WELESS IN STATES SEEK MATES

HUNTINGTON, N. J., Aug. 3.—Loneliness is the chief complaint in letters from eleven states being studied by Lewis S. Conley, president, Thomas Bancroft Delker, secretary of the "Lovers' Cooperative Union," whose purpose is to bring about marriage between widows and widowers, old maids and bachelors and such persons of mature mind as care to enter the matrimonial arena.

Questionnaires will be sent to all applicants by tomorrow night. After they have been returned, properly filled out, Conley and Delker will endeavor to match up the prospects prior to the big award day on August 16. When the desires of a man or a woman appear to be met by the data furnished on a questionnaire the couple will be notified and a courtship, by mail or in person, begun. The final result is not in the hands of the officers of the union.

Both Conley and Delker are widowers. Both are business men here. Both know what it means to go through the ordeals of a hard business day and return home without a loving wife awaiting their presence. And they know just how are hundreds of widowers who are writing them feel and how a single ray of hope—a hope that the "Lovers' Cooperative Union" will put them in touch with the right one among the hundred million souls in the United States—brings cheer to these lonely hearts.

Both Are Widowers.
Excerpts from letters just received follow:
"I have read of your wonderful philanthropic work and wish to ask that you kindly file my application. I am 22 years old, an American Hebrew. I have had a high-school education and am domestically inclined. I sine publicly, but not for compensation."

"Save One For Me."
"After you have allotted partners to your Huntington widowers save one for me. Outside competition may make the Huntington widowers get busy. Send me the lady's address, and I will take up the matter with her at once."

"I am a nice, refined widow, considered good-looking, and would like very much to have several correspondents. This might bring results. I am very lonely and want some one to love and to be loved in return. I have a lovely disposition, also character."

"I am lonesome, lonesome as can be. Because all widows and widowers are so I think your plan is splendid. Gosh, how the old boys will begin to snore up now! While there is life there is hope, you know, and, besides, all marriage is a lottery. Send me a questionnaire. I want a 100 per cent man matched with my name."

People Visit Caves

"Biddle's Trips"—Last Saturday morning at 8 o'clock, the time which had been agreed upon for the Biddle caravan to start their afternoon to the Oregon caves, only three cars answered to make the trip, the others having found it necessary for various reasons, to postpone their visit to some future date. However, the Alfred Bennett family, accompanied by the Misses Mable Houser and Janice Atkins, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Biddle, Miss Roscoe Cain, C. E. Logan and Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Dean started promptly on time, and from the reports they brought home of their wonderful trip and the beauty of the caves, they were well-rewarded for the time and money spent.

METHOD GIVEN FOR RESUSCITATION OF WATER VICTIMS

(International News Service.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Uncle Sam has come to the fore with the latest official method of procedure in resuscitating a drowning person.

"Now that the antics of the merry boat-rockers and the incautious canoeists are cluttering the front pages of the newspapers with the details of numerous drowning accidents," said an official bulletin of the Bureau of Mines, "interest attaches to instructions just issued by this bureau for resuscitation in cases of drowning."

As soon as the victim is taken from the water, the instructions say, place him face downward, clasp your hands under his stomach and lift him several times, letting his face hang down so as to drain his mouth and throat.

"Then," the instruction continue, "remove from his mouth any foreign bodies, such as tobacco, false teeth or gum. Do not stop to loosen his clothing. Do not carry him any distance. Do not wait for a doctor. Treat him yourself by artificial respiration methods, as follows:

Lay Victim on Stomach.
"Lay the victim on his stomach with his face to one side so that his nose and mouth are free for breathing. Place one arm straight out beyond his head. This position is important, as it helps to expand his lungs. Have the head a little lower than the body."

"Kneel, straddling the victim's thighs and facing his head; rest the palms of your hands on his short ribs with your thumbs parallel with the spine and about two inches apart, and with fingers spread out as much as possible."

"With arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of your body is gradually, but not violently, brought to bear upon the victim. This act should take about two seconds. Then, leaving your hands in place, swing backward slowly so as to remove the pressure, thus returning for two seconds to your first position."

The swinging forward and backward process, the instructions emphasize, should be repeated deliberately at least fifteen times a minute, a complete respiration in about four seconds. The movements should be kept in time with your own breathing.

Continuing, the instructions say:

Draw Tongue Forward.
"While the artificial respiration is being continued, have an assistant draw forward the victim's tongue. If it has fallen back, hold the tongue out if it tends to draw back by wrapping a handkerchief around it. The handkerchief may also protect the assistant's fingers from being bitten. The assistant should also loosen any tight clothing around the victim's neck, chest or waist.

"Do not permit bystanders to crowd about and shut off the fresh air. Keep the victim warm with proper coverings and by placing beside the body hot bricks, bottles or rubber bags filled with warm (not hot) water. Wrap bricks, bottles or bags so as to prevent burning the victim. Continue the artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored, or for at least three hours. If natural breathing stops after being restored, use artificial respiration again."

The victim should not be given any liquid by mouth until he is fully conscious, the instructions warn.

Visit in Ashland

Misses Edith and Mildred Long, daughters of W. A. Long, of this city, left this morning for Ashland, where they will visit for several weeks. They will also take a trip to Crater lake, while they are there.

(This was Written by a Woman)

"IT'S GOOD"

I was using a well-known household article when my friend came in.

"Why did you buy that kind?" she asked.

"Because it's good," I told her. She asked me why. Without realizing what I was doing I gave her several technical reasons for the superiority of that machine. I listed a number of its mechanical advantages and one or more very special conveniences that I felt meant a great deal to me.

My reply surprised even myself. I had not realized I knew so much about it. After I had recited my reasons to her I analyzed my first answer, "it's good," and I found that answer typified all of the specific things I was able to recite about the machine which I had as a matter of fact recently purchased.

It had been widely advertised and I, as a large buyer for a household, always felt that any woman may be guided to safe and satisfactory investments for her own needs and the needs of her family if she will but use the messages which the manufacturers send to her in her newspaper or in her magazine.

Until I had said, "it's good," I did not realize that I had been reading so much about the advantages of the machine which I subsequently purchased. One after the other those messages had gotten into my mind until when asked to do so I was capable of repeating them almost as if I had been a salesman for the company making that article.

However, I realized that the printed message had not really meant so much to me as the repeated appearance. Seeing that article over and over again meant to me that many other women had reached the point where they could purchase it sooner than I and were well satisfied with it.

Almost instinctively the thought took hold of me that when I saw the name of a product appearing again and again I could feel sure that that product was living up to its promise. I could feel secure in buying it.

If only all women would realize that in whatever they buy—machines or furniture—clothing or food—dress goods or hats—jewelry or toys—they may save themselves unwise expenditures by seeking the product which through its advertising and behavior after purchase compels its thousands of customers to say, "it's good."
