ROSEBURG NEWS-REVIEW, AUGUST 11, 1922.

STUDY AND SPORT.

It makes a teacher almost heart sick to look out on the school playground and see the energy which her boys display on that field. If she could only get them to manifest similar intensity in learning their lessons, how much more progress they would make. Out there on the ball field, every fiber of their being is concentrated on getting that ball to the base at the earliest possible second. They will run until they are ready to drop. They submit to long and arduous training to get a chance to play on the school teams. Then these same boys come back into the school room and settle languidly into their seats and drone over their books in a perfunctory way. Can anything be done to make them put the same heart into their study that they put into those sports? In the latter, they acquire remarkable results of skill and endurance and quick thinking. The same spirit in the acquisition of knowledge would double their chances of success in life. With this spirit the cost of the schools would be greatly reduced. The pupils could do the grammar school work in six years that now takes eight. They could do the high school work in two or three years, that now takes four. Many more could go on and get college education. We would turn out a generation of young people infinitely better equipped for life. Intelligence would be so general that demagogues would have to drop out of politics. An educated nation would insist on good government. Moral and social evils would be reduced. The problem of putting "pep" into school work, as it is put into sports is too big for any editor to solve. One can only say that the parents can help, by constantly telling their children that their success in life depends largely on the extent to which they put their hearts into getting an education.

In a speech at Chicago recently, Postmaster-General Work alleged that twice as many coal miners were employed as were necessary to get out the nation's supply of fuel, but that through a powerful union they were demanding a full day's pay for only about a half day's work. In other words, the miner puts in his time, accomplishes but half what he might, or really ought, but draws a living wage for the alleged labor performed. The Chicago Daily News takes this argument as a basis for an editorial advocating the coal operators' side of the present controversy, maintaining that it is unjust to compel the consumer to pay for this waste of time in the price of coal. Doubtless the postmaster-general may be practically correct in his diagnosis of the situation. In event he has stated the case as it is, the remedy lies in the coal operators employing competent foremen, and when a man fails to do a day's work, discharge him. Give the miner to understand that efficiency is the only string to his job, pay him his wage, allow his individual rights, but require service. The same thing will hold good in the case of railway employes, government employes, or whatsoever may be the calling. Educate the laborer to this point of view, lead him to understand that it is right for him to own his home, an automobile, and for the home to be well furnished, pay him sufficient to educate his family and properly care for them, but impress the necessity of efficiency and service, even to the digging of coal, standing at the throttle of an engine, repairing a locomotive, or any other line of endeavor. Union leaders and union foremen will agree that this theory is only just.

Roseburg is growing; considerable is going on; the demand for homes is undiminished; improvement of all sort is going on constantly; the merchants are doing a better business than ever; hotels are full, even though the state is dry, and there is a general air of progress and prosperity throughout the county. Coupling these conditions with a matchless climate, Douglas county and Roseburg have much to offer to the family seeking an ideal spot to live in.

A friend wants to bet us that the Edenbower road will be paved within three weeks. We hope he wins.

George Houck Writes Home

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Houck have received some very interesting letters from their son, George, who is traveling in Europe with a group of University of Oregon students. They are having a very fine trip, and are stopping at points of historical interest.

"I had lots of fun in getting a bath this morning," he states in one of his letters. "Most of the bathers in the hotels speak some English so I tackled a porter I had heard use some English, but he didn't get it. Then I tried German, with no results, and then used my last card. He responded in French, and I got just what I wanted."

"My passport is more important than food over here," he wrote, "I have been crossing borders so much."

At Brigue the party stayed in a hotel which was built in 1675 as a Venetian monastery, but is now being used as a modern and very comfortable hotel.

The party were taken over the Simplon Pass by muleback, traveling over a road built by Napoleon in 1801 to 1803.

At Como they found a general strike on, the strike being in protest against the killing of some communists south of there. It lasted only one day and delayed the party about two hours.

"The Swiss are the greatest fighters," Mr. Houck wrote. "Today I met a lot who spoke six languages—German, French, English, Italian, Norwegian and Arabic. He had just returned from a trip to Cairo by a Harley-Davidson motorcycle which he proudly displayed to me. I saw a Chevrolet automobile in a garage in Brigue—everything else being Fiat over here."

Now that Jude Pluvius has tipped his sprinkling can in this neck of the woods the city street cleaning dept. are out with their water wagon. Like the old proverb, "Make hay while the sun shines," the street sweepers have their own motto: "Sweep the streets while the rain rains."

Gloria Swanson and her hubby have caught the fever and are separated which by the way has nothing to do with the Hollywood apartment shortage.

Some men would kick about anything. Uncle Levi Zink says his nephew, Walter, is complaining about goldenrod being late and delaying his hay fever.

SOCIAL DUTIES TOO MUCH.
 "What kind of farming experience did you have?" asked the reporter.
 "Well, son," replied the philosopher, "I only had a tight attack. When I lived on a farm all you had to do was plant, cultivate, mend fences, hoe weeds, milk cows, slaughter pigs, doctor sick chickens, fix the windmills, go to town after the mail, argy with lightnin' rod agents, attend the county fair once a year, cut wheat an' have it thrashed, shuck corn, churn butter, dig potatoes, buy fertilizer, mend the breakin' plow with a piece o' wire, break colts, wash the wool and do things like that. It was hard enough life then, but just think what it is now, havin' to be a farmer, and keep up with the radio, fox trottin', silk shirts and at least two cars. Son, even at my age I might go back and do old-fashioned farmin', but I would never be able to keep up with a modern farmer's social duties."

The man who is wearing last season's straw hat, is now at ease, as it is practically impossible to tell the new vintage from that of last year now.

Russia wants to borrow enough money, to put her out of debt.

DON'T SPRING THIS ONE, BOYS.
 "I couldn't think of marrying him. He said his heart was in his mouth every time he looked at me."
 "Well, he must care a great deal for you."
 "But, I could never marry a man whose heart was not in the right place."

This is the glorious season—glorious summer! Sometimes inglorious, too, isn't it?—when the housewife hangs the rug over the clothesline and the husband beats it—for town.

NO STRINGS ON HIM.
 "Honey," said the colored lady, as he and Mandy were talking over their plans for the future, "when we uns gets married yo'll ain't gwine to give up dat job yo' has workin' for de white folks, is you?"
 "But ain't we a gwine to have no honeymoon, Rastus? Ain't we all takin' no trip on de cars or nothin'?"
 "Honey, one of we uns kin go. Dey ain't a thing holdin' me, but yo'all's got 'sponsibilities."

TO YOU.
 It isn't the man who smiles that counts. When every thing goes wrong. Nor is it the man who meets defeat. Singing a gay little song. The smile and smiles are well worth while. Provided they aren't a bluff. But here's to the man who smiles and sings. And then—Produces the stuff.

Claude Cannon was rolling down the main stem in his Detroit limousine this a. m. when he suddenly slammed on his brakes, jumped out and looked the fiv over. "Did you fellers hear a rattle as I passed here," he asked of a gathering throng. "None," was the reply. "Well, then, one of my accessories must be missing," said Claude as he started to check up on his paraphernalia.

"It ain't the cost of white trousers," groans a friend, "it's the upkeep."

 A heavy suit of hair looks most becoming when dressed fairly close to the head, in a loose marcel wave, according to Lila Lee, Paramount picture actress. The part is in the middle which gives an even balance to the hair. The principal charm of such a coiffure is that it is very simple and lacking in extremes, which is best for young girl types.
