

Cooking is a joy

—with a Conservo

The entire meal, from soup to dessert, may be cooked in CONSERVO, using only one burner of the stove; just enough heat is necessary to boil a little water in the copper tank. When the water needs replenishing a whistle will call you fifteen minutes in advance.

The principle is simply cooking by heat and steam pressure—the result is food appetizingly tender, flavorful, flaky, delicious. The natural juices, aromas and flavors of the food are cooked into and not out of the food. Every mouthful of CONSERVO-cooked food is a delight. So perfect is the cooking process that odors and flavors do not intermingle.

CONSERVO saves FUEL.—In two months' time CONSERVO saves its cost in fuel alone. Be sure to ask to see this wonderful cooker.

The canning season is here, and we have fruit jars, jelly tumblers, and everything you will need.

CO-EDS TO HELP PAY COST OF COLLEGE BY APPLYING KNOWLEDGE

(International News Service.) CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 25.—Co-eds at the University of Cincinnati will have an opportunity this fall to take up co-operative courses in dietetics, chemistry, commerce and architecture for the first time in the history of the institution. Full time work at the university will be required during the first two years while in the third and fourth years the students will alternate in two and four-week periods at the university and as actual work along the line of endeavor chosen. They will be paid for the practical work just as the men students are paid under the cooperative system which has been in vogue at the U. S. Engineering college for years. Practical work will be in Cincinnati laboratories, offices and hospitals.

KIDNAPPED BRIDEGROOM IN ROBE DE NUIT, FLEES STARTLED NEIGHBORHOOD

(International News Service.) GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 25.—The well-known joke of kidnapping the bridegroom was played on Aubrey D. Strohpaul, with novel variations, here. Strohpaul left his bride on an errand, and friends offered him a lift in their car. The benedict was rushed to the edge of the city, forced to remove his wedding raiment and don pajamas. He was then taken to a thickly settled residential district a mile from his home and thrown out of the car.

The bridegroom's "pajama march," it is said, started those along his line of march who sat unsuspectingly on their front porches.

PAPER SAYS BERLIN IS NOT VILEST OF CITIES

(International News Service.) BERLIN, Aug. 25.—There is no reason for denouncing Berlin as the vilest place in Germany on account of its appalling number of gayety places, says the News. Berlin, Nuremberg, the famous town of the Meistersingers and the birthplace of Albrecht Duerer, relatively speaking, beats the record with: Beer restaurants, 1,533; wine restaurants, 49; bars, 20; cafes, 82.

One ought to bear in mind that the population of Nuremberg is about one-tenth that of Berlin.

PLYMOUTH LIBERALS NOT TO OPPOSE LADY ASTOR

(International News Service.) LONDON, Aug. 25.—"Because of her bold defense of womanhood and children Lady Astor is not to be opposed at the next Parliamentary election by the Plymouth Liberals.

Mr. G. P. Dymond, president of the Plymouth Liberals Association, made this announcement at a meeting of the association.

He regarded Lady Astor, he said, as an International Conservative, so far as English-speaking peoples were concerned.

"WIRELESS TAPERS" CAUGHT IN GERMANY

(International News Service.) HAMBURG, Aug. 25.—A secret wireless station was detected here by the police. The owners, two Hamburg engineers, picked up Stock Exchange news from the air and sold their information to stockbrokers and banks for enormous prices. A New York firm cost the clients about 10,000 marks. The operators are said to have given exceedingly good "tips."

HISTORIC RECORDS DESTROYED BY U.S. PRINTING OFFICE

(International News Service Staff Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Permanent records of the debates in the senate and house in the stirring days before the Civil War—35,000 plates used in printing the old Congressional Globe—have been destroyed at the government printing office to make way for more recent records.

Twelve of the plates containing statements to the house and senate by Henry Clay, Stephen A. Douglas and others have been saved and will be placed on exhibition in the museum of the printing office.

The Congressional Globe was printed by individual shops from 1853 to 1876. It was published first weekly, but later became a daily. The contract for the work was sold by several men and there was constant bickering over the job until the government began to publish the record.

Resourceful Stenographers.
In those days a stenographic report of the proceedings in the two houses of congress was not made as at present, but the congressional reporters wrote down as much as they could in long hand and filed in with what they construed the member to say.

One of the plates showed some remarks on the slavery question by Senator Lyman Trumbull, of Illinois. He suggested that the negroes be sent to another part of the world, where they could establish their own country, declaring both races could not get along peacefully if the negro was freed from slavery. He predicted the time would come when such a country would be organized.

William Pitt Fessenden, secretary of the treasury in Lincoln's cabinet, took a prominent part in the Panama Canal question in 1859, according to the Globe, which published Fessenden's speech on the question of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Settlers for New York.
Proofs of the plates show that in 1858 public land for use of "actual settlers only" could be obtained in New York. The record shows a petition introduced by a New York Senator, "praying that the public lands may be laid off in farms or lots and granted free of cost to actual settlers only."

One of the plates of the Globe was submitted the Bureau of Standards to be analyzed. It was found to contain more than ten different substances. Each plate is a quarter of an inch thick, solid and very hard.

JAMAICA ON TRAIL OF ILLICIT BOOZE SHIPMENTS TO U.S.

(International News Service.) KINGSTON, Jamaica, Aug. 25.—Presumably under pressure of the Washington government in its effort to curb so far as possible the alleged smuggling of liquor from the British West Indies into the United States, the Jamaica government has become so all intent and purpose a policeman for Uncle Sam for this colony and its dependencies—the Cayman Islands and Turk's Island.

