Love's Masquerade A Dramatic Story of Love and Romance by Leah McElone Gibson

THE WRONGED HUSBAND

During the reading of the love letter that Claire Adams had written to Harry Glendening at the coroner's inquest...

At its close he shouted: "I'll leave it to any decent husband here whether or if he had read a letter like that he would not have started out immediately to kill the man to whom it was written."

"I did start out to find and kill him. I wish I had killed him." Then, in spite of the efforts of the policeman to restrain him, he rose dramatically from his chair, saying: "But, O judge, I did not intend to kill Claire, I loved her. But now they won't even let me see her before they put her away forever. She was good—good until he came around with his cursed flattery and blandishment."

Adams broke down and sobbed like a child and Doris wept with him. Suddenly he seemed to feel her sympathy and, looking up, he addressed himself directly to her.

"I do not know you, lady, but you're a woman and you must know women better than any of the men here. You know, don't you, that my wife was tempted beyond her strength? You know, don't you, how hard it must have been and what he must have said to her with his lying, smiling lips. You know how a woman that a man has made love him, will go to any length to prove that love?"

The words had rushed out in a torrent. No one could stop the man who held out his hands to Doris Glendening as if in supplication and spoke with tears running down his cheeks.

"Stop! Stop!" commanded the officer, but Claire Adams' husband paid not the slightest attention to him. He was bent on vindicating his wife to one of her sex—nothing else mattered to him.

At last the officer made Henry Adams understand that something was wrong. Adams turned to him inquiringly.

"That lady is Glendening's wife," said the policeman in a raucous whisper.

Adams turned whiter, if possible, than he was before. He seemed for a moment to shrivel in his chair—then he again rose to his feet. Silence gripped the witnesses to this strange scene.

"By love, he's really a man," whispered Davis to Clavering. "Look, he takes what's coming to him standing."

"I am sorry, lady," began Adams apologetically, "that I did not know who you were. But even now knowing you are Glendening's wife, I cannot take back one word I have said."

The coroner intervened, asking: "Do you know that everything you have said will be used against you?"

"I have only told the truth and you know it as well as I," asserted Adams belligerently.

"Perhaps you have only told the truth, but you have sent yourself to the chair if Glendening dies," admonished his attorney, who had been trying vainly to stop Adams all through his speech.

"I don't want to live. I hope he will die," answered Adams calmly. Then he closed his lips and answered the questions put to him in monosyllables.

Doris regained her composure before the coroner had finished his examination of Adams and he had been led away to the other side of the room. When she was called she answered with surprising calmness.

"Your name?"

"Doris Glendening."

"Wife of Harry Glendening?"

"Yes."

"Are you not divorced from him?"

"No, sir."

"Have you applied for one?"

"I did some time ago, but I have since withdrawn the application."

Clavering turned to Doris in surprise, and Davis whispered back:

"Yes, I withdrew the petition this morning."

"Did you see your husband on the night of the tragedy?"

"No, sir."

"Then you do not know whether he carried this revolver or not?"

"No, sir. I cannot be sure, but I am positive that that is his revolver. I think he probably carried it, as he seldom went out in the evening without it. He had a police permit to carry it since he was held up once or twice a year ago."

"Mrs. Glendening, did you name Mrs. Adams in your petition for divorce?"

"Yes, sir."

"Any other women?"

"No, sir."

"Do you intend living with your husband again, if he recovers?"

Tomorrow—As a Man Thinketh.

half way out and evidently the bottom of the vessel has been damaged.

The trouble occurred about midnight when there was a heavy fog. The coast guard crew at the Umpqua river station was out and at daylight was able to reach the barge and the launch. Four men aboard the Wash-tuena were taken off and Captain Martin Kennedy, John Graham and another man on the launch were saved.

In response to a call from Marsh-field the Coos Bay port tug Fearless was sent from here and is now off the Umpqua river, but she will be unable to get near to the stranded barge until high tide this afternoon. It might then be possible to pull the barge off the spit into the river. Whether the Wash-tuena can be saved depends entirely on the condition of the sea. The bar is now rough, and if the sea becomes any heavier the vessel will be dashed to pieces before she can be taken off the spit.

The Wash-tuena is 180 feet long. She was built in 1898, at Portland, and with her sister barge, the Wash-ton, was operated regularly out of the Umpqua river by the Winchester Bay Lumber company, of which R. J. Hubbard is manager. John Kiernan of Portland is one of the owners of the lumber company and the vessel.

