ABOLISHING POVERTY.

A social reformer remarked the other day that he hoped to see poverty entirely removed. This was a noble and generous attitude and it did the speaker credit. He did not state how he proposed to go about it, however. Probably to accomplish this desirable end, a good deal of a change in human nature will be necessary. It will not come about while a lot of people are drinking poisonous bootleg stuff at very high prices, which undermines their health and takes money from their families. A man can't expect that he can obtain and keep any decent paying job, while he is enjoying this fiery kind of stimulation. The social reformer has got to quench his ardent thirst before he realizes his highly desirable ideal. A man who has contracted diseases by his social vices also is not likely to be free from the curse of poverty. No business wants men who labor under that curse. The people who do as little work as they can must be dealt with. The man who drags along for fear that he will work himself out of a job, is going to be out of work a lot of the time. When there are many men of this type, and a lot of them have been in evidence of recent years, their high cost production makes the prices of merchandise high, so that the ordinary run of people can't buy it. That tends to create slack work in the factories, and a lot of people are poor because their wrong working habits promote unemployment. Also there must be efficient government, so that taxes will be moderate and not impose an undue burden on industry. That means that the voters must show sense enough to put men in power who will run the government in an economical way. While the human race is eagerly desirous of seeing poverty abolished, yet changes in human nature are necessary to accomplish this end. The world should work enthusiastically toward all these reforms, but they can't be accomplished all at once.

WHERE THE POLITICIANS FAIL.

It was remarked recently when the leading bankers met in Europe to fix up some kind of financial settlement to promote the recovery of Europe, that perhaps they would succeed where the politicians and diplomats and statesmen have failed. Politicians are a bright class of men, who have a keen judgment of human nature. They have to figure on the shifting currents of public opinion, and they know how easily and by what superficial pretexts those currents are often set in motion. A faculty thus trained and developed must lead to a rather slighting view of human character, and a tendency to overlook the deeper motives and wiser insights that influence the action of communities and nations. Thus often the politicians base their programs on what seem to be the weaknesses and prejudices of human nature. They figure that a certain platform contains about all the enlightenment that the people will stand for. But sometimes they miss their guess. There are sentiments and principles and affections lying deep in the hearts of the people that can be stirred by a true leader. Such a man comes along and appeals to these deeper motives. The people rise in a movement of moral fervor, and sweep away the half truths and the subtleties of the politicians, and set new standards of advance. The world needs these leaders of insight, to help it solve the problems that resulted from the war. We need to get away from the class hostility, the industrial friction, and international jealousies of these times. The politicians are doing the best they can according to their lights, and they often show astonishing skill. Yet they have not yet been able to abolish these conflicts and antagonisms that make it so difficult for nations and communities to cooperate toward the ends of peace and industry which all desire.

Girls who bob their hair are likely to become baldheaded in after years, according to the opinion of a well known beauty artist. Thus the joy is again taken out of life for those who must meet the demands of fashion at any price.

We are just about to enter upon a two month's vacation period in order to get our poise for a long winter. Lucky is the fellow who can afford to "chalk off" the entire sixty-two days and make both ends meet.

Better lighted main streets in this city would help some to beautify things generally and assist materially in ferriting out detour signs.

Note the number of tourists passing through Roseburg each day and then figure out who is paying for our paved highways indirectly.

How about that bridge across the North Umpqua river near Glide? Has any move been made to get work started?

TREAT TO THE SALVATION ARMY SCHOOL SUNDAY

A very welcome treat was received by the Salvation Army Sunday school children Sunday when they were each one given one or more ice cream cones.

The day being warm and sultry, this treat was appreciated by all.

The Salvation Army plans to give their second annual picnic soon for their Sunday school and for all the poor children of the city.

The mark in attendance to be reached is 125.

Last year the goal was 100 which was reached and passed. A meeting was held recently at which there were 157 persons present.

The Sunday school work of the Salvation Army helps the children to have more respect for the home and teaches them the simple way of truth so that they understand it.

Captain Ford states as soon as the desired goal of 125 is reached, the picnic date will be announced.

The children are invited to attend the classes next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and to bring mother and father that they might see the work. All are welcome.

GOSH IT'S HOT!

Dear Ye ed.: A baby boy was born to us on the first of this month and we can't think of a name for him. We'll leave it up to you. DESPERATE.

Dear Desperate: Why not name the boy "Bill." He was born on the first of the month, you know.

No one can accuse Britt Nichols of getting rich off his job as city councilman. Britt is appearing this season in last season's straw hat and he looks like Tom Mix of movie fame.

