Entered as second class matter May 17, 1920, at the post office at Roseburg, Oregon, under the Act of March 2, 1879.

ROSEBURG, OREGON, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1922.

THE RESULTS OF GOOD SERVICE.

Evidence of the popularity of the News-Review throughout this county is the fact that within the last thirty days over fifty new subscribers have been added to our subscription list. The last sworn statement made by the management on October 1, 1922, gave an average daily circulation of 3950 copies for the past six months. Today the News-Review is printing FOUR THOUSAND AND FIFTY COPIES EACH DAY—a gain of exactly one hundred new subscribers since the first day of October, this year. It goes without saying that for a newspaper in a county with the population of Douglas this is a showing that cannot be duplicated in any other section of the state. The reason for this state of advancement is simple. Since the consolidation of the Review and Evening News the policy of the management has been that every citizen in the county is deserving of the best news service possible, and that this should be given in a fair and impartial way, without the least attempt at coloring. Subscribers to the News-Review appreciate the service they are getting and new names are being enrolled daily for the leading publication of the southern part of the state, which is most gratifying to the management and compels us to strive to a greater degree to please the public that their every need in the way of a good, wide-awake newspaper is represented by this prosperous section of the state will always be a leading feature of the county's assets. People of Douglas county long ago realized that the News-Review is published in the best interests of the people—untrammeled and free to express its opinion on any subject—owned and operated by persons who have no personal motives to advance, further than doing the greatest good to the greatest number of people throughout the large territory it serves.

This method of conducting a newspaper has brought about wonderful results and the public can be assured there will be no deviation from these principles, but a greater effort advanced to increase the popularity of the News-Review.

Representative John P. Hill, of Maryland, is the author in congress for a bill to modify the Volstead act by substituting a liquid with 2.75 per cent kick, in lieu of the one-half of the one per cent alcohol prohibition law now in effect. He proposes a tax of $10 a barrel on domestic beer, $30 a barrel on imported beer, $10 a gallon on imported champagne, $5 a gallon on imported still wines and $2 a gallon on domestic wines. If it is necessary that we return to the manufacture of liquor in order for this country to pay a legitimate bonus to our soldier boys, we are right here to say that the bonus should not be accepted, regardless of the scheme advanced by Representative Hill, who states that it will raise a half million dollars a year. The joker in the bill is a rise to get back to pre-war distribution of liquor, and is an insult to our ex-soldiers.

The resignation of United States Senator Newberry, of Michigan, announced yesterday will have a wholesome effect on national politics, from a republican standpoint. It is too bad Newberry did not reach this conclusion long ago. His right to a seat in the senate was questioned from the date of his election, and, while the higher courts decided he was entitled to recognition, the fact that he spent much money to gain his election, along with other political gossip averse to his general fitness to represent his constituency, left a bad impression throughout the nation and did not reflect credit to the republican party.

As a pre-Christmas present the paper mills are offering newspapers of the state newspaper for about one cent advance over last year's prices. And at this price they are not over anxious to dispose of their product, which is evidence that the market is going to tighten up stronger before the first of the coming year, and a still further advance may be announced. One cent doesn't mean much to some people, but when it is applied to a car load of paper it amounts to about $100 and four car loads a year would be just four times this sum, or $400 over and above last year's price.

In the national parks a great effort is made to preserve the natural beauty of the place. A camper who undertook to dump a lot of rubbish and squalid litter around, would soon find the park employes after him. But all over the country natural beauty spots are constantly being marred by people who feel no responsibility for maintaining the attractiveness of the place. They visit these romantic scenes, and deface them with tin cans and other camp refuse. The touch of man unless well regulated and controlled, seems to carry a certain taint with it that blights the fairest work of nature.

The weekly forum lunches under the direction of the local Chamber of Commerce were initiated today noon. These weekly get together affairs are a mighty fine incentive for substantial work in many ways for the good of the city and county. Help them along by your presence.

This is regular spring weather. About time we were beginning to sell some of our cloaks in those fellows who are not so fortunate as to live in such a delightful section as the Umpqua valley.

Congress is on the job again, with several big issues to handle during the abbreviated session, paramount among which is the ship subsidy bill.

