REEDSPORT IN NEED OF DEPOT

We think it is about time that our city was letting the railroad people know that we will not put up with the depot accommodations that we have had ever since we were in swaddling clothes, says the Port Umpqua Courier.

We are not kitchers or we would have had a good depot ere this, the idea of trying to keep us using the chicken coop which now stands up on the track and where they sell any quantity of tickets to people who have to look out to make room for other patrons.

We have been up there day after day when waiting passengers had to stand out in the rains, there is no place for ladies or children separate and if we have a mass meeting here and invite the Public Service Commission down to look the caboose over, we feel confident that something will be done.

We are a cracker-jack money producer for the company and it does seem to us that the officials of the company look over our proposition and know what we are doing for them every day, and just wonder how long we will stand for this kind of treatment.

Will the Chamber of Commerce step in at the switch any longer, set the alarm, it is set and when it goes off something will drop. The railroad company want to mix us up in their separation proposition, but what can we expect of them.

Now without any further comment is it not a crying shame the way we are being treated in this matter?

ARE JUST "PA" AND "MA" NOW

Modern Children Lack Oldtime Dignified Titles for Their Parents, Declares a London Writer.

When I was a small boy, forty years ago, children almost without exception addressed their parents as "papa" and "mamma." When a boy grew older and went to school he frequently took to saying "sir" to his father, though, behind his back, he usually referred to him as "pater" or "the governor."

At the same time he gave up saying "mamma," which he considered childish, and took to calling his mother "mother," or sometimes "mater."

It was about twenty years ago that the abbreviations "a" and "ma" began to be generally used. They came from America, where they had already been in use for many years.

Some children used "daddy" instead of "papa," and after a time "papa" went out altogether, and was replaced by "dad" with those of older growth. Today "dad" is almost universal. Even the little shaver of four or five calls his father "dad." As for "mama," it is as obsolete as "papa," and water-families is now known universally as "mum."

The only part of the kingdom in which these abbreviations have not found favor is Scotland, where the more formal "father" and "mother" are still insisted upon.—London Answers.

TO BE MODELED IN BRONZE

Winners of British Dog-Racing Contests Will Have Memories Preserved by American Sculptor.

Captain Cuttle, winner of the Derby; Music Hall, winner of the Grand National, and Gracie's Brigade, winner of the Waterloo, are among the 25 British champion dogs to be modeled in bronze by the American sculptor, Herbert Hasseltine. The King's Labrador retriever, a champion of his class and declared at one show to be the best dog of the year, has already been modeled.

Hasseltine is an inspired sculptor of the horse, says an art critic. Besides achieving a perfection of detail that delights the most fastidious owner, he has the gift of imparting the animal's character to his studies. Horses talk with their ears, and in each of Mr. Hasseltine's models the set of the ears most common to his subject is carefully reproduced.

That other animals can and do inspire him he has shown in ball-point sculpture. One study of his shows a proud, powerful beast with light in every line.

"Shished" the Tiger Away. It was a frequent occurrence for a tiger to carry off a Chinese coolie in the Malay peninsula, according to a traveler who spent some time in that country. These persons, he said, could seldom be brought to believe in the reality of dangers from animals that they looked on as only cats of abnormal dimensions. I saw this value of ignorance tragically illustrated one day when I took some poison out to help me track a tiger responsible for the loss of many lives. From a too distant eminence we soon caught sight of a Chinaman slowly straggling along seeking a piece of vengeance. Out sprang a tiger, but missed his mark, the back of the man's head. Without any acceleration of pace, the coolie, merely withdrawing the cane from his mouth, waved at the tiger and "shished" him away.

CHAPTERS FROM A WOMAN'S LIFE

By Jane Phelps

Chapter 17

Walter was not as particular about getting home promptly as was the case when his mother first came; and Grace Harter was once again the one who told my why. She said:

"It's a disgrace the way you stay at home and let Walter run around the country with that Ralstrom girl. 'Ride around you mean, don't you?' I asked, trying to speak lightly. I had mistrusted her with her, but doubt is one thing; certainty, another. I was proud. I would not let Grace Harter, a woman who acknowledged she once had thought of marrying Walter, see I was jealous.

"What's the difference! I declare Doreen, you're the most accommodating wife I ever knew. That girl's too attractive. When it's too late you'll wake up."

"If he went with you — or Claire, there wouldn't be so much danger?" I had purposely stressed the "you."

"Claire's safe! I don't know about me. But he's not with me. He's with that Ralstrom girl. He's an artist, Doreen, and he sees her only with his artist eyes. I don't trust her, Doreen. There's something sly about her."

That was just the word to express Helen Ralstrom; slyly, but I only laughed at Grace, told her she was jealous if I wasn't, and declared I really was more jealous of her than of Helen.

"You're not sly, Grace, but you're sure," I told her. "And I think it's more dangerous quality."

