WIFIE LIKES SNAKES; HUSBY GETS DIVORCE

(International News Service.) AKRON, Ohio, July 13.—Declaring that "no man should be required to live with a snake charmer, if it is not agreeable to him," Common Pleas Judge H. C. Spicer issued a decree granting the request of Walter Albright, of Akron, for a divorce from Rachel Albright, now of Saint Clairsville. The wedding took place in April, 1918.

"That's enough," said Judge Spicer, picking up his pen to sign the decree, when a witness testified that Mrs. Albright "had short skirts around her knees and long snakes around her neck" when she emerged from a snake pit at a recreation park here in 1918 while her husband was serving in the army.

TWENTY DOLLAR BILL IS FOUND IN BIRD'S NEST

(International News Service.) SHADYSIDE, Ohio, July 13.—A big windstorm dislodged a bird's nest from a rambling rose bush in the yard at the home of Michael Mochary.

The nest, abandoned some time ago by a red bird, contained a $20 bill, papers from a Bible and parts of postal money orders from Cleveland, Kenwood, Freeport, Fairport, Powhatan and Canton, Ohio; Wheeling, W. Va.; Danti, Va.; Gary, Ind., and Winslow, Ariz.

Mochary expressed belief that the articles might have been placed in the bush by thieves who failed to return for them.

EIFFEL TOWER TO SEND MESSAGES TO FARMERS

(By Associated Press.) PARIS, July 13.—The Eiffel Tower, highest building in the world, is to be put to work telling farmers when it is going to rain. Radio messages forecasting the weather are to be broadcasted three times a day. These will be received at local stations, where bells will be rung—three peals for rain, six for frost, ten for a storm.

GLENDENING'S CHANGES

Davis took Margaret's cablegram to Clavering as soon as he had read the morning papers. The letter was just leaving to visit Milton and asked if he might show her message to him. Davis readily agreed.

"What do you think Jim, about her coming home?" she asked Dr. Milton, tremulously. "You see she doesn't speak about Glending. Do you think she has heard that he was shot?"

"Of course, I don't know anything about it, Milt. I didn't know how much of our American news gets printed over there, but it really looks to me as though at last Margaret Earle has been able to see the difference between a real man and the stuffed head with feet of mud."

"At last, Milt. I am rather sorry for Glending. I am very sure that he can never live in this climate again. And I am also very sure that he will hate to be away from his friends. With his temperament living anywhere because he must, will be punishment enough for him."

"You, of course, know, Milt, how fond Glending is of his friends."

"I have heard how fond he is of the company of his friends," corrected Dr. Milton, in a voice which made Clavering understand that Milton would never forgive Glending even if Margaret Earle did.

After arranging to accompany Milton to the funeral of his wife, Clavering went to Glending's room where he found Harry in a very feverish state.

"I am glad you came, Jim," he said. "I have something of great importance to say to you. I was afraid you wouldn't get here in time." Then after he had sent the nurse from the room, he whispered as though he were afraid the walls would hear:

"Keep Doris away from me for a few days longer, will you old man?"

"What's on your mind now, Harry? I thought you were anxious to see Doris and get her forgiven."

Instead of making any comment Glending thrust an early edition of an afternoon paper into his hands with a small item on the first page marked.

Clavering read: "Mrs. Margaret Earle is returning home unexpectedly. She is on the Aquitania which left Liverpool yesterday. This will be a surprise to Mrs. Earle's many friends who were under the impression when she went aboard a few weeks ago that it was for a prolonged stay."

"When asked, as she boarded the ship, if she could give for publication to Clavering for her change of plans, she smiled.

"It is a woman's reason—it is just because."

Clavering read the paragraph through twice and frowned. He saw, even before Glending spoke, that Harry thought Margaret had seen some news item about his being shot and was hurrying home to him.

At first Jim thought that he would disabuse Harry's mind by telling him of the cablegram that Davis had received from Margaret. Then he decided he could not do so without betraying both Margaret and Dr. Milton. So he said:

"It would be hard work, Harry, to keep Doris away. She feels that in a way, she is somewhat to blame for the whole thing. She told Davis that if she had forgiven you when you went to her the other day, this would probably never have happened. She wants you to forgive her quite as much as she wants you to be assured that she has forgiven you."

Harry groaned.

"Jim, I wonder if you think I am utterly graceless if I tell you that at the present moment I do not want to be forgiven. I only want to look upon the face of Margaret Earle. Oh, Jim, if I had not been such a fool; if I had just been able to have been true to Margaret for two weeks we would now be on our way to Quito."

"I expect you have seen, Harry, in the papers that Claire Adams wrote you a letter in which she said she thought she was going to Quito with you."

