

See how simple it is for you to make your own Mayonnaise!

THERE is no mayonnaise as delicious as that which you make yourself at home—and you can make it very easily yourself. Also you can be sure of its purity, and that it contains absolutely fresh eggs.

With Mazola-Mayonnaise, too, you are certain it is fresh, smooth and creamy, and you can season it to your own taste. And, inasmuch as Mazola thickens more quickly, you save time and labor. Mazola-made mayonnaise keeps firm and sweet.

You can use Mazola successfully with any good recipe. Just take the can you now have at home, or get one today from your grocer, and follow the recipe here given. You will be delighted with the results.

YOUR grocer sells Mazola in pint, quart, half-gallon or gallon tins. Mazola is never sold in bottles or bulk, but is packed and sealed under expert supervision, in sterilized tins, on our own premises. If Mazola is unsatisfactory to you, your grocer will refund your money without question. Order a can today.

A Delicious Mayonnaise Dressing Recipe

1 cup Mazola 1/2 teaspoon Salt 3 tablespoons Lemon Juice or Vinegar
1 Egg Yolk 1/2 teaspoon Sugar 1/2 teaspoon Paprika

Add well mixed seasoning to egg, with one teaspoon lemon juice or vinegar, and beat well, adding one teaspoon Mazola at a time until mixture thickens, after which the Mazola may be added more rapidly. Thin with lemon juice or vinegar when necessary.

CHAPTERS FROM A WOMAN'S LIFE

By Jane Phelps

Chapter 32.

I often scolded myself for allowing so many things to worry me. Mrs. Page was critical. "Meddling," I called it in my thoughts. The dog annoyed me. Everytime I heard her call that toy dog "Fido" I felt like throwing things. Jennie's complaints about waiting on a dog and a cranky old woman worried me, as it would be impossible for me to take any sort of care of Mrs. Page; suit her in any way should Jennie leave me.

Mrs. Page, knowing I had but one maid, expected the service and the style of a well equipped household with many servants. She never condoned the slightest thing because of lack of help. And since her ailment she has been even more difficult. At times I was almost in despair. Only to Claire Gordon did I speak of this however, although I knew Grace Harter was aware of it. Her sharp inquisitive eyes missed nothing.

Then at times I was terribly anxious about Walter. Observed with the idea that he was with Helen Raistrick more than it was wise for him to be—knowing his temperament. The demands of his mother kept me from being with him as much as I might otherwise have been and I held this against her, so increasing my dislike for her.

When she first came Walter had been very punctilious, had come to his meals promptly, or given a good excuse. He had taken us out often and otherwise been the dutiful son. But, as the weeks went by, this attitude irked him—I saw it plainly—and he often remained out late. Then, if either she or I spoke of it, he would become impatient. Her presence in the house was an old story to him.

One morning she had been unusually difficult, had angered Jennie and had found fault with me, my management of the house, my lack of knowledge of the more elaborate matters pertaining to home keeping. When she talked in that way I never made any reply. I knew my faults were many, but with one maid I could not satisfy her, and what was the use of discussing the thing until we both became annoyed. Naturally there were some points of household etiquette with which I was unfamiliar. I had been brought up in simple homely fashion, and while I had learned much since living in New York, I still had much to acquire before I would be what she called a perfect hostess. As she was in the midst of telling me what I should do the bell rang and Claire Gordon breezed in. "I have come to take you down to see Mrs. Eldredge again, Doreen," she said.

"Take Mrs. Page instead," I said. "She will enjoy the ride and also meeting Mrs. Eldredge." I gave Claire a pleading look, which she at once understood.

"Do come, Mrs. Page," she urged. "I'm sure you will be delighted with my dear invalid."

"Thank you, it will be a pleasure to get away for a few hours," she replied, with a withering glance at me. "It will give Doreen an opportunity to do some of the things we have talked of; insist upon that maid of hers knowing her place for one thing."

"Does any servant know that nowadays?" Claire returned with a gay laugh. "Ours do not! Mother gets almost frantic at times, and talks of the old days before the war—long before, when servants were devoted to their employers, willing and efficient. It must be a problem when one can keep but one maid." Then: "I don't want to hurry you, but Mrs. Eldredge is so disappointed if I do not spend some time with her, we'd better start."

Mrs. Page left the room to put on her wraps, and Claire said gleefully:

"I didn't give her a chance to answer did I, Doreen. I believe if you weren't so afraid of her you would get along easier."

"Perhaps," I replied. "But I felt as if I should scream at her when you came in. She is so unreasonable. You would think to hear her demands that I had a trained lot of servants, cook, butler, and maids, instead of one poor little Irish girl. Do keep her away as long as you can." I finished just as she came back into the room, Fido under her arm as usual.

"You don't object to my taking the little dear along?" she asked Claire. "The air will do him good and the darling just dotes on a motor ride."

"Bring him by all means, he will amuse Mrs. Eldredge. She is fond of animals."

"She shows her good sense," Mrs. Page returned, with a meaningful glance at me.

Better than a mustard plaster

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITHOUT the blister. You just apply it with the fingers. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then comes a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, cramp, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frost-bitten feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu." 35c and 65c, jars and tubes.

Every one is welcome.

The new consolidated school house is completed and they are holding school there now. The dedication will be announced later.
