BLACK DIAMOND OIL LOTS ARE SELLING RAPIDLY

Representatives of the Black Diamond Oil and Iron Syndicate, are spending a few days in Roseburg in the interest of the land sale which the company is putting on. They report a great deal of interest in the work of the company and lots are moving rapidly. The organization is composed largely of railroad men the majority of the officers and stockholders being Roseburg residents.

Trouble At Power Plant—

A broken belt at the power plant at Winchester resulted in the discontinuance of power to the greater part of the city for a short time this morning. The broken belt was repaired in a short time, however, and service was continued quite satisfactorily.

CHAPTERS FROM A WOMAN'S LIFE

By Jane Phelps

Chapter 30.
Walter had sent out his invitations for the costume party at the studio. He was going to dress as a famous painter of olden times, and I had decided to go as a gypsy. Grace was to be a Spanish girl, and we shopped together for our costumes.

"Let me see your list," I said to Walter after he had made it out, often stopping to discuss this one or that one with me.

"I see you have invited your model," I remarked.

"Yes, leaving her out would have seemed a slight," he replied looking a bit uncomfortable. His mother was listening.

"It was not necessary, Walter, and I consider it had taste. You never should mix business and pleasure; it doesn't do."

Walter made no reply, and I asked him:

"Do you know what she is to wear?"

"She spoke of going as Night or Morning, I've forgotten which. She was anxious not to wear any costume that might also be worn by another."

"Naturally," I returned. My costume delighted me when it came home, and when I tried it on for Walter he raved as was his way.

"I'll have to sketch you in that rig, Doreen," he declared. "You make a fine Romany."

I had some stain for my face and hands, and had used it so I could be sure it was all right. Then I made Walter put on his knee breeches, his velvet coat with the lace ruffles and so on. We had a gala evening.

Even the costumes were successful. I really looked forward to the party with a great deal of anticipation. I had been out very little since Mrs. Page came, save when she was with me, and I would enjoy the relief her absence, her criticisms would give me.

Then, on the very afternoon of the day of the party, she was taken ill and quite violently. There was no use thinking I could leave her. I sent Walter off alone, a bit tearfully I admit.

His mother was not easy to care for, was rather querulous in fact. She kept me running, wanting something then when I brought it, deciding to have something different. She was fussing over the dog, what would become of the pet if anything happened to her.

When I heard the doorbell I welcomed the interruption.

It was Grace Harter.

"Wait told me! Pity she couldn't have waited until after the party to get sick," she said in a stage whisper. "I've come for your costume."

Doreen. That Helen Ralstrom had the nerve to wear a gypsy costume after Walt had told her you were to wear one. But her's is a cheap affair, not nearly as handsome as yours. I'm going to wear yours! It'll knock her silly."

As long as I couldn't go it made no difference to me whether Grace was a Romany in my costume, or a Spanish girl in her own. I gave it to her and she dressed in my room. When she was ready to leave she called me and I gasped with delight. She was wonderful! Her jet black hair, banded with beads of different colors made her look every way like the Romany. She had stained her face, arms and neck thoroughly, and had adapted some of the bright beads and gew-gaws of her Spanish costume to enhance the one she now wore.

"I'll show that girl a real gypsy," she declared as she left.

I couldn't help wondering if it were all for my sake she was so anxious to outshine Helen. As I sat with Mrs. Page in the dark room (she wouldn't have a light) many of my doubts of Grace returned, my feeling of dislike. She was too free with Walter.

It was nearly morning when he came in and we didn't try to talk, save in whispers, because his mother had only just fallen into an uneasy sleep.

"It was a shame you couldn't go," he said. "We had a wonderful time; tell you all about it in the morning."

But when morning came his mother was not so well and he hurried off to fetch the doctor in his roadster. It was not until late afternoon that I heard anything of the party. Then Grace came in and told me all about it.

Mrs. Page was much better; the doctor had been in again about noon, and said he wouldn't come again. A bad attack of indigestion he called it. So I did not feel at all concerned as to leave her alone for a little to hear about the party.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. C. Haupt were very much surprised when about fifty of their friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kloor, Mrs. Haupt's parents. The evening was spent by singing and instrumental selections. To get partners for supper each person drew a slip of paper from a bowl, upon these slips were written a part of a song's name. When these slips were compared and partners found, delicious refreshments were served.

The student body met on Jan. 12, 1923. The student body intend to sponsor a shadow pie social on February 16. A short program will be given and everybody is invited. Following the report from the social committee, a motion was made and seconded that the seniors and freshmen remove all their "22's" and "26's" from the school grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Marsh entertained a number of their friends at a delicious luncheon last Sunday. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Erickson, Roy Erickson, Doreen Shortridge and Mary Elizabeth Marsh.

Mary Hodges is absent from school on account of tonsillitis.

We are very glad to see Iver Erickson up and around again. Iver has been ill at his home for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Haupt, and sons, Francis and Paul, left for Los Angeles, California, in their car early Thursday morning, where they expect to reside.

The students taking Bible study examinations are Porena Shortridge, Kathryn Montgomery, Faye Morgan and Arnold Endley.

The examinations are being super-
