Powder and Paint Really Save Your Face, Expert Declares

Cosmetics Better Than Dirt In Pores of Skin, Says Dr. LeRoy Stoddard.

By JULIA MCCARTHY, International News Service Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 27.—To grow old gracefully seems to be the hope of many forward-looking young women today.

No gentle collapse after forty for them. No lavender and old lace either. That shade is suitable only for lingerie, they will tell you patronizingly, and old lace will gather mold waiting for wearers.

Every self-respecting girl, we hear, is laying away a private stock of lipsticks, face lotions, false eyelashes and assorted powders and rouges against the day when such things shall be prohibited. And just let the lazy Einstein of that period try to make a raid on the precious stuff!

Telling of Dreadful Things. Oh, now these many moons, my sisters, they have been telling us of the dreadful things that will happen to our faces if we do not mend our ways! Our poor pores will be right down in the gutter, in a manner of speaking, if we keep up our addiction to the fearful habit-forming cosmetics.

But "tomorrow we die"—these are the stirring words hurled at the censor on the eve of battle, and let gather what dark skies will, we care not while there is a waxed floor under our feet.

Not so very long ago a reputable physician and authority on dermatology, Dr. William Lathrop Love, scared us to death by getting right up at the convention of the Homeopathic Medical society to say:

"We practicing physicians cannot fail to view with alarm the increasing use of cosmetics by our young girls, not only of the genus flapper, but others of supposedly good taste. Many a girl has already ruined her complexion by these things, and we tremble to think of what many of the growing generation will look like when they reach the stage of femininity called fair, fat and forty. Unless they adopt the veil of their Asiatic sisters they are liable to be designated as frightful, fat and forty!"

Frightful at Forty.—A nice fate for the flapper and her older sister. Yet something tells us that the much-criticized damsel of today will be so hardy at forty that it would take a wrecking company to bring on a breakdown, much less injure her weatherproof complexion.

The reticule is dead—with its smelling salts and camphor. Long live the vanity case!

Our bold sentiment is echoed—or perhaps it was inspired—by Dr. LeRoy Stoddard, who has rallied to the defense of the girl with the powder-filled pores. Dr. Stoddard has become widely known both here and abroad for his work in plastic surgery, first applying his knowledge to restore soldiers' mutilated faces and later to the practical uses of lifting a right out of the old faces by a simple operation. There is little about a face that could escape him.

"Powder was very bad 25 years ago," he began, "but it is all right today."

"I mean," he explained, "that as a matter of morals—not hygiene. The woman who used powder long ago was talked about, and the one who painted her face was ostracized."

Who Foresees Vanity Box? "Who could have foreseen the vanity box of today?" he asked. "The idea that powder clogs the pores is an old one that persists."

"Surely it is better to have fine powder in one's pores than dirt. Cold creams, powders and rouges in moderation, of course, do more to preserve the skin than to injure it."

"There is only one way to clog the pores in a dangerous way. That is to varnish the body so as to include at least two-thirds of it to prevent the pores from carrying out their throwing-off processes. That brings 'toxemia'—death from poisoning."

"But it would be impossible to kill or even seriously injure one's self by varnishing one's face!"

"It's all a question of ethics. Times change. In hotel rooms now there is talcum powder for men's use and rosewood sticks for their finger-nails. Twenty-five years ago any man caught using either of those articles would be slapped on the wrist and called a 'sissy'."

"Good skin is often a heritage."

You see whole families with wonderful complexions, boys and girls both."

We asked Dr. Stoddard what he thought of the "great outdoors" as a cosmetic, apropos of Dr. Love's statement that the "color of the camper's cheek is proof that no cosmetic can camouflage nature."

"I am inclined to believe that, too, is a fallacy," he replied thoughtfully. "In England they have terrible complexions—contrary to popular belief. I know, for I was over there not long ago and observed that the prevalent outdoor life has not proved to be such a great cosmetic."