"All right! I've warned you," she said when she left. "Your unhappiness is on your own head."

Soon after this conversation Walter did not come in to dinner.

"Have you telephoned the studio?" his mother asked, much to my surprise.

"No—he always leaves by five."

"I should call and see if I were you. I don't approve of a man being absent from his home at meal-time," she said. "It is a bad habit."

The sudden criticism Walter and I felt quite puzzled as I went to the telephone. Could she have heard Grace talking? Had she heard any rumors? She had one or two old friends in town whom she called upon. As I expected I got no reply.

"111 doesn't answer?" central said after ringing some time.

"He's not at the studio," I said. "We'd better have our dinner. He may be late."

"Very well," she replied coldly. Yet I noticed she looked worried all through the meal; and she made scarcely no response to my attempts at conversation.

We sat in the living room, she with Pio on her lap, I, sewing. Nine o'clock struck, then ten, and 11. Unless she was out for the evening she always retired at that time, but she still at on.

Just as midnight struck we heard a car; then, after a moment the elevator stopped. It was Walter perhaps.

The door bell rang—he always let himself in with the key. I hurried to let him in, thinking he had forgotten it. I felt back gasping. He was white as a sheet and supported by Helen Ralstrom, who seemed in a "fitting condition."

"Don't ask questions, Doreen. Had an accident. Help me get Helen up to the couch."

Without a word I did as he asked, and together we carried her into the living room. As we entered the door I heard him mutter: "The Mater!" and knew he was annoyed she was up, that she saw him.

Mrs. Page never spoke until we had laid Helen on the couch, and I had removed her hat and coat. Then she said:

"Walter, please explain."

"There's nothing to explain. I had a slight accident, Miss Ralstrom has sprained her ankle I think. She fainted, and as we were nearer here than her home I brought her here."

"Please call the doctor, Doreen."

"You call him, Walter. I'll remove her stockings and put on a cold compress until he comes." He flashed me a grateful look but his mother sat in stony silence, disapproval in every line of her aristocratic face.

"It's long past your usual time to retire," I told her. "It isn't necessary for you to wait. I can attend to Miss Ralstrom." She had cried out when I took off her stockings, but now lay quiet her eyes closed. Yet I had a feeling that she was watching me.

"I shall remain," Mrs. Page said, and strangely I was glad. I did not want to be alone with them—not just then.

Tomorrow—A Tower of Strength.

FIND PREHISTORIC BUILDINGS

Ancient Homes on Isle Royale Believed to Have Been Used by Copper Miners.

Port Arthur, Ont.—The remains of homes believed to have been used by prehistoric copper miners, have been found on Isle Royale, in Lake Superior, says William P. Ferguson, archaeologist, of Franklin, Pa.

"Mining was in progress there at least 1,000 years ago; how much longer we do not know," says Ferguson. "We found pine trees six feet in diameter growing on the ancient rock dumps. There is an area two miles long and half a mile wide, over the whole of which we found remains of human habitations."

"There were larger pits which had been dug for homes. They ranged from eight to ten feet deep and were protected by carefully built stone walls which kept them free from water. The people incidentally used communal dwellings in some instances, as several of the pits were 20 by 40 feet, and one, which may have been a fort, was 20 by 50 feet.

"These people mined in solid rock the whole island over, but did not dig their shafts more than 20 or 30 feet deep. Their tools were black egg-shaped stones of great hardness, such as are found on the north shore of Lake Superior but not on Isle Royale."

SMYRNA ARMENIAN LOSS BIG

Twenty Millionaires Penniless—23,000 Missing or Made Prisoners by Turks.

Athens.—The losses of the Armenian community in Smyrna total $18,000,000, according to a tabulation made by a committee under the direction of the bishop of Smyrna.

Sixty millions of this total is in real and personal property, and the remainder in intangible assets like stocks and bonds in Armenian companies operating in Asia Minor. The annual income of 8,000 Armenian families in Smyrna used to be $7,500,000, of which it is declared that 15 per cent was given to charities and to the church.

Smyrna, which was the richest Armenian community in the world before the coming of the Turkish army, had 20 millionaires, but today every one of these men is virtually penniless. The largest losers are the land owners, textile importers and exporters of fruits, cereals, carpets and opium.

The number of Armenians killed in Smyrna, according to the committee, is 4,000, and the number of persons missing or made prisoners, is stated to be 8,000 men and 15,000 women.

The most prominent Armenian business men killed were Surkis and Kaparian, land owners, and Gurunlian and Panossian, textile merchants.

Divorced and Remarried in Five Days.

Belle Plaine, Ia.—Divorced and then remarried within five days is the unusual record of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer R. Rusk. The Iowa law prohibits divorced persons remarrying within six months, so the couple crossed into Missouri for the second ceremony.
