

INGHAM'S NEWEST SUMMER MODE

THE CHINTZ DRESS IS THE SMARTEST THING THIS SUMMER, WITH CARTWHEEL HAT.

MAY McAVOY IN AN IDEAL SUMMER DRESS OF SIMPLE CHARM AND DOTTED SWISS.

THE GINGHAM DRESS BECOMES STYLISH.

Nowadays the petite dress of organdy is worn over a shadow proof petticoat and that's all there is—

The dotted swiss is likewise an old material that used to be made up into fussy affairs for the old-fashioned belle—but now look at the simplicity of it as made up in 1922, shown in the photo above. It is worn by May McAvoy, Paramount star, who wears it in her forthcoming Paramount picture, "The Top of New York."

NEVER before in the history of clothes have summer clothes been more simple, or more charming.

Gingham, as used in other years, made up dresses so ordinary or so plain that they could only be suitable for morning wear in the neighborhood. But as gingham dresses are being fashioned this year, they are exquisite in daintiness with hats and to match—made up so fetchingly that they can hold their own at a luncheon, or on a roof garden. They are most proper for city wear in down-town districts.

As for organdy, it is a thing of beauty and a joy in the hot city. What a difference between the straight simple organdy frocks of today, and those that were worn by mother or grandmother many years ago! They used to have organdy frocks too, billowy things worn over countless starched petticoats. Extremely picturesque and all that sort of thing, but hot as the dickens.

SUCKERS ON CORN HARMLESS

Many Farmers Have Mistaken Idea That Earless Stalks Are Hindrance to Growth.

Many farmers are possessed with the idea that the suckers or earless stalks which grow from an ear-bearing stalk of corn, are a hindrance to the best growth of the latter; and valuable hours are sometimes spent removing them. But experiments during two successive years on Nebraska farms demonstrated that corn with the suckers left undisturbed outyielded that from which the suckers had been removed. Their leaves, like the others, would seem to perform useful office in absorbing nutritive elements from the atmosphere for the benefit of the ear on the main stalk.

Cleanliness

First Essential to Beautiful Skin. The first rule is the same as for any skin surface. Remove excess, cleanse the pores.

But you must aim at Sebum—particular scalp oil. Dissolve it, remove it, then get into pores. Do this in the right way—with studied, tested, scientific methods.

Our ad in Wednesday's issue will tell you how to do this with Olive Shampoo.

"Cave Man Love" Illusory Dream, Lady Dorothy Mills Tells Flappers

LONDON, June 22.—American "flappers" who long for "cave man" love are grasping at an illusory dream, according to Lady Dorothy Mills.

Lady Dorothy has visited the cave dwellers of the Troglodytes to gather material for a novel. In the following article she sets forth her impressions of the "cave man."

By LADY DOROTHY MILLS (Written for the International News Service.)

Four days' journey southwest from Gabes, rail head of Tunisia, brought me to the mountains of the Troglodytes, or cave dwellers.

These cave men are not the hirsute creatures of the fiction magazines—I doubt if any such still exist in the world! They are what is left of the Berbers, who, from the dim recesses of time, long before the Arabs and the Negro races from the south swept over North Africa, have lived among the mountain tops for protection in a constant warfare against the predatory tribes across the Tripolitan frontier.

The villages lay among high mountains, black, twisted and desolate. From a kilometer away they are quite invisible, being just a rabbit warren of little caves hollowed out of the solid rock, reached by narrow winding goat-paths from which in time of warfare they can hurl down rocks on the approaching enemy.

Cave Houses Comfortable. Except for lack of light and ventilation the cave houses were not too uncomfortable, generally consisting of one long, narrow room hollowed out of the rock with a raised ledge or alcove covered with rugs of camels' hair where the family slept.

Meals were gargantuan affairs—five different dishes of mutton, some beans, goats' milk and grayish-brown bread of which one had in common politeness to eat till one felt stiff. At night they used politely to bar me in, and, rolled cocoon-wise in the rugs, I slept on the stone ledge, which was more than a little cold and hard, while the fleas ran races over me.

