THE KICKER ELEMENT.

As most large family circles usually have one member who takes a sour view of home relations, so every community has its kicker and knocker element. Some persons have a genius for fault finding. According to their story, politics is full of corruption, with all parties about alike, that it is hardly worth while for a citizen to bother to vote. Business, they feel, is rotten and full of cheating and robbery. When they get down to their home town, they are always pointing out faults and flaws, and rarely saying a word of encouragement and appreciation. A person of that kind if rarely found doing anything to improve conditions. If the community is as badly off as he says, one would think that he would feel the absolute necessity of taking hold to do things better. Yet if you suggest to such a person that he serve on some committee or take up some little responsibility himself he is almost sure to turn you down. Such a person may obey all the laws and be in a way a good citizen, yet he does an enormous amount of harm. He throws a pall of discouragement over enterprises that others attempt, and can show all kinds of reasons why the same are poorly planned and will be a failure. His critical faculties are developed to a high point of efficiency and the faults he finds may often exist. But the trouble is that he utterly fails to realize that difficulties can be overcome. Men of an achieving type recognize all the flaws that the knocker points out, but they do not lie down defeated before them. They put their wits to work to remove flaws and overturn obstacles, and commonly they succeed. Thus they lift their community and themselves to higher levels of usefulness and prosperity, while the knocker drags along in the same old rut.

THE SHIFTS OF FASHION.

The men folks watch the vagaries of women's clothing styles with some wonder, and express themselves with some emphasis concerning the same. But they have mighty little influence over women as respects fashions. Every extreme of style that has been in vogue for many years has been ridiculed and caricatured to the limit. The funny men have joked about them, the cartoonists have exaggerated them. And yet fair woman goes on sweetly unconcerned about masculine opinion, wearing just what she pleases, and altering her fashions when she gets good and ready. Probably the reason is that a good looking woman looks attractive in any style, no matter how freakish it is. A considerable protest is now being uttered both by men and women against the return of the long skirts. The lounge crowd are eager for glimpses of feminine anatomy, while others argue that short dresses are a healthful fashion that permit women and girls to live a more vigorous active life. Many women are resolving never again to put on long and entangling garments. But will they be able to stand out against the overpowering sway of the fashion magnates? In previous years there have been movements toward common sense in dress, and women of independent habits have always rebelled against the freaks of style. Still the great majority of the sex have copied the styles pretty faithfully and may do so again. Yet every year the women folks grow more independent, as more of them assume the tasks of men. The business women are becoming a bigger factor every year in governing styles, and the time will come when their verdict will be more influential than that of the queens of society.

That the national prohibition law "breeds crime," is the opinion of a San Francisco grand jury. Any law that curbs evil is calculated to "breed crime," and all because evil minded men insist on carrying out their determination to have what society, through its constituted authority, the government, forbids as detrimental to the well being of all the people. That is why our jails and penitentiaries are full of men who refuse to conform to the laws. Where there is no law there can be no crime, hence, according to the argument of the San Francisco grand jury, because these good laws "breed crime," they are a farce and should be abolished.

It is the inalienable right of every citizen of the United States to vote at elections. The man or woman, in those states where women can vote, who neglects this privilege, has failed in just that degree to discharge his or her duty as a citizen. Under our system of government, majority rules, and when individuals neglect to vote and obnoxious laws are passed, the blame rests upon the slacker voter who was too indifferent to go to the polls. October 7 is the final day for registration, and every good citizen should see to it that his name is written into the poll book.

Justice has speeded up in Washington. Paul Staren, who wantonly murdered one man near Ephrata, Washington, and wounded another, about a week ago, has been tried and found guilty of the crime by a jury of his peers. The jury found the death penalty should be inflicted.

Meeting Held at Court House

A meeting which was fairly well attended, considering the many other attractions in the city, was held at the court house, Monday night, at which time Dr. F. W. Thompson of Portland, and Hon. John L. Clark of Crescent City, Calif., explained the aims and purposes of the new organization The National Forest Protection Association. The new association desires to secure for the protection and wise use of the forests, and the preservation of the game and fish in the national forests.

Another meeting will be held at a future date and it is expected that there will be a larger attendance at that time.

DELAWARE STORE ROBBERY.

Parsons last night entered the store owned by P. G. Smith at Deland. Entrance was made by cutting a hole through the floor from the store above. As the hole was cut, it was found that the robbery was the work of a bore. Quite a number of valuable articles of merchandise were taken, and a small amount of cash.

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

C'mon now be frank—
Dontcha kinda like this rain?
Sure ya do—
No true Oregonian
Can help but feel
A thrill when the sky-juice
Trickles down upon
This old earth—
And most of us like
To hear it patter
On the shingles.

Smile today. Strive today. Be game, glad and big today. Today you may start anew. This is the day to forget past failures.

Today you may put into action the experience of a lifetime. The whole fabric of your life may revolve around what you do today.

A smile is the strongest possible weapon in the battle of life. It conquers the hoarish and the disgruntled; it lifts the shadows, and brings light where before all was darkness. It is all the time winning new friends, new customers, new business, new opportunities.

It is a tremendous asset in the business world; for everyone likes the genial, smiling man or woman who has a kind word for all.

