Celebrate Opening of Road to Caves

A celebration is to be held at Grants Pass on June 26 to mark the completion of the long hoped-for road to the Oregon Marble Caves in Josephine county. It is said by those who have explored these great caves that they are destined to be one of the major tourist attractions on the Pacific coast.

One of the curious American characters of the last century was the "Old Leather Man" who for nearly 30 years tramped over eastern New York and Connecticut clad almost entirely in leather. His home was in a cave near Sing Sing, where he was found dead in 1880. He did occasional jobs of plumbing, and never accepted any recompense but food and tobacco.

He was said to have been made insane by an unfortunate love affair in France when he was a young man. According to the story, he won the heart of the daughter of a wealthy leather merchant and entered into her father's business to prove his worthiness. He speculated in leather and when the market in that commodity crashed, his prospective father-in-law was ruined and his own hopes were shattered. This unhinged his mind, and he determined to spend the rest of his life wandering around the countryside clothed in leather. His name was Jules Bourghlay.

Love's Masquerade

A Dramatic Story of Love and Romance
By Idah McGlone Gibson

GLENDENING'S VIEWPOINT

"Go on, Mill, what more has Margaret to say? Did she realize that the end had come?"

"Yes, she realized it. She wrote: 'Although Harry wrote in his poem, the other side of the picture saying: * * * Her lovelit eyes!'

As I gazed down into those wells of truth

My soul comes from its hiding place of clay,
And scorns above to where I leave
Myself behind;

To be encompassed with her tender smile means rest

* * * When she is near
Love holds the crystal chalice that makes men Gods.

"My soul is king,"

"Very, very beautiful," said Davis emphatically, "but I don't blame Margaret Earle for not wishing to hold of curiously all of Glendening's virtues while he gaily speeds down the primrose paths."

"Your comment is enlightening, Davis, but what does Margaret say about it, Mill?" put in Clavering.

"This is what she writes," said Dr. George, turning over the page:

"As Harry read that last stanza I found my eyes filled with tears. I wasn't really pitying myself. I was just saying farewell to all of my mistaken illusions."

"Harry saw the tears in my eyes and quickly across the table his hand covered mine. Again he said: 'I do not understand you, Margaret. Don't you know that it is all over. There will never be another American Beauty. You know, do you not, that I would as soon think of deceiving myself as you?'

"Something inside of me snapped, Dr. George, and the Harry Glendening that I had built up in my heart disappeared forever. The Harry Glendening that I saw opposite me at table, I knew was a deceiver, unrelentingly. It mattered not that he deceived himself more than those who loved him. The effect was always a way strewn with broken hearts."

"Harry was never in love with anyone but he was always in love with Love. He was always looking for Love—the thrills and transports of love. Having those the one who gave them to him was forgotten."

"I really do not think he could help it, Doctor George. I could not be angry with him. It rather surprised me that this knowledge did not hurt me more."

"I wondered if Harry had in some way denuded my emotions by his story. Would I wake up shortly to the same terrible pain and hurt that I had felt at first?"

"I kept asking myself this all the while he was trying to make me understand that all of it was just a trivial matter—"

"I do not think I would have forgiven him and at least have started to trust him again but I was sure that there would be others—not American Beauties, perhaps, but there were even more beautiful flowers in the garden of fair women that seem to bloom only to be gathered."

"The table seemed to dissolve."

"In front of me was the yawning path of future years dark and fearful in which I must walk alone. I came in a feeling that Fate was dealing me the same kind of a future that I had been trying to donate to Harry's wife."

For the first time I knew that Harry had had quite as much selfishness and self-contained as she had in making him irresponsible and flighty."

Who could tell how much she loved him? Surely it was not for me to judge."

"I raised my face. The reality of the little restaurant table again came into view. I knew that I had learned my lesson. I knew that justice had been meted out to me. I was paying the price the transgressor pays—always pays."

"But what of Glendening? That is what I want to know," came the impatient voice of Davis at this point.

"That dog going to get away with all this? We know he has practically ruined the lives of two good women and perhaps we might rate the American Beauty with them. Lord knows how many other hearts he has broken. Is he going to get away with it all? Are his wife, Margaret Earle, and the American Beauty going to let him sail along in calm waters and signal other ships?"

"Now, Davis, don't boil over," soothed Clavering. "You know from Harry's letter that he is very unhappy—desperately unhappy."

"Yes, and I know he will be until he can arrange another love-episode."

"Well, let's let him get over this one. What, Mill, is Margaret's version of the parting?"

Dr. Milton resumed:

"I told him that the thought of another woman—even if she were his wife—in his life had always been almost more than I could bear and that the introduction of a third made things unreal and impossible."

"Don't say that, Margaret. I cannot bear it," Harry answered in a stifled voice.

"I must say it," I protested. "I must be fair to myself as well as to you."

Tomorrow—The Day of Reckoning.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

BY MRS. ELLSBURY

A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbury Care Roseburg News-Review

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: Do you think that a wife is ever justified in opening her husband's mail, or vice versa? I would like your honest opinion on this subject, as I have a very real reason for wanting to know.