In all the Troglodyte towns that I visited I was treated with the greatest hospitality, and regarded with the keenest interest and curiosity, especially by the women. It took infinite fineness and tact to prevent the latter from undressing me half a dozen times a day, so anxious were they to know exactly what I wore.

are literally over-run with custom. Nothing more to be desired in our town.

The News-Review is a daily and much-appreciated visitor, and we all read it, and we never pass over the "colym" of the "Prune Picker," even if he is away "Packing Prunes." He leaves a competent "sub" in his place.

Our town paper is always a leader, editorially, socially and financially. This morning one of our leading citizens suggested to us that "Campbell indulged in fine sarcasm occasionally." We replied that we also were inclined to brief sarcastic utterances on occasion, so it may be an atmospheric indication that is of short duration—so let us forget it.

OBITUARY

The funeral of Mrs. Lucy Lovelace, age 55 years, who died at the Eugene hospital, Friday, July 13, 1922, was held at the Christian church in Roseburg, Oregon, Monday, Harry R. Neat, of the Bible Standard Mission of Eugene, officiated at the funeral.

Mrs. Lovelace was a life-long resident of Douglas county and an active member of the Christian church for more than 20 years. "Blessed are they who die in the Lord."

The Coburg church was filled with sympathetic friends and neighbors. The remains were laid to rest in the Odd Fellows' cemetery near Coburg. A large concourse of friends and relatives followed the remains to their last resting place. The ladies of the Rebecca lodge, of which Mrs. Lovelace was a member, had charge of the services at the grave.

The testimony of all who knew her may be summed up in four words: kind, amiable, affectionate and faithful. Her sickness being short, her death was a severe shock. She leaves a husband and six children, who though they sorrow, sorrow not as those who are without hope. In their heavy affliction their many friends deeply sympathize with them. The surviving members of the family are A. E. Lovelace, of Coburg, husband; Mrs. Addie Fortin, of Cottonwood, Idaho; Mrs. Emma Boyle, of Roseburg; and Mrs. Letta Brown, of Eugene, daughters; Harry Lovelace, of why my skin was white and why my hair curled; and one of them counted my toes twice over to make sure that I had the usual number.

Sought Personal Details.

They wanted to know every possible sort of intimate detail about my private life, and in particular how many wives my husband had at home, and whether I was the favorite wife.

Their social status is merely that of superior livestock. A husband can on any or no pretext divorce his wife by simply making a verbal statement before the head man of the village. He then takes back the clothing or jewels with which he has dowered her, and is merely bound, if she came from a distance, to provide her with a donkey to carry her back to her parents.

I have often been asked since my visit how the cave man makes love. It is disappointing to have to upset a popular idea, but as far as I could ascertain he appears to make love much as any other man does. Apparently he finds no need for a club, since he does not as a rule possess one.

Courtship Is Formal. His courtship is formal and rather expensive. It is done through his parents, and he is expected to provide the trousseau of camels' hair cloths and colored silks, and, if he is rich, some jewelry of beaten metal.

The value of his offerings depends upon his means and the beauty, age and eligibility of the lady. A bride over 18 would expect comparatively little.

I do not think that the role of cave man or woman would suit the normal civilized being. Cave life, though picturesque enough for a short time, would scarcely, I think, gratify a jaded appetite for sensation.

The social and domestic codes are in their own way just as rigid as ours, and disregard of them more swiftly punished. One has to be just as careful what one says or does in a Troglodyte cave as in a Mayfair drawing room.

I fear that the people who may succeed in realizing their dream of a return to primitivism will find many of the disadvantages of civilization without any of its comforts or conveniences. And modern woman in particular resents the very back role she would have to play in the scheme of life. There is no room for feminism in a cave.

CAPTAIN COLE TO RETIRE

NICHOLASVILLE, Ky., July 22.—Captain S. S. Cole, aged 94, reputed to be the oldest person in the employ of the federal government, announced today his intention of retiring as superintendent of the national cemetery at Camp Nelson and came to this city so that his little granddaughter may enjoy the advantages of town life.

Captain Cole was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln and was appointed to his present position 40 years ago by Robert Lincoln, then secretary of war.
