ROSEBURG, OREGON, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1922.

INTELLIGENT VOTING.

There are many people who denounce politics and politicians, and who would claim that government is usually inefficient and often corrupt, yet who never do anything themselves to remove this bad condition that they feel exists. It is not merely that they do not take any active part in political life, but they fail to take any pains to inform themselves about public men and about the acts of their representatives. Many newspaper men used to say as the result of their observation of the public taste, that their readers were not interested in political news or the doings of congress or their state legislature. As a result they would reduce this department of news down to small space, and would not feature it unless some sensational development turned up. There have always been men who devote ten times as much time to reading sporting news they give to study of the political doings. Then when an election comes around, they know only of the work and record of the candidates by hearsay. They accept the current talk on the streets, take the opinion of their friends, and some vote for a candidate because his picture makes him look like a capable fellow. The prevalence of this spirit in past years has made it easy to bunco the voters, and for candidates to gain office who were wholly unqualified. Recent years however have seen a great increase in public attention to political matters, and the number of people who study the political situation has become very large. The schools have done a great deal to promote this habit by calling the attention of their pupils to public events and getting them interested in political battles at an early age. Young people should be encouraged to begin early in life the habit of reading magazines and newspapers, so that they shall grasp the issues to be decided at elections and cast a vote that shall represent thought and attention.

Finding of a mineralized tooth in Eastern Oregon that is more than four inches in length has set scientists to speculating. The relic has been classified as belonging to a horse that is alleged to have been three times the size of horses of the present. That bunch section of Oregon is a big country, and, of course, big things must come from it. But, in passing, we might say that if those scientists of the United States biological division at Washington had ever seen a moderately sized modern five or six year old "bunchgrass" lassoed and in action for the first time, they would probably have pronounced him the biggest bit of horseflesh the tenderfoot world had ever seen, prehistoric or ancient.

Jease Winborn, of Medford, reputed to be well "headed" financially, and for twenty-five years prominently identified with Tammany forces of New York, is mentioned as manager for Walter M. Pierce, democratic candidate for governor. During primary election days Mr. Winborn was a staunch Olcott supporter. Recently he had a change of heart and is now on the Pierce band wagon and says he is going to spend some money in behalf of the democratic candidate. Mixing Tammany politics with the Oregon system of doing things politically ought to awaken a little interest throughout the state before the fall election.

The republican platform adopted at Portland is well worth living up to before and after election day. The principles therein promulgated, if rigidly adhered to and practiced by republicans, will do much to cement all factions and iron out some of the furrows embedded on the forehead of the party during recent years. The G. O. P. is now destined to be of some worth to the state unless some nincompoop politician throws a monkey wrench into the smoothly working machinery of this political body and turns things topsyturvy, as was the case just previous to the recent primary election in this state.

Twelve United States war ships are speeding toward the trouble zone of the Near East. Just what their mission at the Dardanelles in has not been stated. Perhaps their presence will help to inspire wholesome respect in the murky mind of the unspeakable Turk, who seems bent on goading British troops into conflict with Kemal's forces.

It is refreshing to find a prizefighter with a good, solid head—one of the unbreakable kind, such as is possessed by Siki, the South African pug. This lessens the chances for the championship title remaining on American soil. Sooner or later it will go to the savages where it rightfully belongs.

An Indiana judge is called upon to decide the paternity of the third child of a South Bend woman. If the judge settles the dispute successfully he will be entitled to a place along with Solomon in the gallery of the world's wise men.

Three days of good, old Oregon fall weather will do a lot for the state fair. Here's hoping for the best.

Senior Class Elects Officers

At a meeting of the Senior class on Tuesday afternoon, officers were elected for the present year. Those who received the election were as follows: Lucien Cobb, president; Constantine Hendrickson, vice-president; Marion Nordmark, secretary; Carmen Atterbury, treasurer; and Adolph Myers, sergeant-at-arms. Miss Rosa B. Parrott was selected as an earlier meeting to act in the capacity of class advisor, which position she kindly accepted. With the class organized and with capable officers and advisor at work the Seniors expect to do great things this year in every phase of school life.

