Alligator English Inventor's Nemesis

(International News Service.) KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 9.—Had it not been for his curiosity over an alligator Stanley Harris, an inventor, might today be in merry England with his wife. As it is, he is stranded in Missouri, dependent on an alligator invention to recoup his fortune.

Here is Harris' story as told at police headquarters, where he came to look at the rogues' gallery: He left England in January, landed in Vera Cruz with his wife, went to Juarez, later to El Paso.

There he saw alligators. They interested him immensely. Every day he went to the big elevator tank hoping to see one move.

One day he met a stranger named Bladel.

Bladel began to accompany him to the alligator pit.

"Surely the animal will move," he said.

One day Bladel, passing the turf exchange, met a man—"my old friend, Phillips, of Vancouver." Bladel and Phillips from this point on worked up a betting scheme, always pretending to be enemies, always quarreling.

Came a day they said they needed ready money. They persuaded Harris to tide them over with $500. And they said him back.

Again they needed money. Harris loaned them $8,000. Then they borrowed $7,500. Harris sent to England for that.

Then Bladel and Phillips skipped. Harris was broke.

"I knew I had to concoct a scheme to earn enough so that my wife could live," Harris explained on his visit to Kansas City the other day. "I have made several fortunes. The alligator gave me an idea. I've started an invention that already is bringing me returns. While I like my home in St. Joseph, I want to get back to England."

STRANGE KITTY MESSSES UP FRIENDLY DETECTIVE

(International News Service.) CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 9.—A new suit and an odor of toilet water on Jere Hanrahan, city detective, caused some good-natured "kidding" at headquarters recently. The sleuth finally confessed there was a reason.

He was sitting on his porch when a striking-looking black-and-white animal trotted across the lawn.

"Kitty! Here, kitty!" the detective called as he started toward it. Then something happened. The detective buried his clothes and spent an hour in the bathtub, but the next morning the perfume atomizer was a welcome friend.

Jere doesn't scrape up acquaintances with strange polecats any more.

BULL HIT BY TRAIN STILL SHOWS FIGHT AS RED FLAG WAVES

BRAINTREE, Mass., Sept. 9.—It would be great to have bulls educated in flag signals, according to New Haven railroad brakemen.

A bull at Braintree Highlands wandered onto the railroad tracks just as a train was approaching.

The locomotive sidestepped the bull and pushed him aside. According to all good train practice the train was stopped to see what damage was done to the bull and a brakeman sent to the rear to stick up a red flag to warn any oncoming trains.

The bull, peevish by the red flag and forgetting that he had been hit, drove at the red-flagging brakeman like a thunderbolt. The brakeman beat the bull to the platform just about in time.

LOS ANGELES TO RAISE FOXES FOR FURS, PETS, AND TO POPULATE ZOOS

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9.—Southern California is to have a fox farm. Forty acres of government land in the Los Angeles forest reserve have been leased from Forest Supervisor R. H. Carlton by Jacob A. Host, who plans to raise silver-black foxes for their fur, for pets, and to populate the zoos.

The ranch will be located near Mount Baldy, eighty-two miles from Los Angeles, and will be opened with thirty pairs of foxes which were whelped at the Bear Lake Silver-Black fox ranch at Muskegon, Mich., so Host says.

The fox raising industry sounds simple enough, but associated with it as an industry will be the raising of goats, chickens and rabbits, all of which are necessary to the life of the silver-black fox. They will be fed on chicken, goat and rabbit meat; the eggs laid by the chickens and the milk supplied by the goats will be another item of food.
