STARFISH HAS MANY FEET Cover the Underside of Each Arm and Are Withdrawn Inside

Skin When He Rests. The starfish is one of the commenest

of seashors creatures. If you pick one out of his pool and place him in a vessel full of salt water, you will soon find that he is beginning to walk. The underside of each arm is covered with an immense number of tiny feet. When the starfish is at rest all these feet are drawn up inside his skin, but as soon as he wants to move he pushes them out in all directions. Each of them has a little sucker at its end.

He makes very good use of these suckers when he comes across his favorite food, an owner, or some other shell fish. He climbs onto the shell and entwines his arms around it. Every sucker takes a firm hold, and then he begins to pull. The oyster pulls against him, but usually the atarnsh manages in the end to make him open his shell a fraction of an inch. As soon as this happens, he squirts into the shell a quantity of polson, which has the effect of para-lyzing the muscle which holds it shut. And the starfish dines at his beloure, Some fishermen are so annoyed when they pull up a starfish that they tear him in two. But each of the torn him in two. But each of the torn halves soon shoots out new limbs and becomes a complete starfish. Ashamed of the Old Folks.

A story is going the rounds of prep schools and colleges which has enough truth in it to make it useful whether the words were ever spoken or not. It is funny and it is sad. A lad-pupil in a great fitting school-is represented as saying to his parents; "You make it very difficult for me with my schoolmates. Father is a prosperous business man and mother comes to see me in a man and mother comes to see us in a D--car," (naming one of the inexpen-sive makes). The idea conveyed is that in the gilded circle in which the boy moves, the merely industrious. good-citizen type of dad is rather had form; he should be a whirlwind of conspicuousness of some sort-literature, perhaps, or grafting finance of SENATOR LYNCH MEETS AN OLD PAL IN EGYPT