The first enterprise which the Seniors will attempt will be the election of the social which is the high school of the entertainment of the young "freaks" at a reception to be held on Friday, October 20. Although no committees have yet been appointed plans for the reception are already in process of the making. Appointments of committees who will have complete charge of the reception will be made by President Cobb sometime this week. The event of the year is the Senior play and the senior class will sponsor a play this year which is hoped will be as successful as those of former years. The Senior class contains the historical play necessary to stage a successful play and will have Parrott as coach a production extraordinary may be looked forward to.

Whitewash is great stuff but it never mended a crack in the wall.

LET'S NOT GROUCH.

At best this is a tough old world and with the gloom purveyors thicker than flies around molasses it is mighty hard to be cheerful at times. Let's not spend so much time speculating on "why was I ever sent into this miserable world, anyway." Rather let's ask, "what can I do now that I am here to make this old world the best place the sun ever shone on?" Then go to work and do it.

DISCIPLINE, BHECK.

"No sir," said Standpat harshly, "you can't be firm with 'em. Now take that there flapper daughter o' mine. Nothin' do 'er but she must have her hair bobbed. Me an' her mother both spoke right up in unison together and said 'No' in a loud, firm tone. We decided we'd stand right with each other on that and nothin' could shake us. She kep' astin' day after day, beggin' an' pleadin' an' bawlin' around, but no sir! When me an' Mandy makes up our minds nothin' can change us. That girl pestered us fer weeks about gettin' that hair bobbed, us a-refusin' raglar an' steady. An' even when she got it bobbed, she wa'n't sa almighty pleased with it at that!"

The merchant likes to hear his cash register ring these days, but the music to the ears of the farmer is the cackle of the hen.

It is a sure sign of distinction at this time of the year for a feller to have egg on his chin.

The Greek king surrendered his throne yesterday which may be turned into a bootblack stand if press dispatches today are any indication of the trend of the times.

"Beyond the Alps lies Italy" means about as much to the average individual as "things are getting back to normal."

Douglas county won the ninth prize at the state fair exhibit but we could have topped off first honors if we'd only had the fair chowder here for a trip over our farming district.

RELEASE AHEAD

A physician claims to have restored two patients to sanity by pulling their teeth. When they see the bill they may go crazy again.

When a fellow is young way down on the farm he waters the stock. When he is older and on Wall Street, he does the same thing. Same old story.

AN ALARMING COURAGE

"So you didn't propose to her after all?"

"No, and I'm not going to! When I got to her house I found her chasing a mouse with a broom."

"A magazine writer says there are enough brains in the world to solve most of our problems," declares the St. Augustine Record. "No doubt. But most of those brains are busy with the problem of where to go for vacation and what to have for dinner."

After a dame has paid eight bucks for a pair of stockings you can't blame her for showing $7.50 worth of them.

WELL OF COURSE

Sweet Young Thing (to cavalry sergeant) "Is it true that when you are learning to ride it gives you a headache?"

Sarge: "Oh, no, miss. Quite the opposite!"

LEGAL FEE

Suitor—I have called to ask your advice, sir, as to whether you consider your daughter would make me a suitable wife.
Lawyer—No, I don't think she would. Five dollars, please.

They have appropriated $500,000 to catch war grafters. That's about ten cents per grafter.

FOOT IN IT.

"There is nothing more disgusting to me than to see an old codger like that bouncing about on the floor with a flapper in his arms."

"I quite agree with you," said the woman addressed. "The old codger you refer to is my husband. I've made the same remark to him any number of times, but it doesn't seem to do a bit of good. Ah, must you go so soon?"

What a pity we do not have enough daylight to fast all night.

THE AFTERMATH.

"When I looked out of the window, Johnny, I was glad to see you playing marbles with Billy Simpkins."
"We wuzn't playing marbles, ma. We just had a fight and I was helping him pick up his teeth."

Another pleasant route to take on your early winter Sunday morning stroll is past a group of apartment buildings, and hear the husbands growling at their families.

