatly alarmed over the tendency to form great combinations, which seemed to be squeezing the little fellows out of business. Some predicted that the big trusts would be too unwieldy to live and the small producer who gave close personal attention to his business could serve the public more efficiently. The big combinations must have made good to a large extent, and must have effected important economies, else they would have not been able to retain their volume of business. And on the other hand the small producer is holding his own in many ways. It is pretty hard to drive out an industrious and intelligent man who gives close attention to the details of his business.

Prune Pickin's

By BERT G. BATES.

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

Have you a little sun-burned back in your home?

Well, Prophet Bell almost dished out a rain to us today but upon the solicitation of the gawfers he decided to let it go at "cloudy."

Mayor Walt Hamilton has returned from Portland but he hasn't mentioned seeing any cluster lamp poles that would be suitable for Roseburg. We wonder if he rubbered as high as the cluster lamps during his stay in the metrop.

A tourist passed thru the village yesterday in an auto with an airedale dog. The dog was wearing horn-rimmed glasses and we thought at first it was some college grad headed home.

Hub Quine appeared on Jackson st. this a. m. smoking a corn-cob pipe which wasn't much for looks—but for odor, OH BOY!

Cecil Black, local body squirt, is wearing regular workshirts these days but that doesn't mean he's working.

L. J. Barnes, tonsorial trimmer, is mad at ye ed. And it's all because we refuse to publish his name regularly in this column. That's our big worry these days. Everybody wants their name in Prune Pickin's.

Let's all take a vacation tomorrow and attend the ball game. Besides getting a kick out of the national sport, we'll be helping the public library.

Sam Starmer says things are pretty dull since Dock Brumfield's notorious case, but then Sam, you know, we folks can't stand that much excitement 365 days out of the year.

KEEPING IT DARK.

Richard, the corpulent negro chef, had outlived four wives and was before the judge again for the purpose of having his somewhat frayed matrimonial bond attached to that of a husky black girl. Recalling that the other four wives had all be mulattoes, the judge was curious.

"Why is it, Richard, that you've picked a dark skinned woman this time—aren't the mulattoes satisfactory?"

"Assuh, Judge," he answered in awed tones, "dey's alright long ez dey's live, but dey do make sich ghastly corpses."

MARY HAD A LITTLE DRESS. Mary had a little dress, Diaphanous and low, And everywhere that Mary went The men were sure to go. They followed her along the street— The reason you can guess; Though there wasn't much to Mary, There was less to Mary's dress.

Women may get the vote and wear divided skirts, but never will they master the art of learning back in a chair, putting their thumbs in the armholes of their vest, screwing a cigar in one corner of their mouth and out of the other saying:

"Not for your Uncle Dudley."

WHY, OH WHY?

Why does the barber cut your face, And then, with fiendish art, Rub caustic on the selfsame place To make it burn and smart?

Oh, tell us, why this selfsame guy, When you've removed your collar, Will do such things, then boldly try To soak you for a dollar?

Why does the barber wisely state, Because your lacks have stalled, And show you how to get new hair, When he himself is bald?

It is none of our business, of course, but have you noticed that in many cases beauty is only skin deep.

INTERESTED.

"Will you go to a Scotch dinner?" "What kind of a dinner?" "Scotch."

"Gonna have any?" "LAFE PERKINS SE7: 'It's about time to be puttin' our elbows in fly paper.'"

ALTERATIONS and repair work of all kinds will be given our prompt attention. We have experienced help in this department. Roseburg Cleaners, phone 472. Our prices on cleaning and pressing suits is $1.50.

THE HOME RADIO

How to Make and Use It. By A. HYATT VERRILL

XXII. THE SIMPLEST SENDING SET

Although it may be possible to devise a transmission set or radiophone which is simpler than that shown in Fig. 58, it is questionable if anything simpler would really be efficient. At any rate, this is so extremely simple that the veriest amateur should have no difficulty in setting it up. It has only two adjustments, the rheostat and the variable condenser. Moreover, it is a very cheap set and, aside

D the variable condenser, E the B-battery of from 60 to 120 volts, F the six volt battery, G the rheostat, H the tube plate, I the grid, J the phone transmitter.

To make the inductance, wind the two inch cardboard tube with thirty-eight turns of No. 18 double cotton covered wire or B. & S. wire. When twenty turns have been taken, twist a loop in the wire as a tap-off and from the batteries, there is nothing which need be purchased ready-made (except wire) other than the following:

- 1 Variable condenser of .0005 mfd.
  - 1 Microphone or telephone transmitter.
  - 1 Rheostat.
  - 1 Vacuum tube and socket.
  - 1 Cardboard tube about two inches in diameter and about three inches long.
- The diagram needs no explanation as to details. A being the aerial, B the ground, C the tap-off of inductance.

