ROSEBURG, OREGON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1922.

THE CHIEF DESIRE.

The students of a class at the University of Michigan were recently asked to fill out a questionnaire stating what were the chief desires of their hearts. Among these desires "love" had first place. Next came "perpetual youth," "high scholarship" and "victory over Ohio state university" in football. Wise elderly people may regard such expressions of feeling with a smile, but all these interests are tremendously vital to such young folks. Such answers as the above, which would be duplicated in other colleges, show what a prominent place the subject of love has on young folks of student age. This is a normal development, and the attraction of the sexes can not be suppressed. But it is a force leading many people into deep water at an early age. Many young persons of student age have serious love affairs profoundly affecting their future. Older people laugh at such feelings as an exhibition of calf love. Yet young folks of that age suffer keenly as the result of such affairs. They form attachments of much strength and throw their hearts into them. Then if the object of their affections does not fully reciprocate, or manifests flirtatious ways, these stricken ones are miserable. Their anguish may appear laughable to others, but it is very real to them. Youth is elastic and most of them get over a disappointment but sensitive natures can't stand the strain. Young people of this type find a wholesome outlet when they go in for athletics. If their mind is dwelling too much on the other sex, the enthusiasm of the athletic field is a wonderful stabilizer. This interest will carry them over a critical period, and then they can take up love and marriage in a more mature and normal way, and be better able to make a happy and sensible choice.

Secretary of Labor Davis wants the passport law governing the selection of immigrants changed or expanded. He has prepared a bill for submission to congress which provides that immigrants be given blood, physical, mental and character tests before they are allowed to embark for this country. The three per cent restriction helps to reduce the quantity of immigration. It makes little provision for the quality. Such desirability tests as are required are given mostly after the immigrant reaches this country. If this were done at the ports of embarkation everybody would be better off. As for the thorough scrutiny suggested, every point is good. If immigrants of clean blood, sound body, mind and character can be assured, the arbitrary restriction of numbers will be less vital, while the process of elimination through the tests will help automatically to keep down to a safe margin.

Douglas county and all southern Oregon, and, in fact, the entire state, will feel very much satisfied when the controversy over the presidency of the next state senate is settled by choosing for this important office Senator B. L. Eddy. And, by the way, we think the Douglas senator is entitled to the honor. He would make a mighty fine presiding officer.

The only thing more monotonous than to have to do the same things at the same time every day is having to do nothing at any time any day.

You can't have everything you want nor want everything you have, but you can be happy by forgetting a lot of things.

Nobody can be overeducated but every once in a while is found the man who is overschooled.

In Memory of Dr. R. L. Miller

He Rides Again

Back in the days when the West was young,
 And the fame of the car and 'phone unsung,
 When linking the village and countryside,
 Was a strong limbed horse and a man to ride,
 When the call of the sick was a thing to heed
 And Doc was young and so was his steed.

And mounts aplenty he had, my friend,
 From the little greyed "Duke" to the big bayed "Ben,"
 And into the saddle and far away,
 For that was the man and that the day,
 Nor matter the miles for his horse was tough,
 A woman in pain, and that was enough.

What of the mudding snow and rain?
 What mattered the ferry was out again?
 For he swam the stream with a devil-may-care,
 Then yodeled a cry he would soon be there,
 And hope sprang up in a breast forlorn,
 For Doc arrived and the child was born.

And these were the times of a primitive West,
 Of a primitive man on a primitive quest,
 When a hand clasp meant what the heart would say,
 For they made men right in that yesterday,
 'Twas a simple life and a simple code,
 And the horse was king to the man who rode.

So saddle a horse for he rides again,
 A snow white steed on a golden rein,
 With a rider spurred by a voice of yore,
 Of a missing mate who had gone before,
 And the night is clear and the road is plain,
 But he isn't alone as he rides again.

Prune Dickin's

BY BERT G. BATES.

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

This is the time
 Of the year to make
 Out the lists of names
 Of those to whom
 You are going to send
 Xmas greeting cards and
 If you happen to get one
 From someone you didn't
 Remember all you have to do
 Is to send a New Year's card
 To them.