"In the United States the farmer's wife has the worst complexion."

"The best skin is found on the faces of the 'glass-case' women who live sheltered lives, mostly indoors. Look at our laborers here—do you see wonderful skins on them?"

"Of course, you don't! I am a firm believer in the power of good looks and in justifiable means to secure them. Looks give poise. And, on the other hand, nothing is quite so unpleasant to a woman as the feeling that her hands and face are not well cared for if she is to meet a crowd of well-turned-out women, for she knows her faults will be noticed. Unattractiveness tends to bring on melancholy, and a woman."

A Standard of Living

There is no real standard of American living.

Most of us live right up to the limit of our incomes. Some go even beyond and land in debt—sometimes in jail. Those who earn much, spend it, and those who earn little, spend what they have. High prices intoxicated most folks and they started right out to spend all the money they earned. Now it is over, and the remedy is—SAVE. Use our bank. We will be glad to help.

The Savings Habit is a good Habit.

Moline Policy

The president of the Moline Plow Co. says: "We must recognize that it is the duty of a manufacturer not only to produce the best possible machine, but to get it to the user as cheaply as possible."

That is why we believe in Moline goods. That is why we are able to sell guaranteed machinery at prices that you can afford to pay. That is why we do not want to sell you a machine unless it will pay you to buy it and use it. You cannot afford to buy anything unless you really need it in your business, and we cannot afford to sell you anything unless you need it. We are here for your benefit and convenience only, and the measure of our success is the saving and service we can render you. We could sell poorer quality goods, or more profitable goods—to us, but why should we? We have no interests but your interests to serve, and our aim is first, last, and all the time, to supply you with the best possible article at the lowest possible price.

On that basis you cannot afford to buy your supplies from any other but your own agency, and the sooner you recognize the fact the sooner you will put yourself in a position to own the conveniences and comforts that you have always wanted for yourself and family.

Benefit Social at Brockway

A very interesting entertainment benefit social was held in the Brockway school house last Saturday night. The purpose of the occasion was to raise the necessary funds for expenses of the Dillard baseball team.

The building was crowded to its capacity, and a very large number of people, who arrived late, were unable to get in, and were compelled to wait outside. There were beautiful baskets, and the proceeds of the sale for $7.25, amount realized from the social.

The home team expects to give another social in July to raise money for seats at the ball diamond.

The team sincerely express their appreciation to each and every one who helped them in making the social a grand success.

HAVING TROUBLE WITH LEAK

The water and light company is having considerable trouble with the leak in the main at the Deer Creek bridge. Two expensive tunnels were dug underneath the fill under the north approach, only to find that the leak was further upstream. A large crew of men have been working today at a point in front of the Camp Ground store, and are trying to locate the break. The leak is not wasting any great quantity of water in comparison with the amount supplied by the pumps carrying away about as much as the capacity of a two-inch stream under pressure. It is expected that repairs will be made soon.

EASY TO COMPLY WITH RULE

Wonder How This Idea of Identification Would Work With Suspicious Bank Cashiers.

A rule was recently established in one of Chicago's stores to the effect that any customer wishing to charge and at the same time take purchases must show the floor walker something for identification.

One day a stout woman bustled up to the glove counter, selected a pair of gloves, and said to the clerk: "I'll just take these with me. Charge them, please." The clerk filled out the necessary slip and called the floor walker.

"Have you anything by which you can be identified?" he asked. The customer flushed uncomfortably. "Why—I—I never heard of such a thing!"

"It's a new rule, madam. Every customer is required to show some mark of identification. I'm sorry, but none of our other customers have taken offense."

The woman looked about her doubtfully. "Well," she said reluctantly, "if I've got to, I suppose I must." Then quickly unfastening her collar and pointing to a large brown mole on her neck, she said: "This is the only mark I've got. I've had it all my life. If you think it's going to do your store any possible good you're welcome to look at it!"—Judge.
