WOMEN'S COLLEGES.

A New York business man, being recently asked to subscribe to a woman's college endowment fund, let out some of his pent-up indignation in reply to the solicitor. He is much down on certain tendencies of modern young women. If he had his way he would have the college girls taken out and put at manual labor. He also remarked that the education the young women of the period need is to leave off smoking cigarettes, stop using slang, give up their bold and brazen manner, their paint, powder, lipsticks and high-heeled shoes, and stop dressing indecently. The young women of the period have plenty of faults, just as the young men have. But most people feel that the faculties of these institutions are made up of the finest types of womanhood, cultured, intelligent ladies, contact with whom must have a gracious influence over every girl who enters these institutions. Many an ill-bred girl comes into this environment with some of these faults which this business man notes. She sees for the first time how winsome a refined woman can become. Gradually the coarser side of her nature is smoothed down and she develops qualities of courtesy and charm. Some girls come out of college with much philosophy and literature in their heads, but not much conception of practical living. Probably in time the colleges will give more emphasis to the pressing problems of modern life. Some girls go to college who would do better to take business courses. But, whatever defects may exist in these colleges, they turn out a body of women who have an intelligent grasp of public questions and who have high aims. If some of them have the faults of which this critic complained, it is at least true that college experience tends to discourage unwomanly tendencies.

WOMAN SAYS HUSBAND HIT HER WITH STRAP

COQUILLE, Or., Dec. 15.—Edith Mabel Sells has filed a suit against George M. Sells for divorce on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment. She complains that her husband struck her with a strap because she was late with her dinner one evening, refused to buy her clothing and treated her with ignominy and contempt. They were married at Roseburg in 1906 and have two children, of which the mother asks the custody. She also

MERRY XMAS, FOLKS—

We've never had a banking for a public office until today when we saw The new postmaster Billy Heinline Wearing a brand new Velour hat.

Ye ad, hereby resolves to hereafter crack no jokes at the expense of Lather J. Dimes, tonsorial artist de luxe.

Among those noticeable on the main drag yesterday was Charlie Pickett, who was wearing a pair of corduroy college trousers.

A feller who signed his cognomen S. O. R. (same old rot), sends us the following poem, which is a humdinger and should excite a few giggles among our trillions of readers: We were gathered in the barroom, for we had no place to sleep, The winds were howling wildly and the snowdrifts lay deep.

'Tis a cheering thing in winter, when you've lots of time to pass, To hear some fellow murmur, "Come have another glass."

So we shuffled up in gladness and before the bar we lined And grabbed our glasses quickly lest he change his blooming mind.

"We are lost," somebody shouted as he staggered across the floor, "Unless the barkeep yonder gives us just one whiskey more!"

But our hopes were badly shattered as we heard the barkeep say, "Not another drink, ye spalpeens, unless I get my pay."

Then we heard Pat Murphy murmur as he knocked the barkeep far: "There is booze within the cellar just the same as on the bar."

So we rushed the cellar boldly without a thought of fear; Where the policeman found us sleeping when the morn was shining clear.

A LETTER TO SANTA

Dear Mr. ed. of Prunes: I am writing this to you because I think maybe you will hand it to Santa Clause. I am a little girl nine yrs. old and my papa is out of work. He says he don't think Santa will get to our house christmas but I think if I write to him he will remember us so I want you to tell him that I just want a few doll clothes for my dolly. Thank you prune pickins. Elsie..

Dear little friend Elsie: You betcher life Santa will remember you and we're mighty glad that you have made us your messenger. We took the matter up with the old boy this morning and he is having some fine clothes made for your dolly. YE ED. OF PRUNES.

The price of turkeys is down. Just our luck. When the price gets down so we could reach it in ordinary times, Xmas comes along and nabs all our surplus change.

OLD MAN TROUBLE

Old Man Trouble has an irritatin' way of makin' conversation when he hasn't much to say; He isn't entertainin' and he isn't very wise, And he simply hollers louder when he wants to emphasize.

Old Man Trouble never helps the work along. He wants the world to stop an' hear his wallin' loud and long; There's no use interferin' while he's using up his breath, We hope he'll keep on talkin' till he talks himself to death.

When a woman gives her offspring a nickle she expects him to say "Thank you." At the same time, when hubby gives her money, she says "Is that all?"

The golfers are now polishing their golf clubs, or doing whatever golfers do with their clubs this time of year.

The trouble with a small town is this: Too many people attach to other people's business.

Quite a lot of nice people saw the movie "Nice People" last evening and quite a lot of nice people squirmed in their seats when they saw themselves depicted on the screen.

The fad of "rolling your own" sex seems to have disappeared. The cold wintry blasts evidently had much to do with the change in styles.

On these chilly mornings we have to place our typewriter on the stove to turn out the hot stuff.

Portland Streets Blocked by Snow

PORTLAND, Dec. 15.—Street car service will be maintained in spite of blizzard conditions of motorists will keep off the car tracks, P. R. L. & P. officials promised this afternoon.
Six snowplows, four power brooms, and 112 cars equipped with Root scrapers are fighting against snow, wind and cold.
"We can keep the tracks clear if motorists will either leave their machines at home or drive on streets that do not carry car tracks," declared Fred Cooper, city superintendent.
"If automobiles begin to follow the tracks as soon as they are cleared, however, it will seriously hamper us in getting people who live in the outlying districts to their homes, and possibly cut off some lines, as the machines throw the snow back onto the tracks and pack it down."

