National League Drawing Away From American Teams In Point of Player Class

By DAVIS WALSH
 International News Service Sports Editor
 NEW YORK, June 21.—To those who cannot take their baseball as it is, the National League is drawing away from the American League in point of class. If it had not already done so, the American League was once again and ultimate word in baseball organizations, and years it set the pace, largely through its ability to thrust a cautious hand into the minor league grab bag and come up with the big ones. Now, however, the National League is more successful in its young prospects and, in consequence, is waxing prosperous.

The development of young stars in the lifehood of baseball for no good reason the American League is realizing little on minor league investments. Consider, for example, the young player who has fought on the major league this year. The National League has all the better of the gambler.

Cubs Fair Sample
 The Chicago Cubs are a fair sample. They are very long on players, notably Arnold, Miller, and Hartnett, the latter of whom is said by the ball players themselves to be the best in prospect of the decade, and a great deal of them are making good day to day performances.

The Reds have a pair of new in-cavenoy and Pinedell, infielders, while Harper, an outfielder, and Johnny Couch, the pitcher, seem destined to remain. Traynor, a fine infielder, and Gooch, a catcher, are making good with Pirates, while Ralph Shinners, a $10,000 outfielder, will be very well "until hit on the head by a pitched ball."

The Cards and Braves stood pat for the most part, but the Dodgers, seeing their many veterans going from bad to worse, called Andy High, infielder, Bert Griffith, outfielder, and Dazzy Vance, pitcher, from the minors, and all three have made the riffs. The Philadelphia only graduate from the minors is Leslie, a first baseman from New Orleans, but the young man is making good.

American League Suffers
 By comparison the 1922 crop of minor league graduates in American League looks as though it had suffered from draught. The Cleveland Indians and the Boston Red Sox are almost exclusively veterans; the Yanks can muster Norman McMillan, the outfielder-infielder, and Bob Murray, pitcher who spend much of their time upon the bench, while the Athletics have only outfielder McGowan, a substitute, to show for the long trip to Eagle Pass, Texas.

The White Sox can summon "No Hit" Robertson and the Browns a left-hander named Pruitt as new faces, while Rigney, a shortstop, and Pillette, a pitcher, are the only recruits that have really caught on with the Tigers, although any pitcher or infielder that could show anything faced a ready-made chance.

The Senators really did better in this respect than the rest of their American League rivals. Francis, Phillips and Gleason look like real pitchers, and a youth by the name of Bluege is almost certain to fit into the Washington infield sooner or later. Goslin and Goebel, outfielders, are fair prospects who are getting the chance to show largely because Clyde Milan has found that he cannot stand up under the strain of everyday work.

Will Open Ladies Specialty Shop

Mrs. F. F. Jones, and Mrs. O. D. McAllister, well known ladies of this city, announced today that they would open a ladies specialty shop in the Hamilton Building where A. Salzman has conducted a jewelry store for a number of years. It will be known under the firm name of Jones and McAllister. Mrs. Jones is the proprietor of the hemstitching department at Bellows' store, and Mrs. McAllister has been employed at various ladies clothing stores in this city. They have both had extensive experience in the ladies clothing line, Mrs. Jones having been engaged in a similar business in San Francisco before coming to this city. They both have many friends here, and the new firm will undoubtedly be a great success.

Mrs. Jones and Mrs. McAllister expect to have a complete line of ladies specialties including hand-made lingerie, negligees, art blouses, and will carry a complete line of corsets, brassieres, gloves, and Onyx hosiery. Mrs. Jones will continue with hemstitching work also.

The interior of the building they will occupy is being completely rebuilt and renovated. It will be newly furnished throughout with dainty furnishings, and white enamel woodwork, and will have a small fitting room. They expect to be ready to open about July 15.

Reason That Is Advanced for the Apparent Impossibility of Imitating the Genuine Camembert.
 A man interested in agricultural products wanted to make cheese of the type of Camembert, but while he had the same ferment, employed the same methods and used what seemed to be the same kind of milk, neither he nor anyone else in this country obtained the same result.
 On visiting France he found that the makers of the cheese in question were very particular about their milk, obtaining it from the dairymen of a certain district only. In the fields of these farmers there grew, he found, a sprinkling of certain grasses that he did not find elsewhere, and it is possible, and even likely, that these make the subtle difference in the milk that shows in the cheese which distinguishes the genuine from the artificial product.
 And yet, the special grasses were only incidental; they were not the main grasses of the pasture, which were the same as those found elsewhere.—Elwood Hendrick in Harper's Magazine.

