LABOR RELATIONS AND TRADE.

Prosperity depends to a large extent on the question whether the next year shall see peace or war in industry. If the capitalists take the position that it is legitimate for them to run their business to suit their own pleasure and profit regardless of the needs of the community, and of the welfare of the human beings who look to them for employment, then there is a condition that is menacing to prosperity. If the wage earners take the position that they can get their demands accepted by applying force to their employers and the community, if they tie up the production of the necessities of life by great strikes, there is likewise a condition where there will be no prosperity for anybody. The greatest obstacle to prosperity during the present year has been the coal and railroad strikes. There can not be first class business while these trade wars continue, which are just as destructive as international war. Probably both elements learned some things out of these recent conflicts. Anyway, there is at present less labor trouble in the country than for a good many years. It seems as if both sides were beginning to see that they commit economic suicide so long as they keep fighting each other. The most serious threat on the industrial horizon at present is the chance that the coal miners may strike again when their present contract expires. But it is doubtful if they want to run the risk of another five months idleness at present. There is never a time when the pessimists will be unable to find some unfavorable factors. With the abundance of capital, the low stocks of merchandise that must be filled, the improving purchasing power among the farmers and relative freedom from labor troubles, the outlook today is strongly for good business for the coming year.

Americanism is tolerant. Class hatred or religious enthusiasm that leads to factional strife, and which denies to any one the right to do as he pleases in matters of conscience, is intolerance, and, therefore, not in keeping with the spirit of the Declaration of Independence and the constitution of the United States. Americanism is deep and broad, tolerant, overlooking the weaknesses of men and inspiring confidence in each other as citizens of a great commonwealth; it makes no religious test necessary, and only asks loyalty to the flag, which protects all creeds beneath its fold. Americanism throws no obstacle in the path of any man, but seeks to make his life better and worth the living; it engenders no hatred because of divergence of views or beliefs, but vouchsafes to every citizen those inalienable rights that are heaven-born for every man and beyond the power of mortals to deny or attempt to withhold. Americanism is all this, and much more. The common practice on the part of very many these days of reconstruction to fling the epithet, "un-American," at any who may not meet individual standards, is all a mistake, and very often the man who thus challenges his neighbor might, if righteously judged, be in the same category as those self-vindicating men in the time of the Lowly Nazarene, who, declaring the woman unworthy, were condemned by the inscription in the sand, "Let he who is guiltless cast the first stone." As Americans, it is necessary that we be charitable, exercising the spirit of the Golden Rule, and in thus doing there will be no divisions, while our beloved America will become greater, the spirit of our forebears leading us to yet unreach heights in civilization, perpetuating the most equitable and glorious government of earth's history, and forever making possible for its citizens "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The period from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving is set aside by the American Red Cross as the time for their annual roll call. The amount asked by this noble cause of each individual is so trifling, that it seems as if anyone not absolutely in need would want to contribute it. A person with a truly generous heart ought to find just as much satisfaction in giving money to relieve misfortune, as in spending it to satisfy his own love of pleasure. The money spent to please some temporary whim is quickly gone, but the money you give to relieve suffering remains a source of satisfaction permanently. The world is full of misery at this time. The terrible events in Turkey have driven more than a million people from their homes. They shiver and starve while our people live in comfort. All over Europe are people whose despairing cries can not go unheard. The Red Cross offers you the chance to do your share to help relieve this unhappiness, for an amount that few people will miss.

High school and college boys who do not excel in athletics feel themselves small and insignificant factors in their student life, at this period when the football player is king. They can give some help by rooting in the bleachers, but the plaudits of the crowd will never be offered to them. Many boys try and try, but they never win success in athletic sports, which demand a peculiar combination of manual skill, quick vision, and rapid action. While these qualities are always useful, they are not the high winners in the game of life. There is always some form of activity open in which the non-athletic can make good, if he will dig persistently in that field, he will win results.

"Is there dust on the Good Book in your home," asks a country editor of his readers. From some other things in the same column in the same issue of that "influential moulder of public opinion," we are led to believe that most of the dust imagined to be on the covers of the "Good Book" in the other fellow's home really belongs to the alleged intellect of the editor "who wants to know."

We are gradually sobering up after election and Armistice Day festivities.

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

Our city papas
Will soon get a chance
To take action on
Abolishing those massive Traffic posts in the Street intersections and
We hope they won't hesitate
To wield a heavy sledge
And reduce the aforesaid
Monuments to dust.

"Death toll of automobiles more than 12,000." This includes those who dropped dead when a woman driver gave them the right of way.

When Al Creason was arrested in the main stem by ex-service men Saturday and requested to pay a fine and help feed the visiting vets he reached into his pocket without a moment's delay and handed forth three beer checks.

We'll bet that a lot of the girls with bobbed hair are getting cold necks now.

The Rsbj. police dept. travels in three h's no one can sneak up and wallop 'em on.

The hoof-shaking contingent of the local Elks will gather en masse tonight to celebrate the anniversary of Terpsichore's birth.