Prior to the evening rush service had been kept up officials declared. Other public utilities reported service as usual.

City Robbed in White.

The city awoke this morning to find its visage faking on a pale appearance from snow that started falling about 5 o'clock—the sixth snow storm of the winter.

By going to work time every street in the city wore a white pavement.

Early risers felt that they were in for nothing less than a blizzard, because of a brisk easterly wind.

With the snow, which the weather bureau does not expect to last long, came the lowest temperature of the season—18 degrees at 8:30 a. m. The mercury remained slightly above that mark through the greater part of the forenoon, and was not expected to mount higher at any time during the day.

MOVIES

CATHERINE CALVERT IS REGAL BEAUTY

Regally beautiful as ever, Catherine Calvert receives the homage of her admirers in a new picture. It has the poignant title of "That Woman" and offers the star exactly the role her audiences would have chosen for her.

She is queen of Broadway in "That Woman"—the dashing star of a musical comedy success—who exchanges her tiara crown for what she dreams will be the quiet happiness of domestic life. But her life only begins then; her adventures as a wife are far more exciting than as a star.

"That Woman" is a fast-moving drama with an ever-popular problem: Should two people of separate worlds ever marry?
The story touches various phases of life as it is lived in New York—back-stage in a popular theatre; the idle, luxurious life of the rich in town and aboard a beautiful yacht; and the simplicity of the suburbs.

Throughout the picture Catherine Calvert grips the heart and delights the eye. At the Liberty Theatre for the last time tonight.

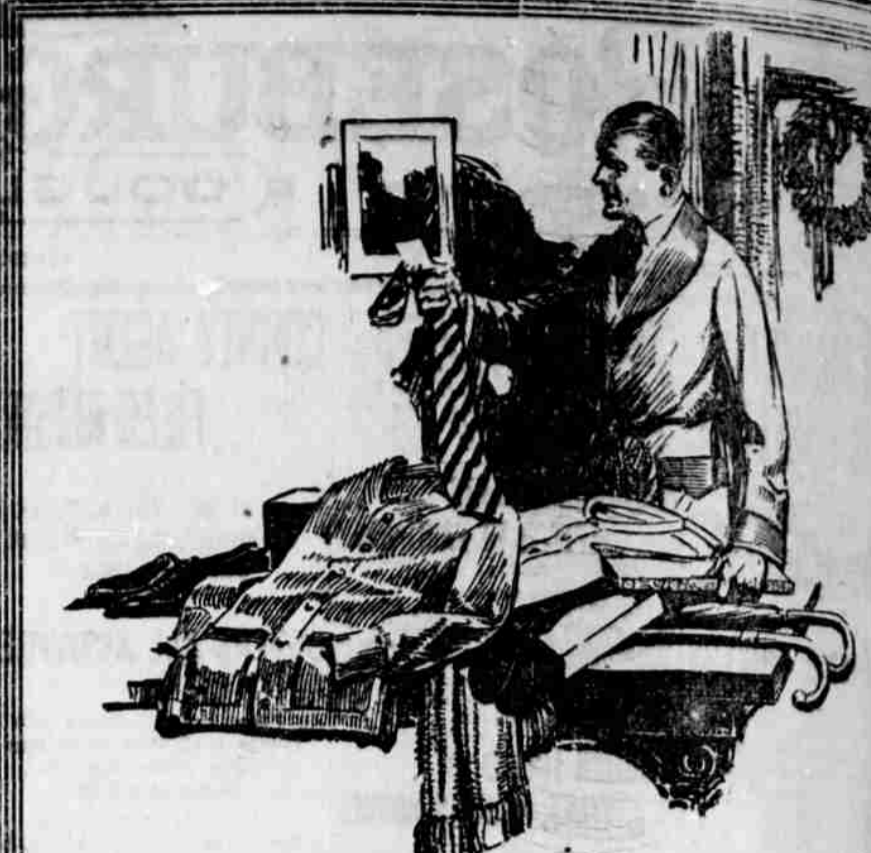

JAZZ SPIRIT HARMFUL

William de Mille has struck the keynote of today's most happily in "Nice People" which plays at the Antlers Theatre tonight. The modern jazz spirit which pervades our times as well as the possible remedy therefor, are clearly and most entertainingly depicted.

Without preaching in the least, the picture demonstrates that the girls and boys of today have too much leisure for indulgence in what may be easily developed into harmful social relationships. The theme back of it stands out clearly throughout without intruding itself to the detriment of the story.

Wallace Reid's role presents him in the light of a good samaritan, his mental outlook cleansed of its possible previous acceptance of such things as the public accepts, as a result of the great war. Bebe Daniels expresses the product of the jazz age flawlessly and her experience proves that those who accept freedom up to a given point will turn upon anyone who oversteps that point.

Conrad Nagel is a man of the same type who, once befuddled with liquor, becomes a menace to the woman in his company. It is an almost perfect portrayal.

The association adopted numerous resolutions, some of which were referred to its legislative committee, while a few are to be referred to the state convention of district attorneys which convenes today in Eugene. One resolution referred to the committee favors abolition of the double election board, system and return to the old method under which counting of election ballots does not begin until 8 o'clock in the evening. Objections to the present arrangement were to the effect that leads with reference to the way the election is going are noted.

One resolution urged abolition of the present dog licensing law and provision merely that dogs be assessed as any other chattel. Another expressed disapproval of the recording real estate ownership and transfers. The plan of having registration books opened immediately after the primaries in the month of July instead of September won approval.

The convention concluded at 5 o'clock yesterday.