In Ye Olden Days

(From Roseburg Review

M. R. Howell's team hauled the first load of lumber turned out by the Winchester mill to Roseburg yesterday. This will be something to recall when Winchester becomes a large manufacturing city.

Mrs. W. H. Fisher received a fine upright piano last week.

Quite a force of men and teams have been scraping up and hauling off the mud on Jackson street this week. It is a big improvement and our main business street is as dry as in summer.

Canas Valley Items: Mrs. Baker of upper Canas Valley is making shingles at an average of 1,000 a day. Shingles are always saleable here and Mrs. B. is realizing a small fortune while a good many able-bodied men spend the winter killing time and wonder how other people get along.

G. W. Puckett is down from Canasville this week.

Isadore Caro has gone to Chehalis, Washington to look after some valuable real estate interests of the Caro Brothers, there.

Boys and Girls Enjoying Fair

SALEM, Sept. 28.—Forty-six boys and 31 girls, representing prize-winning teams in causing clubs, calf clubs, pig clubs, and livestock judging clubs, are now the guests of the State Fair board, enjoying themselves to the limit. The trip to the fair is being sponsored by the counties from which the children come and while here the fair board is furnishing the children with board, lodging and tickets to the races and horse shows.

The 31 girls are in care of Mrs. A. B. Calavan of Portland, Mrs. M. A. Spier of Prineville, and Mrs. W. C. Green of Oregon City.

The boys are in charge of A. E. Street of Roseburg. A number of the youngsters are members of stock judging teams. In the 12 teams competing in the judging Monday afternoon there were to be found a few girls, however. Multnomah county was first and Union second.

Today most of the boys and girls will leave, their places to be taken by the two highest scoring boys and the two highest scoring girls of each county. In this way it will be possible for some of the boys and girls who were the best individually but who were not on the winning team, will be given the treat of their young lives.

Manager Chosen State Deaf School

SALEM, Sept. 28.—Employment of G. L. McIntire of Fulton, Mo., as superintendent of the State School for the Deaf to succeed H. S. Tillinghast, resigned, was announced by the state board of control today. McIntire, who has for the last three years been principal of the Oklahoma School for the deaf at Sulphur, Oklahoma, expects to arrive in Salem on or before October 6 to assume his new duties. Tillinghast has already left for Fulton, Mo., to take charge of the school there, leaving the institution here temporarily in charge of T. A. Lindstrom, principal of the Oregon school, who has been appointed superintendent pending the arrival of McIntire. McIntire is a graduate of Westminster college, Fulton, taking post-graduate work in the University of Missouri and the University of Chicago. He was twice principal of the Fulton high school, preparing himself as a teacher of the deaf at Gallaudet college, Washington, D. C., after which he taught for two years in the American School for the Deaf at Hartford, Conn., and for the last three years has been principal of the Missouri School for the Deaf at Fulton.

Time to Build Strong

It has come to be understood by most manufacturers and distributors that a large volume of business at any period of time is of itself no proof that the business is built on a sure foundation. The volume may be due to a variety of conditions, and those conditions may be temporary, and may be entirely out of the control of those who enjoy them.

The only sure foundation upon which a big business can be successfully built is an undisputed consumer preference. Let that be present and it matters not how quickly a business grows, or how big it grows, you have the assurance that it is solidly built and that it will not topple over when the first wind blows.

Advertising is the corner stone of the structure of consumer preference. No conspicuous example exists where there is a steady and sure consumer demand for any product that is not properly advertised. Every instance that can be cited of a consumer demand that is strong enough to offset changing market conditions may also be cited as an example of the effective use of advertising.

The present business condition is a challenge to every business that is built on the uncertain foundation of a demand due to a favorable state of the market. Assuming that the strong demand of the past few years, prior to 1920, was a permanent thing, many manufacturers made provisions to supply the demand and reap a harvest of profits; but they overlooked the importance of insuring their share of the demand.

Now the great lesson has been learned—at a prodigious cost. The disposition today is to build strong, to make sure of the foundations before rearing a great superstructure. In the long run it will mean that all business will be on a more solid basis, and less likely to be upset by changing conditions. This will be the great compensation for the stress of the present period.
