HAS NO CINCH ON ALPHABET

Prairie Village Barber Replies to Demand of R. R. Company Not to Use Its Initials.

Some time ago the Canadian Pacific Railway company issued notices to certain hotels, restaurants, shops, etc., protesting against the unauthorized use of its initials. One Timothy O'Brien, proprietor of the "C. P. R. Barber Shop" in a prairie village, received the warning, and replied as follows:

"Dear Sir—I got your notice. I don't want no law suit with yure company. I no yure company owns most everything—railroads, steamers, most of the best land and the time, but I don't know as you own the hole alphabet. The letters on my shop don't stand for yure ralerode, but for somethin' better. I left a muther in Ireland, she is dead and gawn, but her memories are dear to me. Her maiden name was Christina Patricia Beardon, and what I want to no is what you are going to do about it. I suppose you won't argue that the balance of my sign what refers to cut rates has got anything to do with yure ralerodes. There ain't been no cut rates round these parts that I nos of."—London Morning Post.

Green Diamonds in Africa.

Two discoveries of green diamonds have recently been reported from South Africa. The first, found in the Bloemhof district, was a 5 1/2 karat stone, black and opaque, which, on cutting, yielded a jewel of 1 1/2 karats of an emerald-green shade. It has been appraised by London experts at about $5,000, or about 100 times the price of a water-white diamond, says the Engineering and Mining Journal-Press. The second green diamond was washed out at Parys, a short time ago, and was of ten karats weight. It has been sent to a government valuator at Cape Town. One of the most celebrated green diamonds is the " Dresden Green," in the Saxon Crown Jewels, which weighs about 40 karats and is apple-green in color.

Freak Memory of a German.

Herr Otto Schrader of Berlin is reputed to have the most marvelous memory in the world. The German Meteorological society tested it recently. "What was the weather the other day—say November 23, 1920?" the president of the society asked Schrader. Schrader never hesitated: "It was very clear before dawn," said Schrader. "In the afternoon it was cloudy, with snow flurries. The temperature was two or three degrees above freezing," and Schrader was right, the German scientists found out on checking up. Several American theatrical men are said to be after him to appear on the vaudeville stage in the United States this summer.

What Happened When Sheila Elliston Refused Love

By Idah McGlone Gibson

The Search For Sheila.

The chambermaid seemed very stupid to us, but we did finally get from her a few facts. Sheila had taken off her dress and her shoes and sent them out to be renovated early in the day.

"I brought them back to Madame about 5 o'clock," said the maid.

"She seemed very nervous. I noticed that her hand trembled as she gave me a tip; otherwise she seemed all right to me."

I turned to Tony, for I saw that I would have to rather the details. Both men were almost beyond anything except realising the fact that Sheila was gone.

"What time did you get here?" I asked Tony.

"Exactly 8 o'clock."

"What time did you telephone for the nurse?"

"About half past 9."

"Did you telephone for a doctor?"

"No, for I had already telephoned you and was expecting you any minute."

"It was late before you telephoned me, Tony."

"I know it," he answered. "I know it, but you must remember that Sheila had made me promise not to communicate with you in any way. I tried to make her let me off from my promise before I sent for you."

"What do you mean by that?" Phil broke in.

"Just exactly what I say. Sheila had come to the conclusion that it would be better for her to disappear. Although she knew, Kay, that you still loved her, she felt she could not tell her plans to you because you would object. I was the only friend to whom she could turn."

"Coming back from Walter Jones?"

"Then you did see Walter Jones?" interrupted Phil.

"No. We were told he was unconscious and we left. That must have been, Phil, when you saw us coming out the door. You see Sheila was sure that Walter would never regain consciousness, therefore she would never be able to clear herself in your eyes. Walter was her last chance."

"Just as we were going to get into the taxi this thought evidently struck her. She realized she had failed. She staggered and almost fainted. I was just in time to catch her."

Phil groaned.

"Try and get Dr. Thornton, Phil," I urged. "I am almost sure that if Sheila gained her senses she would go to him."

"But I think she is still delirious," said Tony, "for surely she expected me to dinner. She had told me her whole story, and while I did not blame her, Phil, for wanting to get away from everyone I had come back to try and persuade her to find you and explain the whole thing."

Phil hadn't waited to hear the end of Tony's sentence. He had gotten the doctor's house and had been told that he was at the hospital.

Phil was now trying frantically to ring him up there.

After an exasperating delay he turned to us and said: "I can't get anyone at the hospital who will tell me anything. The only thing to do is to take a car and go there. I when we had your car and John here, Daughter Born—"

Traffic Officer Perkins to Leave

Earl W. Perkins, state traffic officer who has been employed here for the past year, has been transferred to Oregon City and E. R. Thurber, traffic officer at Astoria, has been ordered to Roseburg. Mr. Perkins during the time he has been located here has made an excellent record. He has been fair in his dealings with the motorists and is liked not only by the officers but by the motor vehicle drivers as well. He has done a great deal to curb reckless driving on the highway in this vicinity and has at all times been a courteous and efficient officer and his many friends here regret his departure.

This Man Intends to Keep it in the House

"In May or June, 11, I sent to you and got four bottles which were worth many dollars to me. They enabled me to go to work a gain.