FIND OLD ROMAN CALENDAR

Discovery of Immense Historical Interest Recently Made—Antedates That of Julius Caesar.
 A most interesting discovery was made recently at Anzio, in the Roman Campagna. It was of a calendar made of plaster and much earlier than the calendar as made by Julius Caesar in the year 46 B. C. This calendar evidently dates back to between 163 B. C. and 84 B. C. and is the only one yet found which antedates that of Julius Caesar.
 Some parts of it are missing, but the rest shows that it was based on a lunar year of 354 days, divided into twelve months of 29 and 31 days, with a thirteenth month, called Intercalary, of 27 days, interposed every alternate year after February. Under this system the year had an average of 354 1/2 days—that is, four days more than a solar year should have.
 Inevitable confusion arose from this, and the college of priests had the right to intervene and correct it whenever they chose by omitting the intercalary month. It was because they often did it for political reasons that Julius Caesar decided to reform the calendar and trusted the work to the celebrated mathematician and astronomer Sosigenes. He based his calendar on the solar year in place of the lunar, and made it one of 365 days.
 The year 45 B. C. when this took effect was called the "annus confusionis" (year of confusion), because, in order to make the year 45 begin with the new sun, ninety extra days had to be inserted in the year.
 The ancient calendar, unique of its kind, has just been published by the Royal Academy of the Lincei.

FINALLY REACHED THE TOP

Result of Years of Striving on the Part of Bottom of the Strawberry Box.
 St. Peter was on his way down to the gates to set them ajar for the day for some people and to slide the bar in place for others. As he passed along the street he spied an object so small, so tiny, so microscopic in appearance that he stopped to gaze at him and inquire how he had come on high without passing the gate in the usual way.
 "How did you come to get so high as this?"
 "Just naturally. For years and years I've been getting higher and higher, every year, closer to the top all the time, and now I'm this high."
 "What are you—a soul?"
 "Not at all. I never had a soul and nobody who ever had anything to do with the making of me ever had a soul."
 "Well, I certainly do not understand at all how you could get here."
 "I admit that I don't exactly belong in any such place as this, but when you know who and what I am you will easily see this, being the highest place I could possibly reach. I simply had to get here in time. I just had to go out of sight so far as the earth is concerned."
 "Would you mind telling me who or what you are?"
 "In the bottom of a strawberry box."
 And the spoke editor says that if this did not happen it is about due.—San Antonio Light.

BABE RUTH GETS FIVE DAYS OF REST

(By Associated Press)
 CHICAGO, June 21.—Babe Ruth's argument with Empire Dineen yesterday will keep him out of today's game in addition to the three-day suspension imposed yesterday. He will not be able to play until Monday.
 President Han Johnson increased the suspension to five days when he received a report from the umpire today, detailing Ruth's remarks made when he was ordered off the field yesterday in compliance with Johnson's three-day suspension order which was imposed for disrupting Dineen's decision in the game Monday.
 Johnson announced that Ruth was suspended without pay and the decision will cost Babe $150 or $300 per day, which Johnson said was Ruth's salary.
 "Babe Ruth is going to behave himself, or I'll keep him out of the game all summer," said Johnson.

SCHOOL HEAD FORCES BOYS TO WEAR COATS EVEN IN HOT WEATHER

(International News Service).
 PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 21.—The school rule that all boys, no matter how high the temperature went, must be fully dressed before they enter the school was enforced in the Lawrence and Portsmouth (N. H.) high schools by Principals Horne and Gray. Those who violate this rule are punished.
 During a warm wave several of the boys went to school in their shirt sleeves. They were sent home by Principal Horne. Boys with their collars and coats on are forced to sit sweltering in their respective classes, where their girl classmates, with sleeveless blouses and throats exposed, are as cool as cucumbers.

Bizarre Sleeves and Embroidery New Mode

SLEEVE TRIMMED IN PEASANT EMBROIDERY—HAT AND COLLAR IN TUSCAN

FROCK IN PEASANT EMBROIDERY

As frocks get simpler and simpler, they depend more and more on either gay embroidery, or unusual sleeves to make them effective, or both. In the photo above is an example of the latter instance, the simple frock with embroidered trimming for effect, worn by Miss McAvoy, a "varamont star." And in the lower sketch is shown the combination of unusual sleeve, plus embroidery, to enhance a straight lined frock.

Although this sleeve is bizarre, it is typical of, not what sleeves are coming to, but what they actually have come to. The nineteen-twenty-two frock is simple, yes, but not its sleeves! For it is to this end of the dress that the designers have turned, their wondrous to perform. On them they work out their choicest and most cunning ideas; with mighty scissors they cut into the material and cut out the most eccentric-shaped sleeves—and nine times out of ten, they embroider them in peasant motifs from middle Europe.

Some of this peasant embroidery appears on the dress above that Miss McAvoy wears. It is made after the chemise type and is absolutely straight-lined, with a slit running almost up to the neck in front. Through this slit a straight slip shows of a color that harmonizes with the embroidered motif that is repeated eight times on each side of it. This motif is simple, yet pronounced, giving character to simplicity.

The sleeves are plain, just gathered, and slit from top to narrow cuff, a model of the simpler and snarer sort, that is most popular this summer for general everyday wear.

Besides the Checko-Slovanian embroidery, there is the tuscan embroidery. In the upper sketch a tight fitting cloche and matching cape collar are shown, both carried out in tuscan.
