What Happened When Sheila Elliston Refused Love

By Idah McGlone Gibson

KAY'S FRANTIC SEARCH

As I was almost despairing, I suddenly remembered that at a certain place where they sold Russian brasses Sheila had left her address at one time. She had been very much interested in the woman who owned the little shop and had purchased many things from her. I knew Sheila had never visited that part of the city that she did not visit this place. I was quite sure, when I saw this woman, that she had some knowledge of where Sheila was but she insisted that she had not seen her for many days. This intuition gave me a feeling of hope that I might at least try to get Sheila back to me. I determined to tell her that if she would come, I too, would tell Phil to go.

"Please tell me where Mrs. Spencer is," I pleaded, for I was more than over sure that she knew.

"I cannot tell you, madam. Honestly I do not know."

Then seeing my pale and drawn face, she added, "I would not worry about Mrs. Spencer, Madam. I think she is fully able to take care of herself. And besides there isn't a person in all this part of the city, no matter what his reputation is, that would not care for your sister. She has cared for some member of almost every family here when they have been in trouble. She is an angel."

At that moment I saw Tony Soper pass, walking rapidly. Heedless of everything else, I ran down the street shouting, "Tony, Tony."

He turned an astonished face toward me, when he heard his name. "Oh, my dear Kay, pardon me. I meant Mrs. Wilmington," he exclaimed as he came toward me.

"Call me Kay. Call me anything you please, only help me." I said as I flung myself almost into his arms. "Is it as bad as that?" he asked smiling a wry smile. "Where is Sheila? Can she not help?"

"That is just what I wanted to ask you. Where is she?"

"What, what, what—do you mean," he stammered.

"Sheila has left the house saying that she cannot remain until her affairs are straightened out. She told me not to tell you anything about it, but I do not know to whom else to turn."

"Of course you do not, dear lady," Tony took my arm within his protectively and taking me back to the car, put me in and got in beside me.

"Drive to Battery Park, John," he said, then turning to me: "Tell me all about it while we are going where it is a little pleasant."

"I went over the affair as carefully as was possible in my excited state of mind. Finally I showed him Sheila's letter, and told him what I suspected about the woman in the Russian shop. When I finished Tony said:

"I wouldn't worry very much, Kay. Sheila can take care of herself. And besides I know she has made many friends down in the slums where she has been doing such splendid work this summer. I think. Please go back home and let me take the responsibility. You will make yourself ill if you do not and that would be a calamity just now."

"But I can't do it, Tony. What shall I say to Phil when he comes?"

"Tony's face grew hard. 'I do not think that Phil Spencer need be told anything. And, besides, after what you have told me, I do not expect he will be home very soon.'"

I couldn't blame Tony that he despised Phil, even if Phil were my brother. I came very near despising him myself. Neither could I go home and rest quietly and so after bidding Tony goodbye and being assured by him that he would have something to tell me before I went to sleep that night I took a woman's panacea and went on a shopping jag. Soon I found myself buying hats for Sheila, lingerie for Sheila, handkerchiefs for Sheila, neckties for Sheila. Until the stores closed I kept making purchases and I laughed almost hysterically when I entered my car again and found that I had not bought a single article for myself.

I know that it is a woman's province, a woman's destiny to wait. They wait for everything in this world. The girl waits to grow up. Having grown up she waits for her lover. Then she waits for her wedding day. For ages she waits for the babe that's coming to her as she sews on little clothes and weaves thoughts and prayers into the seams. And then some woman like myself, waits for that time when in the never-never-land there may be a hope of seeing again one's own true love.

Sorrowfully I wondered if I had been an illusion, this love that Phil thought he had for Sheila. I knew that Sheila really loved Phil, because I knew women, but I could never tell just what a man was thinking about. Even my own brother.

"Oh Blake, if you had been here!" I whispered to myself brokenly, as I threw myself onto the bed for a little rest. "This would not have happened. You would have straightened it all out as you always straightened out all my troubles and worries."

Wife Licked for Smoking, "Won't Quit for Any Man"

(International News Service.) KANSAS CITY, Kans., Oct. 12.—The tobacco habit which his wife had acquired when she was a girl caused Cecil Peridas, 58, to whip her, he told Judge George West, whom he faced on a cruelty charge. All of his protestations against his wife's cigarette smoking, he said, have been unavailing and he was forced to drastic measures.

"I admit I whipped her, Your Honor, but her smoking was ruining her health," Peridas explained. "The only way I could make her mind was to treat her rough."

"I've smoked cigarettes since I was 12 years old and I won't quit for any man," Mrs. Dolly Peridas countered.

Judge West ordered the case referred to the Welfare Board.

Color Line Is Now Demanded By Englishman

By CHARLES McCANN (United Press Staff Correspondent.) LONDON, Oct. 12. (United Press.)—Restriction of negro immigration into the United Kingdom is demanded by "John Bull," in an article which declares both that negroes are responsible for much of the crime in England and that white women in increasing numbers are associating with them.

American negroes who came over as "jazz" artists, as well as others who come to England to be educated, remain here, the article charges; some of them to become criminals, others to associate with white women.

"If there is one thing more than another about the West End—the white-light district—of London which strikes an Englishman recently returned from overseas with horror and disgust," the article states, "it is the enormous number of negroes and Asiatics of assorted tints to be found parading about, and the light-hearted fashion in which so many white girls enter into close relationship with them."

"Before the war, these 'gentlemen of color' were few and far between. They were mostly to be found in the neighborhood of the docks, and the only white women who associated with them were drink-sodden creatures who had sunk to the lowest depths of degradation. Now, these people saunter about dressed up like dandies, and white girls hang onto their arms."

"Poorly-paid London shop-girls seem to fall an easy prey to some mysterious glamour which appears to surround a black man, but if they knew the truth, they would not have lost that healthy sense of shame at being seen in the company of a negro which was largely a protection to an older generation."

"Many of these negroes have been imported from America as jazz-drummers and exponents of the barbaric dances which the Yankees are pleased to call music. Others of the colored invaders have been brought here for educational purposes. A very large proportion of them do not return to their homes.

"Some of them may be found in street markets selling quack nostrums. Others, having acquired a medical degree, set up in the poorer districts as cheap doctors, and many of them are under suspicion of making illegal operations their principal source of income. A large number have been convicted of being concerned in cocaine traffic, and there is scarcely a single unpleasant feature of the underworld in which they are not involved."

"It is high time restrictions were placed on this colored immigration, otherwise the country will be branded with an ever-increasing population of half-castes."