Band Will Start Concerts Tonight

The first open-air band concert for the season will be given tonight at the court house square by the Douglas County Concert band. The band has been working hard for the concert season, and has some excellent selections to present to the music lovers of the city. Much of the effect of the opera selections will be lost because of the lack of a canopied stand, but the music will be entertaining in spite of this fact. The band is specializing this year on selections from the light operas, but in addition, has a number of fine overtures, marches, and popular numbers which will provide pleasing music for everyone. From now on, concerts will be given each Thursday night the same as was done last year. The band is directed by Jack Sheldie, who, although quite young, has proven himself to be one of the most able directors the city band has ever had.

Enjoy Picnic on Rice Creek

A most enjoyable Fourth was spent on Rice creek near the Royer home at the old picnic ground. There were about a hundred present, and ice cream and lemonade was served throughout the day. Those winning in the races were: Small girls, first race—Genevieve Wright and Francis Meredith; second race—Ethel Russell, Florence Meredith. Large girls, first race—Daphne Bushes, Evelyn Meredith; second race—Dollie Krantz, Evelyn Meredith. Small boys—first, Truman Runyan; second, Lonis Royer. Large boys—Norman Krantz. Those winning in the sack race were Ivan Williams and Truman Runyan. Girls' distant ball throw—Ely Krantz. Everyone had a thoroughly good time, and found the Rice creek vicinity a most ideal picnic spot.

Husbands Entertained With Dinner

The ladies of the New Idea club of Edenbow gave a most successful dinner on the evening of the Fourth when they entertained their husbands and families at a 7 o'clock dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Curtis. The tables were arranged under the trees on the lawn, and the decorations were artistic and abundant. The beautiful American flag greeted the eye at every turn. Covers were laid for 60. The tables were loaded with delicious food and flowers.

Assault Charge Results in Fine

YONCALLA, July 6.—Fred Kruse, residing a few miles north of Yoncalla, was arrested last Saturday by constable Montgomery for beating J. Cole. The trouble arose over some stumps being blown into Mr. Kruse's grain field by Mr. Cole, who was clearing the right of way for a county road through the Cellars estate, which J. H. Kruse has rented. Mr. Kruse was found guilty on a charge of assault and battery by a jury before Justice of the Peace Krewson, who fined him $25 and costs.

Men Wanted

For service as railroad machinists, boiler-makers, blacksmiths, electricians, sheet metal workers, pipe fitters, cooper-miths, tinters, car inspectors, car repairers, helpers—all classes under strike conditions best explained by Chairman Ben W. Hooper of the United States Railroad Board, in his statement of July 1st reading as follows: "In this case the conflict is not between the employer and the oppressed employees. The people of this country, through an act of congress, signed by President Wilson, established a tribunal to decide such disputes over wages and working conditions, which are submitted to it in a proper manner. It is the decision of this tribunal against which the shop crafts are striking. Regardless of any question of the right of the men to strike the men who take the strikers places are merely accepting the wages and working conditions prescribed by a government tribunal and are performing a public service. They are not accepting the wages and working conditions which an employer is trying to impose. For this reason, public sentiment and full government power will protect the men who remain in their position and new men who may come in." Adequate provisions have been made for the full protection of all new employees, the same as old employees who have remained loyally at work.

What Is Service?

Is it a prosperous looking individual who rides out to your place in a car bought with the profits you have made possible for him, gives you a good cigar bought with some more of those same profits, and gives you some "free" service you have paid for in the price of goods?

Or is it a price that covers only what you get, and a reasonable amount for overhead costs, leaving the rest in your pocket to use for the comforts, necessities and luxuries you have always wanted for your family? You are entitled to the same pay for hard work, good sense and saving that any other man receives. If you are not getting it you should ask yourself who is getting it. The answer is liable to send you to "see us first" the next time you need something in our line. Our ideal of service is to get you the best possible goods at the lowest possible price. The more you patronize us the better we can serve you. Tell your neighbor.

See us first—We can save you money.

Lumber Barge is Wrecked at Umpqua

MARSHFIELD, July 4.—The barge Wash-tuena, owned by the Winchester Bay Lumber company of Reedsport, is on the south spit at the entrance of the Umpqua river and may be a total loss. The gasoline launch Gazelle is also stranded on the spit. The barge was loaded with 500,000 feet of lumber bound for San Pedro.

The barge last evening was towed from Reedsport by the launches Gazelle and Queen to Winchester bay, at the mouth of the river. The anchors of the barge were dropped and it was intended to wait until the tug Samson should bring the barge Wash-tuena into the river and take out the loaded barge. However, the tide was too strong and the anchors did not hold. The launch Queen broke away from her tow and the tide carried the Wash-tuena and the launch Gazelle out. The bar was rough and the barge struck on the north spit first and then was carried over to the south spit. She is about