THEME

This is a great massive feature, directed by Rold Oates, formerly a bartender in Sutherlin. This picture is the greatest society drama that has ever been produced about the Cow (creek) country. The story is of a man who goes to Canyonville for a rest and gets arrested. Rodolph Vassellina, the hero with the corrugated hair, is dressed in the garb of a Tiller cowman and is quite adept at tossing the steer. While he is chasing the "steaks" around the detours, a beautiful girl comes to Canyonville to get a divorce and get married, we don't know which. The two fall in love with each other and he rides her around the town in a side-car on a bicycle. They have great times together until he starts to playing marbles for money. This gambling scene would make Monte Carlo turn green with envy. The girl tells the man that if he doesn't stop gambling she will leave him forever. He goes from bed to work and finally ends up at the punch-board. That night he and four cowboys start to play poker. The four cowboys leave the dye, with all of the paper chips. The hero is disgusted and takes a "writing" tablet and dies shortly thereafter. "Two Gun" Hopkins then strides before the footlights, lifts the sobbing heroine from the gutter. Ben Turpentine who happens along at that moment approaches the couple and with a quick gesture slaps "Two Gun" on the kisser. "Two Gun" is mighty riled by this time and loses no time in telephoning to Theodore Roberts who steps out from behind a rain barrel and arrests the trio. While on the way to jail Hare L. Lloyd appears on the scene and forecloses on the mortgage on the old homestead. In the midst of all this, a car with side-curling and tinned lights dashes down the main thoroughfare of the village and in the excitement a 2-gallon fat worn by "Two Gun" is knocked off. The final scene is the usual "chickadee" society with the mysterious car in the lead. The alleged boot-licker is finally cornered and his carload of contraband turnips confiscated. One of the cast then steps forward and waves the American flag and the play is ended.

APPLAUSE.

Meetings Resumed This Evening

The Monday meetings at the Baptist church were omitted, but they are to be resumed tonight, to continue each evening this week, beginning at 7:30. The Sunday meetings were a great success. Sunday night nearly 300 people crowded into the building to hear Dr. Bell and the closing concert at the temple (the church) to hear other one was made reward for enjoying. The singing concert was one of the best in the series that has been given at the meetings. The crowd was more than 500 and by both the choral and solo numbers. All had real respect that Mr. Deeds could not star this week.

The teaching of Dr. Bell is coming more and more into favor. The non-christian people are hearing him gladly; for they find that he has a message for them and that he will not embarrass them because of their unbelief. He is sympathetic with every man's position, irrespective of what he expected throughout this week.

DESIRES TO MEET EXTENSION STUDENTS

Miss Maudie Hair, of the extension division of the University of Oregon, is spending a few days in Roseburg looking up the correspondence school students. Farm Meat Supply.

In the operation of each farm there is a season for most of the activities. During the months of November and December the farmer usually sets aside one or two days for the slaughter and preparation of his home meat supplies.

In doing this work there is possibly as many different ways of doing it as there are farmers doing the work. This does not necessarily mean that there is a need of improvement in doing this work, but it is found that there are quite a number of farmers who would like to know how best to care their meat in a way that it will keep sweet and just the right amount of salt and other curing ingredients. This is especially true of pork products.

When the product is cured by a good salt cure formula and properly smoked no difficulty is experienced in selling it on the market when there is more than a need for the home supply. Usually the best information obtainable on this subject is to be found in Farmers' Bulletin No. 1156, "Rising, Curing and Canning the Home Meat Supply." This bulletin will be mailed or can be had by calling at the office of the County Agent. The bulletin contains much practical and valuable information.

WHITE PINE BLISTER RUST TO BE FOUGHT

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 21 (United Press).—The third white pine blister rust conference has been called to meet here November 22 and 23 to hear reports from agencies working on rust control and to make further plans to check the advance of this disease.

C. A. Park, president of the Oregon board of horticulture, and R. P. Corvallis and one of the leaders in the fight on the blister rust, have initiated the third conference.

White Pine Blister rust is not as harmless as the name would indicate, those interested in the campaign against it point out. From a minor tree disease in the Pacific Northwest, confined chiefly to British Columbia, the rust has spread to western Washington after becoming more than well established in British Columbia. Investigations have shown that the blight has not yet reached Oregon.

The ravage in Northwest forests has not been unlike the havoc caused by the boll-wool in the southern cotton belt, except that the work of the boll-wool is more apparent to the naked eye of the amateur than the pine blister rust. Great stands of white pine are threatened. White pine is one of the chief kinds of lumber grown and handled commercially in the Pacific Northwest.

The growth and spread of the rust has been insidious, it was learned at the two previous conferences, and the average man has not become aware even of its existence. The destruction caused in forests by the blight is exceeded only by that caused by fires.