ROBIN.

Ans. I think this subject depends entirely on the parties and the circumstances. Some husbands and wives have such well grounded understandings that to open each other's mail, if they care to, is natural. In other cases certain husbands or wives would take it as an insult. If it should happen that a husband was away, and a letter should come addressed to him, that the wife was suspicious of and thought perhaps had been written by another woman, then I do not think she should open the letter.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: When a man marries a woman who has been married before and has a child, should she expect him to take care of the child, and raise it in his home? My husband was married before I married her, and has a little girl about 8 years old. The little girl lived with relatives as my wife worked before I married her and I naturally supposed the child would go on living with those. Right after we were married she went for the little girl and she has been living with us since. Do you think this was right?

Z. N.

Ans. She probably took it so much for granted that the girl would make her home with you that she never thought it worth mentioning. She naturally wants the little girl with her, and she should be with her. Perhaps also the relatives with whom the child is living would not be willing to keep her after her mother had married again and was able to provide a home for her. You should have talked this out before you were married.

Presbys Boot Ball and Lose Game

The Presbyterians literally booted and threw away a ball game last night at Bellows field in the last inning of play. When the Christians came to bat in the fifth, the score was 8 to 2 in favor of the Presbyterians. It was already beginning to show signs of darkness, and the umpire announced it would be the last inning. It looked as if it would be an easy game for the Presbyterians. Then things happened. Lane, center, first up for the Christians, struck out. Hull made a clean hit. Busch got a whack with the ball and ambled to first. Fisher made the second out, but both men went a base when Bruton was hit with the ball. A wild throw or two, and Yates made a hit, and the looks of things began to change as runs clattered across the pen. Scott walked. Orr struck out and should have retired the side, but French, catching, missed the ball, kicked it a block, another more over and Orr safe. Miles made a hit, Scott was across, the game was tied, and Orr was making for third on Miles' hit. Some of the wildest pecking ever seen on the ball field, and Orr came across with what proved to be the winning run. Lancaster ended it by going out at first, leaving the score 9 to 8 in favor of the Christians. The Presbyterians had a chance, as they came to bat. French struck out. Singleton drew out to Scott. Hewitt hit a long high fly to left and Lancaster from onto it, and the game closed.

The Christians made ten hits off Randolph, while only three hits were registered against Scott. One of the beautiful hits of the game was the three-base drive of Red Orr to the left-field fence. The Christians have now won four games, putting them in second place in the race. Thursday the Christians and Baptists play. The Baptists have lost but one game, and they do not expect to lose any more, while the Christians want to wallop them mighty bad, and say they will.

RECOVERS JUST AS HE IS ABOUT TO GIVE UP JOB

PORTLAND MAN SAYS HE OFTEN HAD TO LAY OFF DAYS AT A TIME UNTIL TANLAC ENTIRELY OVERCAME HIS ALARMING STOMACH TROUBLE.

"I was so bad off I almost give up my job, but I feel just fine since taking Tanlac," said Andrew G. Kregness, 1140 E. 11th St., North, Portland, Ore.

"For over two years I suffered dreadfully from stomach trouble. Everything I ate would sour, I bloated terribly with gas and there was a burning just like a coal of fire in my stomach. My head ached till I could do to keep from falling. I also had pains across my back so bad I could hardly stoop over. My sleep did me no good and I always got up with an awful bad taste in mouth and feeling worse than when I went to bed.

"Six bottles of Tanlac completely rid me of my troubles. I now eat anything, never lose a day from work. Tanlac sure is a great medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Woman Director of Chautauqua Here

Mrs. Bryce-Smith, who has the honor of being the first woman chautauqua director in the U. S., arrived in Roseburg today to take charge of the Roseburg Ellison-White Chautauqua program to be presented here starting next Sunday, July 25 and continuing until July 31.

Mrs. Bryce-Smith arrived here from Sebastopol, California, where she had charge of the chautauqua and she states that she is more than pleased to be allowed the opportunity of handling the Roseburg program. She is delighted with the city and the people and predicts a wonderful success for the chautauqua here.

"Our program this season is one of the best we have ever had," she said this morning. "The numbers are all good and the guarantors will have no difficulty in disposing of the season tickets when the people realize the value of the program."

The reserved seat sale for the Chautauqua will open Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the Chautauqua drug store.

Old Stuff— to Us.

The Oregon Merchants' Magazine says: "The facts are there is an opportunity for improvement in both retail and wholesale methods of distribution. These two most important links in the chain of distribution (the jobber and retailer) should come in a little closer relationship and they should study these questions and together work out this problem or some other more economical system will take the places now held by them."

You and I and the rest of the farmers have known that this long time, though we might not be able to say it in quite so nice a collection of words. That is the reason for the existence of the Farm Bureau Cooperative Exchange. They may talk about it at this late day, and perhaps improve their methods with the idea of getting larger profits without any more pain to the party who produces the profits. We got tired of talk without action, and started to find a "more economical system."
