We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield are of finer quality and hence of better taste than in any other cigarette at the price.

Building New Roseburg Line

MARSHFIELD, Oct. 23.—Frod Meyerden, R. E. Hammond and R. D. Dalton, all of the Pacific States Telephone company are in this city on business. Mr. Meyerden and his workers are putting in a new telephone line from Myrtle Point over the highway to Roseburg.

When the construction of the new highway began, it was necessary to take down many telephone poles and lines and put up temporary ones. The new line which the men will put up will be off the right of way of the highway so as not to take up any space on the road.

The men left yesterday to start work immediately, so as to finish before the rainy weather sets in.

SUNRISE ON CRATER LAKE.

The following poem by Alden Harness, which has been set to music, is included in "The Western Songster," now in its third edition. This book contains 72 songs and is used in the public schools all over the state:

In darkness and in solitude,
I stand beside the silent lake;
And far in eastern heavens broad
I see the trembling dawn-light break.

Then upward in long crimson streaks
The new-born splendor brightly gleams,
And down upon majestic peaks
Are poured the sun's resplendent beams.

In matchless beauty far and near
I see, within these walls of stone,
The waters now reflecting clear
The glowing rays upon them thrown.

Now breezes blow and wavelets lift
And swiftly o'er the surface run
And varied colors change and shift,
In splendors of the rising sun.

Down, down within the mighty walls,
Upon the waters deep and cold,
The early light of sunrise falls
In gleams of purple, red and gold.

What Happened When Sheila Elliston Refused Love

By Idah McGlone Gibson

To the Hospital

"We must hurry to the hospital," said one of the men. "Run for a taxi, Harry. It was damned awkward that he should take poison at this moment, but I am not a murderer, and only quick help can save him. We must hurry though, or we'll all be in bad with the police."

At this moment they caught sight of John and me and literally spilled themselves across the street.

I drew nearer to John for they were the roughest men I had ever seen—deeply-lined faces and slumped eyes. All of the three were disheveled, dirty, and showed the effects of poisonous liquor and dope. And Sheila had been in their house!

"Have you seen a taxi about here?" demanded one.

"No, sir," answered my chauffeur. "The street has been deserted during the storm."

The men looked at me curiously. "Were you looking for a taxi, madame?"

"No, my car is just around the corner."

"Thank God," one of them exclaimed. "Madame, will you lend us your car? It is a case of life and death. A man in the house there has just taken poison. You'll have to decide in a hurry, for in the excitement some damned fool has turned in a minute or two, they'll be here and pull the house. We'll all go to the 'jug' and perhaps you with us. In the meantime the man will die."

"Bring him out immediately," I said to the men, who did not wait to hear more.

"John, get the car here by the time they come down."

"But what will you do, Mrs. Wilmington? I hate to leave you here alone with this rabble."

"I have been here alone all night, John."

"Oh, no, you have not. Mr. Phil has been here, and I stood by to take care of you."

My heart beat a little faster. So John, too, knew that Phil had been in that doorway with me. Did he think that I had come down here to spy upon my brother? How much had he heard of Phil's and Snaaue's conversation? Had he seen Sheila and Tony Soper? All this I had no time to ask, even if I had wished.

"Go!" I commanded. "I will walk over to 3rd Ave. and get a taxi."

John had the car at the doorway by the time the men came down, carrying a limp figure. I had an intuition that it was Walter Jones and so I stood near until I could say to John, "Be sure and find out the man's name, and after you have taken him to the hospital, come directly to the

W. L. Cobb of Roseburg democratic candidate for county judge, was a caller in Glendale yesterday. Mr. Cobb will undoubtedly receive a strong vote in this locality for he is a man who stands four-square, able, efficient and capable to the highest degree, and Glendale voters would welcome a change in the old political "ring" down at the county seat. We heartily all feel that a "change will do us good."

J. Gould, the painter, wrecked his auto Sunday night by colliding with a horse. Mr. Gould is laid up with bad bruises, while Howard Martin and "Jones" Tuttle both have marks of the fray. The accident occurred on the highway near the F. E. Williams ranch. Glendale News.

LOOSENED SPIKES ARE CAUSE OF BAD TRAIN WRECK

(By Associated Press.)
WILLIAMSON, Ind., Oct. 20.—The belief was expressed today by the train crew and passengers that the loosening of spikes from the rails caused the wreck of the Wash east-bound passenger train near here last night, causing the death of three persons and injury to seven others. Seven coaches were burned. Someone familiar with signals loosened the spikes for the wrecking was not disturbed, said Conductor Halbur.