Ye ed. visited the chautau last night and listened to a fine program which was marred only by the frequent blasts of Espee whistles and squawking kids. We'd like to be on the chautau platform and look over that sea of waving fans. The way some of the spectators shook their fans they must be still wearing their winter underwear.

The opera singer warbled some selections which we've heard on phonograph records and it was quite a pleasure to sit through the program last night without having to change needles.

The violinist violined great but she was so nervous. Her hand trembled like a leaf while she played.

A woman played the cello—we mean "chello"—and we'll bet that woman could have sawed a dozen cords of wood without much effort.

The audience tried to act highbrow by applauding when the singer announced she would sing a classical number.

A feller in the audience by the name of McGee blushed deeply when the singer warbled "When you and I were young, McGee."

And we saw a lot of people seated in reserve seats that we don't see how they can afford it.

And quite a few of the puppy-loves of the village were in attendance and were interested in everything but the program.

OUR MAIL BOX.

Dear Ed.: I see where Opie Read was a comin' to the shertalkua. I allus thought he was a woman until I seed his pitcher. ENLIGHTENED.

Dear Enlightened: You're like the feller who allus thought Joan of Arc was Noah's daughter.

The disabled vets are gathered in convention at San Francisco this week and congress is in session at Washington. They are just as far apart as ever and will always be so until congress quits donating money to the railroads instead of for the relief of the wounded.

OBEYING ORDERS.

Mistress: And what's your baby's name, Mandy?
 Colored Maid—Hallud. We named him from the Bible.
 Mistress—Hallud? I never heard before.
 Maid—Oh, yes'm. Ain't you never read "Hallud be Thy name?"

BREAKFAST CHATS.

He—"Confound it, ain't breakfast ready yet? I'm late as the deuce."
 She—"It will be ready in a minute. Just hold your horses."
 He—"I don't see why in thunder you can't have the meals on time."
 She—"If you don't like it get up and get your own breakfast the way other husbands do."
 He—"This coffee is cold and the eggs are boiled hard as a rock, the ham isn't even warmed through."
 She—"If you don't like the way I cook your meals why don't you hire a cook and order what you like. You say another word about the meals and I will go home."
 (Rushes out weeping.)
 And yet they say "start the day with a smile."

We read in the advertisements that "pettibockers" are on sale here. We don't have the slightest idea what "pettibockers" may be, but if it is something that women wear, it won't be long before they will be displaying them on the streets.

Many folks speak as they think—only oftener.

GLAND HOSPITALS AVOID PUBLICITY

SAN DIEGO, June 27.—(United Press.)—The establishment of gland hospitals in isolated spots, where the spotlight of publicity will not penetrate, is the next step in the rejuvenation of the middle-aged millionaires of America who desire to renew the vigor of their youth, physicians believe.

The first step to establish such a hospital will probably be taken by Dr. John R. Brinkley, famous Kansas gland specialist, who recently made a trip to Escondido, on the coast of Lower California, to inspect a site for a gland hospital.

Escondido is ideally located. It has neither telephone, telegraph, nor rail communications with the outside world. It is eight hours distant by automobile from San Diego. It is 80 miles below that city, by air line, and has a good harbor. Motor ships communicate with it bi-weekly.

Physicians point out that millionaires wishing to take a new lease on life could slip in there in their private yachts, obtain a new set of glands, recuperate in the hospital for a few days, and then board their yachts again, and leave for San Diego, Honolulu, San Francisco, or Panama, without anyone being the wiser.

The fact that, despite his millions and the utmost precautions, the secret of his rejuvenating operation leaked out from the Chicago hospital where he was confined, leads physicians to believe that the next move in bringing youth to middle age will be the establishment of hospitals specializing in gland operations far from the beaten tracks, and in spots cut off from communication with the outside world.

Oil Officials Visit—
 J. E. Balsley, district sales manager for the Standard Oil company and H. E. Fairchild, assistant, spent yesterday in Roseburg conferring with B. L. Hyland, the local manager. They have been on a trip into the southern part of the district and are now on the way back to Portland. Mr. Balsley's district includes all of Oregon, a portion of California and nearly all of Washington.

An extra measure of power with every gallon drawn from this pump,

Gasoline, mixed with air, makes gas, and gas makes power.

How much power depends primarily upon how completely the gasoline vaporizes in the carburetor.

"Red Crown" vaporizes 100 per cent. Every atom mixes with many times its weight of air and combusts cleanly and powerfully, leaving a minimum of carbon residue on spark plugs, valves and cylinder heads.

That's why you get more power and mileage and a sweeter-running motor when you use "Red Crown."

Fill at the Red Crown pump—at Standard Oil Service Stations, at garages and at other dealers.