"Yes, I saw it—I saw it!" I must have been insane to have told her that I would go anywhere with her. She was very beautiful, but after I got tired of looking at her she bored me to death—poor thing. And yet I could not leave her alone. This cursed conceit of mine made me want to be flattered. Margaret had hurt my pride.

"Oh, you cannot despise me more than I do despise myself, but you know the day before all this happened, I really did come to the conclusion that I would try to turn over a new leaf. I went to Doris and asked her if it were not the best for both of us to begin all over."

Of course at that time I did not realize that we could never do this. Fate had to give me this hard bump to make me understand that one can no more go back and live over one's past in a cleaner and better way than one can stay the calendar and turn back time whose rushing course is always onward to eternity."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

BY MRS. ELLSBURY

A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsbury Care Roseburg News-Review

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am an 18 year old girl, seriously in need of advice so I have come to you. I wish you would print this answer just as soon as you can. Another girl and I were chums for years, clear through the grade schools and on into high school. She left here three years ago, and we wrote to each other during that time. She could not come for a visit very well until this year, but now she has come to spend the summer with me.

My mother taught me to be a good Christian girl. I attend church and Sunday school regularly and belong to several church organizations. I try my best to do what is right always. My girl friend has changed greatly in the three years that I have not seen her. All she thinks about is parties and dances and stealing out for rides or walks with boys that she should not be with. She makes fun of my church work and church socials, and tries to get me to go with her to parties and dances. I cannot stand a girl of that kind, and I am sure I don't know what to do. She is a guest in my house. How would you advise me to treat her.

WORRIED PRISCILLA. Ans. If you are a good Christian girl it is your duty to help others all you can. Can you not do your part to show this girl friend that the things you do mean a good time to her, instead of stealing out for rides or walks, try to show her that she can have boy friends of the kind that you do not have to steal out with. Surely you know that kind yourself, and can introduce them to her. If you would be really fair you would go to some of the things she liked to go to, and in return she would go to some of your affairs.

Dancing is entirely a matter of your own conscience. If you think there is harm in it, don't dance, but don't try to keep her from doing it if she cares to and sees no harm in it. Attend parties with her. There is certainly no harm in a nice party. Remember that you cannot lead any one to a Christian life by a rope around their neck, but you can do a great deal toward it if you lead a simple Christian life yourself, without preaching, and show that in this manner one finds the greatest happiness.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I have a very good boy friend that I have known for a long time and I don't know whether to take him seriously or not. He is continually asking me about getting married and what a nice husband he would make and all that, and he certainly does puzzle me because I do not know how to take him. Should I be serious about it, and act as if we were engaged. R. S.

Ans. By no means be serious about it. Joke and laugh with him in the same manner that he does with you. He is not serious and you would make yourself ridiculous if you took him seriously. When he becomes in earnest about it, you will not be left in doubt as to whether he means it or not.

PUPS TO TRAVEL BY AIRPLANE

NEW ORLEANS, July 13.—Two nervous and highly sensitive coyote pups from Miles City, Mont., will travel by airplane to the American Legion national convention in New Orleans next October, convention committee headquarters has been advised.

Captured by the adjutant of Custer post of the Legion in Miles City, the young coyotes will make the convention trip as an advertisement of the productivity of Montana. Their capture was effected when the Legion officer, crawling into a coyote hole with a flashlight took the pups from their mother, who, blinded by the light, offered no resistance. The pups are now about a month old and are eager to abandon their milk teeth on unprotected bands.

Traveling through the air with wild animals seems to be a habit of Montana Legionnaires. An airplane brot a fery bobcat from the Montana wilds straight to the feet of Marshal Foch on the Legion convention platform at Kansas City last year. When the French leader toured the country aff-wards under the auspices of the Legion, all the diplomacy of his staff had to be called into play to handle the Montana animal. It is now one of the problems of Paris zoo attendants.

Men Wanted

For service as railroad machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, electricians, sheet metal workers, pipe fitters, coppersmiths, tinners, car inspectors, car repairers, helpers—all classes under strike conditions best explained by Chairman Ben W. Hooper of the United States Railroad Board, in his statement of July 1st reading as follows: "In this case the conflict is not between the employer and the oppressed employee. The people of this country, through an act of congress, signed by President Wilson, established a tribunal to decide such disputes over wages and working conditions which are submitted to it in a proper manner. It is the decision of this tribunal against which the shop crafts are striking. Regardless of any question of the right of the men to strike the men who take the strikers places are merely accepting the wages and working conditions prescribed by a government tribunal and are performing a public service. They are not accepting the wages and working conditions which an employer is trying to impose. For this reason, public sentiment and full government power will protect the men who remain in their position and new men who may come in." Adequate provisions have been made for the full protection of all new employees, the same as old employees who have remained loyally at work.