It is an open secret that thousands of cases of whisky, gin, etc., were regularly shipped from Jamaica to Nassau, Turk's Island and other nearby points, from which it somehow or other made its way into the United States. But the local government has just taken steps which will put a summary end to all this rum running.

Excise Law Passed.
The first move was to pass a law that all liquor shipped in bond—whisky and other spirits—were always sent away under bond—is not to be given the drawback until a certificate of entry at the port of destination had been received here. Since the excise duty on whisky, gin and other distilled spirits is very heavy, this will put a stop, to a great extent, to the shipping of the spirits, as the shippers will be unable to get the rebate of duty unless they can prove that the goods were actually delivered at the ports for which they were destined on the ship's manifest.

Recently a cargo of gin, sufficient to supply every man, woman and child in Turk's Island with two bottles each, was shipped from this port and, after being kept there for some time, returned to Jamaica and, so far as is known, is here still.

High Export Tax Also.
But the latest and severest move against shipping alcohol from this island is a new and prohibitive export tax passed by the legislative council recently. It is so high that there is little hope of those engaged in the traffic here being able to do business with points from which the liquor would eventually find its way into the United States, and it is openly charged that this new and drastic legislation has been passed at the direct request of the Washington authorities.

"Jamaica has become Uncle Sam's Caribbean policeman" is a slogan much in vogue here now, and the government does not deny that the legislation is an attempt to prevent liquor smuggling into the United States. The new legislation is bitter-

JAILED

"But—but" I protested, still too astounded to understand. "I don't know what you mean. I did not obtain goods under false pretenses.

"Didn't you buy the furniture in this room?" demanded someone gruffly.

"Yes, I bought it."

"Be careful. Whatever you may say will be used against you," cautioned another voice.

"But I am telling nothing but the truth," I expostulated. "The furniture is not mine. It belongs to Walter Jones, Jr. I bought them at his father's store at his request. Walter is coming here this morning. I expect him every minute."

"Don't you know, young lady, Walter Jones is—"

"Shut up, Wilkins, don't let her put it over on us. She is a slick one."

"Wilkins laid his hand on my shoulder rather playfully. 'You had better go and get dressed, my child,' he soothed while the big brute who had spoken before snorted.

"As I went into my bedroom, Mrs. Wilmington, I looked into my mirror. My face was distorted and covered with blood. My lip was cut, my hair was disheveled, but I smiled at myself, for even then I did not realize what had happened to me.

"You certainly have all the appearance of an abandoned woman," I remarked to the face in the mirror.

"I washed my hands and was surprised to find that the water in the basin turned pink. I tried to sponge on my face and groaned with pain as the wash-cloth rubbed the open place on my temple.

"As fast as I could do, with my shaking hands, for now I was thoroughly frightened, I managed to get into the little orchid-colored, get-sette-crepe frock that I had laid out over a chair the night before. As I finished hooking the belt, I thought ruefully that it was to have been my wedding dress!

"At last I was ready and without giving myself time to think, I went out into the dining room to find that all the men, except the one who had shown a little compassion, were sitting around my table—the table I had arranged with such great hopes and little prayers the night before for the time when Walter and I should come back to lunch in our own home.

"They were eating the rolls and had spilled the jam over my dainty face cloth. One man had broken off a great piece of our wedding cake and was wrapping it up in a greasy newspaper, remarking, when I came in, that he was going to take this home to his little girl.

"I looked at him curiously. Was it possible that a man with a daughter of his own could be so callous and ly renned, particularly by seamen on the large number of ships engaged in the banana trade between Jamaica and eastern American ports. Liquor by the hundreds of bottles was taken up weekly on many of these ships, as there was no legislation to prevent sailors purchasing liquor and taking it on board with them. Now they cannot do this unless they first pay a heavy excise tax.

George Houck Sends Letters Home

Several interesting letters have been received by Dr. and Mrs. George Houck from their son, George, who with a party of University of Oregon students is making a tour of Europe. In his last letter he said he was enjoying Rome, but found it difficult to put emotions on paper with cool ink. He had visited the Forum and stood on the spot where Antony gave his address over Caesar, saw the ground marking Caesar's funeral pyre, spent three hours one evening in the Coliseum which was bathed in moonlight, making it most impressive. Though the Coliseum is still one of the monuments of Rome, it could seat 87,000 spectators. The party had not yet visited the Vatican, St. Peter's, or St. Paul's. The original works of art seen in wonderful museums were of great interest to them all.

"Just an idea as to prices in Rome," he writes. "This morning (Sunday) I missed my breakfast at our hotel, so went to a cafe, had the regular continental breakfast, coffee and rolls, costing 6 1/2 cents. I was shaved by the hotel barber for 35 cents, bought me a 'dandy' straw hat for 75 cents, a fine pair of kid gloves for $1.50, and a pair of ladies' white kid gloves for 60 cents."

Their departure from Rome was delayed by a strike and the trains were very much crowded. In one compartment designed for six, they had 14 grown-ups and one baby.

At Milan they picked up their "conductor" or "courier," for the remainder of the trip. He proved to be an American art student from Paris who was born in Arizona. Between Milan and Pisa they passed through 98 tunnels, thought that the road should be called a subway. He saw much to interest him in Pisa, and liked it better than Genoa or Milan. Genoa is a bustling, modern commercial seaport.

The party had taken the trip from Naples to the island of Capri where they visited the famous Blue Grotto. From there they went by boat to Sorrento, where they stayed in a hotel on a cliff overlooking the Bay of Naples. Vesuvius was visible directly across the bay, and they could see the lights along the inclined railway