Frank Norton brought us in a bunch of canned prunes 'tother day and we devoured them without a murmur and we liked 'em quite a lot, but we're glad Prune Dickin didn't invent the idea of canning prunes while we were in the army because we had enough of the wrinkled fruit without making it so easy for the cooks to pack it around in cans.

THE MODERN FLAT.

"What objection did he have to renting the flat?"
 "He said I was so bow-legged that I would be continually rubbing the paper off the walls."

We saw a regular pussy-footer this a. m. He is one of those birds who hangs around with the police force, isn't on the city payroll, but just makes it his business to tip off the cops concerning little, dinky, petty things. When we noticed this individual he was in the act of writing down the number of a car which had been parked three minutes in a place where the law provides 5 minutes is the limit. With an air of wisdom he jotted down the number and hot-footed it to find the cop. The sooner the police force in this city ride itself of these leeches the better off the whole community will be.

Former Resident of Roseburg Is Dead

William Lambert Archambeau, a former resident of Roseburg, died in Portland on November 29, according to word reaching this city today. He resided here for a number of years and has many friends in Douglas county who mourn his death. He was the husband of Hattie C. Archambeau and the brother of Lewis M., Edmond L., Francis A., of Eugene, Henry W., Charles L., of Canada, and Mrs. A. Spalding of Spokane. The funeral services will be held at the Holan undertaking parlors in Portland, on Monday, December 4, and interment will follow in the Riverside cemetery.

Church Packed for Revival Service

The Christian church was packed last night at the revival service and all who were there enjoyed a most delightful evening. The pantomime by the children was one of the most beautiful ever put on in this church and had a wonderful effect on the audience. The pantomime was on "The Dream of Paradise." A little child was seen asleep and dreaming. The angel guardian was standing near, then the heavenly host appeared on the scene, keeping in motion with the song as it was sung by Charles Stanton, and at the close from the gallery, representing the heaven by singer, Miss Jeannette Gibbs sang the closing chorus. The sermon on "Excuses" was one of the best the evangelist has preached and had a telling effect on the audience. The solo of Mr. Burrus was in keeping with the sermon, a song story on the pleading of the Holy Spirit in the different ages of one's life and His final departure after rejection. There is no service this evening, but on Sunday and during the coming week the meetings continue. The evangelist will preach Sunday morning on "The Reason for the Hope Within Us," and in the evening, "The Sin of Neglect." Special musical features at Sunday services. A welcome for all.

North Umpqua River May Be Developed

That the California-Oregon Power company is making a careful and complete investigation of the power possibilities of the North Umpqua river, with a plan of ultimately harnessing the water-power and converting it into electrical energy, is the statement made by J. C. Thompson, who was in the city today for a short time attending to business matters. The company has filed on power sites on the North Umpqua and under those filings has a right to hold the sites for three years, during which time plans may be developed. Work, however, must start in three years or else the rights are lost.

The company is now negotiating for contracts in the northern part of the state, and if these are secured, the North Umpqua development will be assured. There is a great loss in transmission and if the development is in the northern part of the state, materializes and additional power is needed, the company will save by developing power on the North Umpqua instead of at Prospect, as at present.

Mr. Thompson and H. L. Welther, manager of the Rose River district, went the day at Myrtle Creek and ridge, conferring with the officials of those towns, which are negotiating for power from the California-Oregon company.

Thanksgiving Ball Was Huge success

Company D, Oregon national guard, who sponsored the grand Thanksgiving ball at the armory on Thursday night, made the annual event one of the best in years and established a reputation that will live for a long time. The ball, which was strictly a formal affair, was delightful from every standpoint. The decorations were beyond description and showed days of hard work. The entire building presented a beautiful sight. A large canopy, covered with evergreen, lead from the sidewalk to the main corridor. The ball room was decorated with the national colors, red, white and blue. Several unique features were introduced during the evening. The moonlight waltzes were worthy of mention. The lights were all dimmed and a spotlight thrown on a large silken flag, which was waving from the force of an electric fan. A prize fox trot was another feature. The grand march, lead by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haynes, was very pretty.

The Umpqua Five orchestra played a clever program of music, starting with "The Stars and Stripes Forever" as a grand march.

So successful was the dance that the annual event next year will be looked forward to with great interest.