We'll be glad when our typewriter ribbon wears out and so'll our readers.

OUR IDEA ON PEON PANTS.

Peon pants or treader trousers are handy for the fellow who puts his shoes on first. How many times have you, sir, arisen from your downy couch and without forethought put on your brogans and then discovered after you've laced them all up that your trousers should have been put on first? There's where the bull fight breaches come in handy.

And again the corset-like fit around the waist makes it unnecessary to wear a belt. The fellow with the wasp-waist need no longer worry about his trousers slipping. You have to use a shoe horn to get into 'em and a button-hook to get out. They are absolutely the safest sort of wearing apparel on the market at the present time.

The fancy work on the legs of the trousers is simply like the parsley the cook puts on the steak. It is not necessary but makes it look better. And who wouldn't rather have a slit in the lower part of the trousers than one on the rear side?

If a fellow has crust enough to wear the Valentino vestment then let him go to it. Some day he'll wake up and realize he was all wrong.

Now that election is over we're waiting for some wise geek to tell our office to wash our windows.

One of the local sheiks who has grown up overnight took his first dancing lesson yesterday and his Maw asked him how he liked it. He replied: "Nuthin' to it. All you have to do is keep turnin' around and wipin' yer feet."

The hand that rocks the cradle

CYNICAL DEFINITION.

"Pa, what is politeness?"
"Politeness, my son, is the art of not letting other people know what we think of them."

THE POLITICAL CALL.

"Remember," said the serious friend, "your country is calling you."
"I know that," replied Senator Sorghum, "but there's not the unanimity I'd like. Different parts of the country are calling me different things."

PRODUCTION, MARKETING ARE EQUALLY IMPORTANT

Oregon horticulturists are not quibbling as to which is more important, growing or marketing their fruit, nuts and vegetables, but planning to take them both up at their annual convention at Corvallis, November 23-25.

"Just so the grower can make more money and the marketer more money," it makes little difference to his income whether it is by cutting down the cost of producing or by selling with less expense of handling, commission, hauling, storage and speculation," is the way the officers regard the problem.

So they are going to get the best growers and scientists and dealers to meet with them at the convention and try to unravel the tangled threads of getting good stuff cheaply and putting it before the consumer economically.

This involves study of the land and the plant, and the handling and selling agencies, warehouses, factories, cold storage and shipping.

All these subjects will be considered by the best informed men to be had.

Some results of science at work will be seen in the horticultural show.

The program is the biggest ever put on by the society, which is in its 23rd year.

Present Traffic Signs Condemned

A petition asking the city council to remove the dangerous and unsightly traffic signs used in street intersections and replace them with the dome-shaped signs not in use practically all cities, is being circulated today. The heavy unsightly monuments now in use are not only eyesores but they are dangerous. They occupy a great deal of space in the intersections which are already too small and are frequently knocked over and rolled around in the way of traffic.

Quite frequently accidents in intersections could be avoided if the drivers of cars could swerve their machines, but with these heavy signs occupying the center of the street it is more badly wrecked in striking one of them than in a collision.

Most of the signs are now using a dome-shaped traffic monument. It is about a foot in diameter and eight or ten inches high and in some cases is electrically lighted. These signs are as effective as the heavier monuments in making the center of the street and in the event of emergency a car can dodge and drive over them without damage. Although they are not as heavy as the present signs, they remain in place fully as well and are considered much more effective. They can be made from metal or cement and can be cast any color desired so that they may be made at a very low cost.

Musical Treat is Promised Tomorrow

MISS ETHEL BUSCH, Violinist

Very favorable reports come to this city of the Cosmo Players, who have just completed a six day engagement at the Heilig theatre in Eugene, and will appear here at the Armory on Thursday and Friday evenings.

They present a miniature musical revue, and produce everything from ractime to grand opera. A 15 minute marimba concert will be given at 7 p. m., each night in front of the Armory.

Community Dinner Will Be Given

The Ladies' Aid society of Riddle is planning for one of the biggest events of the season, to take place on Thanksgiving day. It is to be a community Thanksgiving dinner and will be prepared by the Ladies' Aid society. The greater part of the population of Riddle has already agreed to forego the pleasure of a home dinner on that day and dine with the Ladies' Aid society. One of the persuasions held forth by the ladies giving the dinner is a "peek" into the menu, which will consist of turkeys, geese, duck, chickens, candied sweet potatoes, cranberries, vegetables, fruit salad, pumpkin and mince pies, nuts, etc.

The ladies will charge a dollar a plate for the dinner, and the full proceeds will go toward the building fund of the new community church at Riddle. An invitation has been extended to anyone in Roseburg who cares for a feast to motor out and attend the dinner.

DUO ART CONCERT.

Alice Lavina Andrews, (mezzo contralto) assisting artist. Presbyterian church, Thursday, Nov. 16, at 8:15 p. m. Do not miss this educational musical treat. It is free. Invitations and programs can be had at Moore Music Store or phone Mrs. L. B. Moore, 502.
