TATE PRESS COMMENT

OVERTAKEN.

Shadow has thickened. The last faint ray of hope. The die, declared the Oregon court in denying a reversal.

Under have been more sordid. Of Dennis Russell, the inmate, for whose life he will have his own. The drama was of the darkest. For motives best known, but presumably those of a cultured clubman chose Russell the victim of his atrocity. A slowly kindling anger nor of a moment contributed motive and its terrible enactment, coldly, and with the murderer laid his plans. A body of the victim was to be his own corpse. He purposed, and with no trace of emotion he set about the deed.

was slain at night by a rifle shot by the roadside. The body of an automobile. If the murderer's impassive had not shrunk from playing the victim. With dynamite he shattered the tell-tale head. He sought to char the body, and would find a perfect murderer in this murder.

took Brunfield, took him to his lips. It brought the fugitive back to the shadow, and proved him guilty. The law was. It carried until he had very legal obstacle to fate. Every obstacle had been removed. And fairly it dealt with. —Oregonian.

COOL AT THE WHEEL. A road company would ever of employing an engineer. He would be discharged. He would find difficulties. Employment on that or road.

People are sick of it. Here we are correct in saying. Strongest sentiment in Jackson regarding the recall.

SOILS IMPROVED BY COVER CROPS

Used for More Than 100 Years by Farmers Who Found Practice Profitable.

THREE PURPOSES OF LEGUMES

Universal Rule to Plant in Time to Secure Good Growth Before Freezing Weather—Of Especial Value to Truckers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Planting cover or green manure crops is a matter which requires attention in September in most parts of the United States, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Clover, vetch, and other legumes serve the triple purpose of adding humus to the soil, accumulating nitrogen, and preventing soil erosion. With some tender berry and fruit crops they also serve to protect the roots from severe winter weather. Outside of the nitrogen-forming plants, rye is largely used as a cover crop sown in the fall and plowed under in the spring to add organic matter to the soil. The cover-crop problem varies largely with locality, but for over-winter purposes there is one rule which is universal, and that is to get the crop in the ground in time to secure good growth before freezing weather.

A Practice of Long Standing.

The use of clover or some other legume to enrich the soil is generally considered a cardinal agricultural practice in the humid sections of the United States. It antedates by three-fourths of a century the monumental discovery that legumes store up nitrogen from the air. The belief that clover was a valuable improver rested first on experience, and later experience was substantiated by the discovery of the relation between the legumes and the nodules bacteria.

Other legumes, as the cowpeas, the Japan clover and bur clover in the South, and crimson clover on the Atlantic coast, have come into use in the territory, not well adapted to red clover. The various vetches are held in widespread favor, different varieties being employed according to climate and crop conditions.

The time of planting and the best crop to use is a matter which local conditions must dictate. Along the north Atlantic coast it is considered best to get these crops in from the first to the middle of August, while in the extreme South the planting may be deferred to early October. In the extreme North hairy vetch is favored as a legume cover, or green manure crop, but rye is also largely planted. From middle Pennsylvania to the north Alabama line the crimson clover gives good results. In the extreme South bur clover, vetch, and crimson clover are used, as well as velvet beans and cowpeas.

Broadcasting Seed Is Favored. Methods with cover crops vary greatly. In the South they are customarily sowed between rows of cotton at the last picking. It is also common to sow the winter crop between corn rows before harvest. Wherever clean cultivation is practiced the soil is likely to be in shape for broadcasting the seed. If convenient, it can be harrowed in. In orchards a light harrowing or disking may be employed if the ground is free from sod. Care must, of course, be taken not to injure the roots. The crop is usually plowed under in the spring, but this is not always done with orchards. Data collected in all parts of the United States shows a general benefit from this form of agriculture.

Cover crops are of especial value to small gardeners and truckers, who often find it both difficult and expensive to obtain stable manure. They add the humus which is so necessary to maintain a good physical condition of the soil.

Problems of Average Farm. One of the Most Important is to Arrange Work to Obtain Profit From Each Department. To arrange the work of the farm so that each department can be made to turn a profit is one of the important problems of the average farm. Where silos are added to the farm buildings a change of farm management must follow. Less hay is needed, less land is required for pasture, more stock can be kept on the land, more land must be used for corn, or at least sufficient corn must be planted to fill the silos. Less labor is required to feed the stock, but more must be provided during the short season of silo filling.

"We've Done the Jews a Lot of Good," Says Ford, Answering Hapgood Expose

Nation-wide interest in Norman Hapgood's expose of how Henry Ford was tricked into his campaign against the Jews by Zionist sympathizers in the United States, has followed the publication of the first article of the series in the June Hearst's International. Mr. Ford himself professes ignorance of the activities of his associates in the Anti-Jewish campaign. In an interview in Detroit a few days ago, Mr. Ford declared: "I don't know anything about this. Of course, I did not handle the details of gathering information about the Jews. Everything we have printed about the Jews has been done by the Jews in many ways. It has pointed out to them many of the faults of their race they never considered before, and I have not the least doubt that it has helped many of them to make more money."

Already the campaign is ranked by many with the famous "peace ship" Oscar II, on which the Detroit manufacturer spent a fortune as comic opera on an international scale. It was the ridicule which followed the "peace ship" venture, in which Rosika Schwimmer, an Austrian Jewess and well-known peace advocate, succeeded in enlisting Ford's support, Ford intimates say, which resulted in his enmity toward the Jews. Across the pages in the most approved "movie" fashion flash Russia's spies, mysterious symbols, plots, and counter plots.

Local Couple Are Quietly Married

A very quiet wedding was solemnized Tuesday evening at the Catholic parsonage, when Miss Rose Brislin became the bride of Frank L. Henning, of Hutchinson, Kansas.

The bride is the accomplished daughter of S. R. Brislin, formerly of Looking Glass, but now of Roseburg. The bridegroom for the last two years has been chief at the Grand Grill, but is now in charge of the Roseburg hotel kitchen. After the wedding, the guests enjoyed a delightful luncheon at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Harry Lancaster. The young couple expect to remain in this city for the present, but will later move to Kansas, where they will visit Mr. Henning's parents.

Attorney Coshaw Takes Law Partner

Judge George P. Jones of Forsyth, Montana, has arrived in Roseburg and will become a law partner of Attorney O. P. Coshaw, the firm name of Coshaw and Jones, having been adopted. Judge Jones served for a number of years as Judge of the 18th judicial district of Montana, a position corresponding to circuit judge of this state. He was one of the leading attorneys in Montana and is considered a lawyer of more than ordinary ability. His family is now visiting relatives at Creswell and will come to Roseburg at a later date.

Don't miss the return engagement of the Seven Serenaders from O. A. C. Oswald's big dance orchestra Tuesday evening, August 1st, at the Armory.

Are You the Man Who "Never Reads Advertisements"?

Some men, who are neither blind nor illiterate, claim sincerely that they "never read advertisements."

Yet, if you could investigate, in each case you would find that the man who "never reads advertisements" used an advertised tooth paste or shaving cream or soap. If he owns an automobile it will be an advertised car. If you ask his opinion of any automobile he will reply in words that might have been lifted bodily from an advertisement of that automobile.

Advertising has formed his opinions to a great degree. He may have received his information through others who obtained their knowledge from advertising. But it is a fact that no man can escape the effect of advertising even if he does say he "never reads advertisements."

Not one of us ever reasoned out entirely from his own mind that the earth is round. If we had not read it or heard it we would never have known it.

In these days of good, truthful, helpful advertising to say, "I never read advertisements" is merely your way of saying, "I don't read all advertisements."