THOUSANDS ENLIST IN CRUSADE AGAINST INHUMAN ANIMAL TREATMENT

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Twelve thousand Illinois men have been commissioned as special constables in one of the most highly organized anti-cruelty societies in the United States.

Formed four years ago as the Department of Constabulary of the State Society for Prevention of Cruelty and Apprehension of Horse and Automobile Thieves, the organization has extended into every county and is now branching out in Indiana and Wisconsin under similar laws. There are already a thousand members in each of those states.

Organized along semi-military lines, the constabulary forms an adjunct to the regular paid police officers, ready to assist in any emergency or to take charge in the absence of the regular authorities.

While the original purpose of the movement was to prevent cruelty and track horse and automobile thieves, the department now maintains automobile patrols, operates a special intelligence service to ferret out vice, gambling, bootlegging and other offenses, and furnishes men to keep order at fires and in other emergencies.

Among the cases brought by the constabulary, and now pending in Chicago courts, is one in which a large teaming contractor is accused of underfeeding 500 horses. As a result of the society's work, according to Walter P. Stuart, general superintendent of the constabulary, diseased, overworked and underfed horses have practically been eliminated from Chicago.

The constabulary has a troop in every police precinct in Chicago, several in the outlying townships, and a troop in each downstate county, a total of 153 troops.

The maximum strength of each troop is one captain, four first lieutenants, 16 second lieutenants and 224 constables. In addition there is an inspector commanding each of the 29 divisions into which the state has been divided, and a county superintendent of the society in each county.

OVER 4,000 BIRDS MARKED LAST WEEK

Nearly 30,000 Pounds Consigned to Farmers' Pool Here Net Growers 41 Cents.

Oakland Tribune: More than 4,000 turkeys weighing over 50,000 pounds were marketed in Oakland Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving trade. Of these the farm bureau exchange took 2,335, buying part of them direct and putting the rest in the pool. Their total weight was nearly 30,000 pounds making an average of more than 12 and a half pounds apiece. The J. T. Bridges company shipped about 1350 birds weighing 15,000 pounds, while Baker & Flannery handled about 600, weighing over 7,000 pounds. At Yoncalla the pool received 15,000 pounds.

Buying started Thursday morning at 40 cents and remained at that figure until about three o'clock in the afternoon when the exchange paid 41 cents for a lot of several hundred birds comprising a private pool that had been organized by Geo. Hall and other smaller lots. Other buyers continued to pay 42 cents which will net the growers 41.

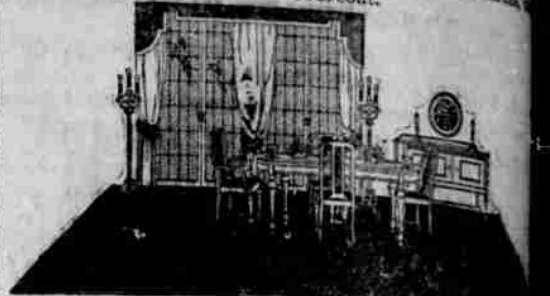

It is estimated that only about a third of the turkeys of this section were marketed last week which leaves a large number to come in at Christmas time. The birds were nearly all in fine shape, those brought in by George Hall being among the best. Rush Clarke with 255 birds had about the largest lot.

MUST SAVE ELK.

HOQUIAM, Wa., Dec. 2.—The Elks must save the elk, by discouraging the practice of B. P. O. E. members wearing genuine elk teeth as a sign of the order, in the opinion of F. W. Mathias, secretary of the Hoquiam commercial club.

Recently the number of these tame animals, illegally slaughtered in the Olympic peninsula, has been increasing. Forest rangers and timber men have found large numbers of elk killed, their teeth extracted and their carcasses left to rot. One man is said to have slaughtered 30 of the animals in one day, and escaped the country before he could be arrested.

"It is no sport to hunt elk, even if the law permitted it," Mr. Mathias said.

"The elk tooth is a symbol of man. To shoot them is to shoot man. Sport, however, is not the excuse. Each tooth is worth $1.00 and I understand that the man who kills one is entitled to $35 in the east."

The elk tooth is a symbol of man. To shoot them is to shoot man. Sport, however, is not the excuse. Each tooth is worth $1.00 and I understand that the man who kills one is entitled to $35 in the east.
