

The new TONIC Laxative

AT LAST medical science has produced the perfect laxative—and from the source from which you would naturally expect such a laxative—the Italian prune.

Prunes have long been famous for their laxative qualities when used as a food. Syrup of Prunes is made by combining the cathartic qualities of the prune with aromatic cascara sagrada (chittam) by means of a secret formula.

Syrup of Prunes is pleasant to take, prompt yet mild in its action and is not habit forming in any way. Equally good for babies, old people and all ages in between.

VISITORS AT THE AUTO CAMP GROUNDS

Short Stories of the Strangers Who Stop in Their Journey Along the Highway.

It appears that misstatements concerning the Roseburg camp grounds have been made. It is being stated to the east side of the grounds free to all campers and some are going there and are satisfied when an attempt is made to collect the fee of 50 cents per car from them. At the recent camp ground convention held here Roseburg subscribed to the rules adopted throughout the state for camp ground control and is making the same charge as other places. In order that the grounds might be cared for arrangements were made with Mr. Young whereby he has control and full charge of both sides.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodfield and sister, Mrs. Landry and son are touring the state. They are quite well known here, having visited in the city previously.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Day of San Francisco, are enroute to Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Watson and child of Alameda, are on their way home after visiting The Dalles and Portland.

There were forty-four new cars at the camp ground last night and 166 new people in addition to a large number of holdovers.

Salem Merchants to Pick Berries

SALEM, (July 18.—Closing of all business houses in order that the help might aid in harvesting the loganberry crop which is going to waste because of lack of pickers, was proposed this noon by Elmer Dane at the luncheon of the Commercial club in the Marion hotel.

Over 25 per cent of the crop is going to waste, it was pointed out, and it is believed that with the business houses of the city closed, several hundred pickers can be obtained.

Mayor George E. Halvorsen asserts that he is in favor of the business men and city taking some action to relieve the situation, while Edward Schunke, president of the business men's league, stated that he had taken up the matter with several of the business men, who were not in favor of the proposition, and did not believe that the situation could be much relieved.

William Gilchrist, head of the Phez farms, proposed that the business houses close three half-days, the help going to work in the morning and the stores opening in the afternoon. To prevent the store employees from not appearing at the berry fields, all employers would require their employees to show their picking checks.

Mr. Gilchrist also proposed that the employers and proprietors of stores provide transportation for the members of their sales forces to reach the berry patches.

On a motion put by Otto Hartman, Mayor Halvorsen, presiding, asked for those in favor of closing stand, and it was decided that the stores should close on the Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings.

Ex-Beaver to Be Major League Star

PORTLAND, Ore., July 17.—Members of the Portland club of the Pacific Coast Baseball league are agreed on the question of the value of Willie Kamm, San Francisco third baseman, who recently was sold to the Chicago White Sox for $100,000, the greatest price ever paid for a minor league player.

"I've been in baseball many years and I never saw such third-basing in my life as Kamm showed here," declared "Rowdy" Elliott, Portland catcher, while the Seals were here recently.

"We gave him about every kind of a chance a third baseman ever gets and they all were hard ones. He'd scoble the ball from one angle one minute and from another angle the next. Boy, he's a wonder and a fine young fellow on top of it all. Greatest major league prospect I ever saw."

Tom Turner, the Portland manager, overheard the last remark and promptly denied it.

"Major league prospect nothing," Turner said. "Not on my life or yours. I don't figure Kamm a major league prospect at all. All Kamm is, boys, is a major league star. Get that? He's a major league star, right now, not a prospect."

"Take my word for it, he will go as fast and be as much of a sensation in the big leagues as he is on the coast. After Kamm has been once around the circuit with the White Sox, I'm betting that the newspapers will be hailing him as the best fielding third baseman since Jimmy Collins."

Full Swing; Proper Stance

By ALEC HURD (Written for the United Press.)

CHAPTER VI.

Editor's Note: The sixth number of the author's series of instructions on playing golf, deals with reflections on the full swing and the proper stance.

All beginners at golf are ambitious, and it has often occurred to me that their ambition is the cause of their undoing. It is so frequently centered on one stroke—the full swing. When the swing is thoroughly mastered a man is on the way to the blissful realms of "plus" something. The great mistake of most beginners is in wanting to tackle the full swing at the start. Many seem to think that the driver is the only club in the bag that counts.

The full swing is one of the hardest things in golf. I would like to advise all beginners to take great pains not to overdo the movement. Many are inclined to take the club too far over the left shoulder, with the result that the clubhead dips too much from the horizontal. Under-do the length of the top swing rather than exaggerate it, and you will much sooner acquire accuracy. Novices generally regard the full swing as a movement quite different from the three-quarter, half or quarter swing. They think there is no special connection between the four swings. As a matter of fact, the movements are fundamentally the same, except that they are curtailed or lengthened according to the shot required.

The stance is very important. It is also difficult to teach. In simple words, the beginner should look as though he were about to connect squarely with the ball; that is, he should stand as squarely as possible, his left shoulder pointing a little to the left.

There are three different stances—the open, the square, and the closed—and they are all a matter of convenience. I would advise the beginner to adopt that which is most natural to him. The open stance is the one in which the right foot is placed six inches further forward than the left. The feet are nearer together—about 18 inches apart—in the closed stance; and for the square stance the feet are absolutely square to the direction for which you are aiming, and the toes of both feet are on the same line.

An important thing for the beginner to remember is to make up his mind quickly which stance suits him best and to stick to it. It is simply asking for trouble to waver.

Every stage of the golf stroke must be a complete movement, with head, eyes, and body working in absolute unison.

RAT BITTEN BY A RATTLER KILLS IT AND LIVES

(International News Service.)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 18.—Charles Johnson, a farmer, living south of Clyde, caught a rattlesnake and housed it in a box. He had planned to bring the snake to Rochester and turn it over to Peter Gruber, better known as "Rattle-snake Pete."

A rat of enormous size ventured into one of Johnson's steel traps. The rodent was so large that he could not enter the trap. The springs held him by his front legs.

Rat Fights Snake.

Astonished at the size of the rat, Farmer Johnson thought a little sport would be appreciated. Inviting several farmer friends, Johnson managed to drop the rat into a potato pit and then shook the box holding the rattler over it. The snake soon fell into the pit and coiled up in a corner. It was expected that the snake would make short work of the rat.

For a few minutes nothing happened, both snake and rat taking opposite corners and eyeing each other very carefully. Suddenly the snake began an attack. With lightning swiftness it shot out its head, caught the rat unawares and sank its fangs in the animal's nose. The rat squealed with pain and rage and actually tore itself loose in a desperate struggle in which both rat and rattler rolled over the floor of the pit.

Rodent Chokes Reptile.

Next the rat sprang at the snake. As the snake squirmed the rat leaped into the air and caught the snake back of its head, tearing the flesh and inflicting a deep wound with its teeth. The energy of the rat's attack apparently puzzled the snake, which was bitten time and again. Finally the rat secured a firm hold on the snake directly under its head and hung on until the serpent was fairly choked to death.

The farmers covered the pit with cardboard and left rat and dead snake alone overnight. The rat was found to be alive and active in the morning. Much surprise was expressed that the rat was alive, as it was believed the snake's poison would have ended the rat's life in the night. Johnson decided that the rat had earned a right to live. Accordingly the rodent was enticed into a box containing a quancity of dry bread and cheese. From zuma swamp, a mile away, and given the farm it was carried to the Monte / Its liberty.