The man who attracts business today must have pleasing manners. He must be a good "mixer," friendly to everybody, with the sort of smile that is born of a kind heart and the good-will spirit that wishes well to all.

The value of a smile of that sort, which is not a mere parting of the lips, but a shining of the whole face, cannot be estimated; it is beyond price. Cultivate it and you will be welcome everywhere.

Well, folks, it's about time to get out the "rubbies and soak 'em up for the winter.

A bevy of musicians alighted in our village last night and will appear at the armory tonight at a dance, which is said to be the favorite pastime of the young folks.

If we were as adept in recognizing people's rights as we are in seeing their wrongs, the world would go along like a song.

HOW TO KEEP WIFE AT HOME.
I wish to express my appreciation and gratitude to the numerous and kindly disposed ladies who were with me at the time during the late absence of my wife. You were a wonderful help to a man in his home of loneliness. I am expecting that my wife will be away again in the future. Be assured that I entertain happy recollections of your visit. I also liked the lunch.—S. E. Doughty.—Adv. in Bridgeport, S. D., Herald.

James Hutchings Back From England

James Hutchings, proprietor of the Model Bakery, returned Saturday evening after spending several months traveling in this country and in England where he visited his old home. Mr. Hutchings visited with his brother whom he had not seen for more than 40 years and greatly enjoyed the visit in his old home. He visited many places of interest and reports a wonderful trip. After returning to the states he spent considerable time visiting eastern cities and also stopped for visits with friends in the middle west on his way back.

Mr. Hutchings brought back a very old Dutch clock, which has been in the family for more than 100 years. The works are hand made and have wooden hubs and bearings. The face is hand painted and bears an old Dutch picture in colors. The clock is believed to be more than 200 years old, and the wood of the frame is badly worn eaten.

When he left Roseburg, Mr. Hutchings was just recovering from a severe illness. The trip added to his health immensely and he returns to Roseburg feeling much benefited by his journey.

ROMANCE OF FANEUIL HALL

"Cradle of American Liberty" Was Built by Son of French Huguenot Refugee.

An interesting romance is woven around old Faneuil hall in Boston, often referred to as "the cradle of American Liberty." Andrew Faneuil, a French Huguenot, was driven from home by the revocation of the edict of Nantes. He fled to Holland, and thence to America, and was admitted by the governor and council of Massachusetts Bay colony Feb. 1, 1691. He was an able business man, and became the richest man in the colony through trade in a general store. His fortune passed to his son, Peter, and Peter proved both a practical and public-spirited man. He offered to erect a public market building at his own expense if the town would provide proper regulation. The farmers, accustomed to peddle from house to house, opposed this plan, but it passed by a majority of the 727 votes cast.

Peter Faneuil did more than he had promised, for in addition to the market he built a second story with a hall for town meetings and other public functions. On August 27, 1765, the first mass meeting of protest against the stamp act took place in the hall. The meetings to protest against the tea tax were held in the hall in 1773, and the result was the Boston Tea Party of December 16. When Lafayette visited the building in 1824, he said: "May Faneuil Hall stand forever, a monument to teach the world that resistance to oppression is a duty, and will under true republican institutions become a blessing."

EARLY SETTLER POMPOUS

Pioneer Colonist in America Seemed to Lack the Saving Sense of Humor.

A persistent respect for the pomp and vanities of modern life with its distinction of classes and its conventions of respectful observance was held by the early settlers in the American wilderness. They showed a curious lack of a saving sense of humor. When the first settlement at Jamestown was starving, Sir Thomas Gates, on relinquishing his authority, fired a salute from the fort, and made his departure like a king abandoning his realm. He is Warr, arriving a few days later, landed with a flourish of trumpets and a procession, with families borne before him. When he went to church he was attended by an escort of 1000 men, and a guard of 50 men, although there were not more than 200 in the colony.

When the Indians, a people who were supposed to have had little pomp and vanities, went to church, they were summoned to Captain Stoddard's door by the toll of a drum. Each man wore a cloak and carried a musket on his shoulder. They fell in three rows, led by a sergeant, and behind this stood a troop of Indian bowmen with their bows drawn, standing stiffly at his side, with a sword in scabbard and bearing a cross or wand as an emblem of his authority.

COLORFUL COMBS COME INTO VOGUE

THE VOGUE of the wearing of the comb is increasing daily, not to any night. A season or two back, the high Spanish comb came in with the silken fringes and shawls of Spain. And as the seasons grew, so did the height and width of the combs, until they reached almost amazing proportions. And it was found and admitted that there were other women in the world than the Spanish women, who could wear a comb with an air and dash.

Since combs could no longer increase in size, something else had to be done about them. So they took on color.

They now come in all sorts of lovely shades, all very brilliant, to accompany matching gowns, or to lend the dash of color to a black velvet dress. Chinese lacquer reds, and jade green ones are the most vivid and popular hues at present. But these combs cannot properly be called Spanish combs, even though they are patterned after them in shape and design.

But the variety in shades and sizes of the new combs is far from being limited. Some are far changed, others triangular, some round, and some as narrow as a comb, but all are called combs at all. Let every girl
