THAT DULL ACHING

Don't worry and complain about a bad back. Get rid of it! For weak kidneys, lame and aching backs, your neighbors recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this statement:

Mrs. M. B. Hughes, 524 Fullerton St., Roseburg, says: "I am glad to say a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills for I know they are a fine remedy. I have used them with benefit when my kidneys were out of order and I had dull backaches and felt run down. My kidneys acted irregularly but Doan's Kidney Pills, from Chapman's Drug Store, soon relieved the trouble and I felt better in every way."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hughes had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

NON-PARTISANS LOSE CONTROL NORTH DAKOTA

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 2.—Control of the Non-Partisan league's economic program in North Dakota has passed completely out of the hands of the league supporters.

State enterprises, such as a central state bank, the huge new state central elevator and flour mill at Grand Forks, state insurance and other farm enterprises, will be managed in the future by the opponents of the Non-Partisan league.

In other words, all of the economic experiments to help the farmers of North Dakota cut and to break the grasp which it is said the big private millers of Minneapolis had on the wheat growers of North Dakota, will now pass into the hands of the enemies of the league for administration. The economic program for the agriculturalist has been regarded as the foundation stone of the league.

Final returns from the recent primary in North Dakota have served to demonstrate the truth of the foregoing. It was known within three days after the primary that the Non-Partisan league had been successful in nominating its candidate for United States senator, Lyon J. Frazier, ex-governor, while it had failed to elect Governor Neates, anti-league, in his race for re-nomination.

But not until within the last few days was it learned definitely that control of the state's industrial committee, charged with administration of the state enterprises, had passed out of the hands of the Non-Partisan league. That was the vital question in the state economic experiment and the league believed for several days after the primary that it had won.

The final figures, however, show that out of a total vote of more than 225,000 in the state, the anti-league candidates won in both instances by a margin of approximately 10,000. This gives the Independent Voters' league complete control of the governing board of the state.

EATS ENOUGH FOR FOUR MEN

Probably Largest Human Consumer of Food in the World Threatens to Afflict Russia.

Highly interesting is the coincidence that the largest human consumer of food in the world should be a Russian, and, though at present outside that distressed country, he is announced as anxious to return to it in order to go to work on his father's farm.

The giant, Kazanoff, by name, is described in the Journal of the American Medical Association as being nine feet three inches tall and weighing 485 pounds, his proportions being symmetrical. Four men's a day are needed to stoke his physical engine, hunger being his governing emotion. In 24 hours he will consume from four to five pints of milk, from fifteen to twenty eggs, four pounds of meat, five or six loaves of bread and large quantities of potatoes, beans and other vegetables, washing down this gargantuan repast with from four to six pints of wine and eight to twelve pints of beer.

Typical of the monstrous life of a circus freak, this man mountain longs for his native Siberia, where his father is a farmer in moderate circumstances, and soon will leave Hungary for his home. The hope is plainly expressed that famine conditions are not prevalent at his destination, for the reason that, as he needs the quantity of food that will feed four average healthy men, he will be four times as hungry as his neighbors and therefore will become a menace to himself and the community.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PLANTS NEED COLD WEATHER

Experiments Have Shown That in Northern Countries a Certain Amount is Essential.

According to common belief, cold weather causes plants to become dormant during the fall, while warm weather the succeeding spring again betrays new growth. Intensive investigations of Dr. Frederick Y. Coville of the federal Department of Agriculture, which have been conducted over a period of ten years, and which have covered every phase of this subject, demonstrate that both of these traditional theories are erroneous. Dormancy in our native trees and shrubs begins some time before the start of cold weather each winter; the appearance of Jack Frost is not necessary for the establishment of complete dormancy. Furthermore, after such a condition of dormancy has developed, exposure of the plants to the ordinary growing temperature thereafter does not arouse them from their lethargy so that they begin growth anew.

Interestingly enough, the Coville experiments show that plants which have responded to the lure of autumnal and winter dormancy will not react properly and resume normal growth the following spring unless they are subjected during the interim to a period of chilling. A certain amount of cold is essential to stimulating the plant growth—Scientific American.

LIARS PRETTY WELL MATCHED

American Evidently Found Foolman Worthy of His Steel, in Old English Farmer.

An American poultry farmer went over to England to have a look round the poultry farms there and see where the farmers were making mistakes. He did not hesitate to tell how far advanced was the art of poultry keeping in America, and upon several very tall yarns on that subject.

Twenty chickens from twelve eggs appeared to be an everyday occurrence in the United States, if the stories he told could be believed. But a bluff old English farmer was not unduly impressed. "Happen, mister," said the old man, "ye have never seen as many as a hundred chickens hatched by one hen at a setting?"

"Was," answered the American, "I can't say that I have, but—"

"Well, then, listen here, mister; I have," returned the farmer. "Down Ipswich way we raise all a barrel with eggs and set the old hen on the hunchole!"—Houston Post.

The Sex of the Planes

When the negroes of Stanley Pool saw the first two airships of the Belgian postal service land in the Congo region, their first impulse was to run away. However, on recognizing the uniform of the officers who descended from the apparatus, they immediately returned.

The next day their fear had completely disappeared. Why should they be afraid of these big birds? Were they not tamed by the white men? For they were surely a couple of birds; and without hesitation they pointed out the male bird and then the female.

Asked by what they could distinguish one from the other, they replied that it was not difficult. The birds did not know the country; the male bird descended first, then he called his female, that came down to land after him.

It is Mr. Louis Franck, minister of the Belgian colonies, who told this story at the Sorbonne.