STATE PRESS COMMENT

STEALING FROM BABY'S MILK

A new and flourishing business has grown up in stealing the butterfats out of milk, coconut oil is substituted for them, which makes the milk look and taste much as the whole evaporated milk did, but which is not the same when applied to baby's insides.

Children fed on this "oiled milk" show very bad effects. Scurvy, rickets, poor teeth, pellagra are some of the diseased conditions following its continued use.

The states of Ohio, Wisconsin, Utah, Colorado, California, Oregon, Florida, Maryland, New Jersey and New York have already passed laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of imitation milk. Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, North and South Dakota, Washington, Pennsylvania and the New England states are preparing to make an issue of it. There is also a bill pending in congress which will probably come to a vote in a few weeks.

If there is one thing necessary to the national welfare it is the health and proper growth of the children. Taking the nourishment out of their food should receive prompt and effective discouragement. — Albany Democrat.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL BILL

Petitions were circulated today in all sections of Oregon to secure signatures to an initiative bill to be presented to the voters at the November election, calling for the compulsory education of all children between the ages of eight and sixteen years in the public schools of the state.

Indications are that a large number of signatures have been obtained and the bill will undoubtedly be placed on the ballot.

Fundamentally, the purpose of this measure is to break down the counter-offensive that has been begun against the public school system of the United States, which today is the highest single factor for democracy in the national life.

Under the terms of this bill, class distinction is leveled to the lowest common denominator.

The Negro, the Japanese, the Chinese and the white youth mingle in our public schools and the preservation of foreign languages in our midst and the perpetuation of old-country doctrines is given a body-blow.

There is no place in America for Russian, German, Polish, Hebrew, or any other private schools.

Americans are coming to believe that it is the solemn duty of every foreigner who steps foot upon our shores, intending to make his living here, to take immediate steps to become an American citizen in every sense of the word.

If he will not cast off the old-country languages and customs, then he should return to his native land to subscribe to them.

The preservation of the public school system and the enforced attendance in public schools of these newcomers to our shores, the Americanism of the immigrant is virtually guaranteed.

This measure is a decided step forward and united support is due it from men and women voters in every walk of life. — Coos Bay Daily News.

TRUE TO FORM

The Portland Chamber of Commerce and the Portland newspapers show a tendency to favor the separation of the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific systems, which would probably give the Union Pacific a transportation monopoly of Oregon.

This attitude is in accordance with the traditional Portland policy of up-building Portland at the expense of state development, a policy which has made Oregon a one-city state and Portland a top-heavy city. Anyone with any vision can see that this will react to the injury of the metropolis, but Portland's vision has always been myopic. The Portland idea is the exploitation of tributary territory instead of its development, yet if it is not developed there will be little to exploit. — Capital Journal.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD AT MYRTLE CREEK

The funeral of Mrs. John F. Peffley, whose death occurred on June 16 at Portland, was held yesterday at Myrtle Creek. Mrs. Peffley formerly lived at Myrtle Creek, and has many friends in that vicinity. The funeral was conducted yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Ritter, of this city, and Rev. H. L. Caldwell, of the Baptist church here, officiated.

"THREE LIVE GHOSTS" TODAY

A picture of exceptional merit is "Three Live Ghosts," which opens a run of two days at the Antlers theater today. It is a Paramount production by George Fitzmaurice in which many historic spots in London are pictured. Anna Q. Nilsson and Norman Kerry, both well known to the Paramount audiences, are the featured players. The support is quite adequate.

C. W. B. Met Tuesday Evening

The members of the Christian Workers' band held their weekly meeting last evening at the First Baptist church. The Rev. W. S. Gordon had charge of the meeting in the absence of the president, Harry White, who was out of town on business. The program which had been planned by Mr. Gordon proved to be very interesting. Other delightful features of the evening was a short talk made by a former member, Lorin Britt, and a talk by Miss Charles, who is visiting in this city for a short time. Miss Charles has recently returned from South China where she has served as a missionary for five years, and is now enjoying a furlough. Having just returned from China, Miss Charles was able to tell interesting stories of that country. She spoke of both political and religious phases of China.

Two teams held services last Sunday at Garden Valley and at Looking Glass. Both teams report successful meetings. The services at Looking Glass was on behalf of Near East Relief, and yielded cash to the amount of $100 received for this worthy cause. It was voted at last night's meeting to call the meeting for next Tuesday evening because of the Chautauque.