Grim Joke for the Professor. President H. O. Vance of Oklahoma college said in an address in Oklahoma:

"The post-war changes have hit nobody harder than they have hit the college professor. The college professor is one of the poorest men in the world today."

"A young Latin instructor proposed to a young lady and was accepted. After their first tender transports were over they fell into serious talks. 'Now we are engaged,' said the young woman, 'we must begin to economize. Promise me, darling, that you won't do anything you can't afford.' 'The young lady instructor laughed grimly.

"If I promised you that," he said, 'I'd have to break off our engagement.'"—Rochester Sunday Herald.

Pavement is Billboard. City streets and sidewalks may be converted into temporary billboards by an invention resembling a lawnmower that prints the advertising message in water on the asphalt.

As the machine is pushed along by its operator, a spray of water from the tank in the upper half passes through a perforated belt or drum that acts as a stencil. The belt is of fine wire gauze with waterproof letters fastened upon it. In consequence it leaves a band of wet, dark pavement behind it, upon which the words of the advertisement stand out—dry and white.—Popular Science Monthly.

Indicates Treasure Trove. Antiquarians are puzzled to account for some old coins found in the stomachs of bullocks slaughtered after grazing on the Shropshire marshes. Among the coins obtained from different animals during the past few days are a small coin dated 1795 bearing the name of Victor Amédée of Sardina, a Charles III farthing dated 1874, a George III half-penny dated 1809, and a Hamburg shilling dated 1747.—London Mail.

What Happened When Sheila Elliston Refused Love

By Idah McGlone Gibson

DINNER FOR THREE

As Marie was dressing me for dinner my thoughts were all of Sheila. I determined to glean from my friend and Dr. Thornton what information I could of her immediately. If my brother had really fallen in love with Sheila certainly we ought to know something about her. This old democratic idea of "it does not matter about your ancestors or your immediate family, or even what you yourself have done in the past, it is what you are today," looks very well in school books and adds to the glory of fiction writers, but when a man and a girl fall in love and get ready to marry and rear a family themselves, they should at least be a little concerned about the history of the family that is to be carried on.

It seemed to me that the homecoming of my brother and his immediate infatuation with Sheila had complicated matters very much. One does not realize how quickly the outlook of life may be changed. Although my brother was still young, I had always looked upon him as the kind of man who would marry late in life if at all. I must confess, too, that there was a little hurt that I should not come first with him; that on his visit to me, after such a long and momentous absence, his thoughts should be turned toward an entire stranger to such an extent that I was almost forgotten.

I told myself honestly that Sheila was a woman whom any man might want to marry. And if Phil succeeded in breaking down the barriers of her reserve and she would not only let him love her but would return his love, we could all be very happy.

When I had finished dressing I sent Marie for Sheila and was surprised to find, when she came in after quite a few moments, that she was wearing her nurse's uniform. Although I told myself that she had never looked better, I was a little disappointed.

"I had not intended coming down to dinner, Mrs. Wilmington," she explained, "and as the doctor told me your leg would be helped materially if it were massaged every night I put on my uniform to do this."

"Why were you not coming down, my dear?" I asked the question casually but I burned with eagerness for the answer.

"It is the first night your brother is home and I felt that you would not care to have a stranger with you at that time."

"Nonsense, Sheila, you must not call yourself a stranger! You certainly know me better than any of my friends. If two people do not get to know each other when they

I loved him. He has constantly promised me never to take another drop, but always does within two or three days after he promises. He does things when he is drunk that he would never think of doing in his right mind, and I feel like I would rather have a divorce than stand it any longer. Is it grounds enough for divorce if he does not mistreat me when he is drunk. MAY.

Ans. You could probably get a divorce, but I would not advise it at the present time. Why not try a separation on the condition that you will come back if he stops drinking? If you love him, and think there is a chance of his changing when he finds out that you mean it, surely it would be only right to try everything possible to save your home, and your love.

Dear Mrs. Ellsberry: I have come to the point where I am contemplating divorce, and before I take the step I would like to discuss it with someone who could advise me, without knowing who I am. I have the kindest and best husband in the world, and I have always loved him. When I married him, two years ago, I did not know that he drank. That is the only fault he has, but it is one that I can't get used to tolerate, although I have stood it for two years, because

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

BY MRS. ELLSBURY

A Daily Column of Questions and Answers Conducted by a Woman Who Knows. Address your Letters to Mrs. Ellsberry, Care Roseburg News-Review

Dear Mrs. Ellsberry: Will you help me decide a very vital question. I am going to be married in September, and I have only this month in which to decide whether or not I want to keep my job, or give it up. I am doing work that I like to do, and earn a very good salary. I would hate to give up my job, but have been wondering how I could do everything, to keep house, even in a 2 or 3 room apartment, and keep on with my work. I have never kept house, just helped at home. Can you give my advice. TILLY.

Ans. That is a question on which a great deal could be said on both sides. It is really a problem that each one concerned should work out for themselves as the solution of the problem depends so much on the character of the wife and the husband. What some girls could not do, others could do with ease. If you really feel that you do not want to give up your position, I would suggest that you keep it for a while after you are married, and see how it works out. It will not be easy to manage two jobs, and it will take every ounce of patience that you have. The only way to completely satisfy yourself is to try it for a while.

Dear Mrs. Ellsberry: I have come to the point where I am contemplating divorce, and before I take the step I would like to discuss it with someone who could advise me, without knowing who I am. I have the kindest and best husband in the world, and I have always loved him. When I married him, two years ago, I did not know that he drank. That is the only fault he has, but it is one that I can't get used to tolerate, although I have stood it for two years, because
