LEGISLATIVE SIDELIGHTS

(By United Press.)—Some of the named the 22nd session of the Oregon legislature the "Woodward offensive." Assemblyman Woodward of Multnomah is specialized on education, for he is a member of the board of District Number 1 of the Woodward hills. He has gone down to defeat, and the dental inspection, the other the general element bill which would all registered voters to vote in elections. Taxpayers only that privilege now. Rep. McMahon, of Marion, is for much business legislation. He fathered the income tax which is causing much consternation among the business men big enough to tax.

There administration has named the "Sunrise Bill," but it will be. If some measures go through the legislature commissions of the bill be consolidated until has a cabinet form of government. Then the cabinet will be the "Sunrise Cabinet," for the Governor Pierce up early and often. The bill is a "dirty" and sick bill long ago formed the setting out with the hungry in the first pig squealed in dawn, and he hasn't broken of the habit since he heard the state of Oregon.

RICH TOURIST IS MURDERED AT TOMB

(By United Press.)—LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 1.—Traverse Allen of Montreal, visiting the "Valley of the Kings," where Lord Carnarvon is now exploring Pharaoh Tutankhamen's tomb, was murdered and robbed near here Tuesday night, the authorities disclosed today. Scores of thieves from Cairo and Alexandria have been attracted here by the throngs of rich tourists attending the opening of the Egyptian ruler's tomb.

Trail extends officially from Ontario, on the Oregon-Idaho boundary, to Seaside, on the Pacific ocean. Most of its length is what was formerly known as the Columbia River highway.

BETTY BYRNE HAS HAD MOST SUCCESSFUL CAREER

Betty Byrnes, star of "How Women Love" which comes to the Liberty Theatre tonight and tomorrow, had a humble start in pictures, despite the fact that she came to the screen with a well-established reputation in light opera and the "legitimate."

Miss Byrnes' initial engagement in pictures was with the Vitaphone in "His Own People." And here comes the unusual part of the story. For when officials of the company viewed the photoplay, they were so delighted with her work and appearance, that they immediately recommended her as unquestionably possessing leading-lady qualifications. Merit and beauty don't always meet with instant recognition—there are several cases in the history of the world—and of the movies, where both were neglected.

Just how wise were those officials, sitting in the darkness of the "projection-room," is to be seen in the career of Miss Byrnes since that time.

WOLF PACK STARTLES IN "BROWN OF THE NORTH"

A baby, a woman and a man alone in a trackless forest fleeing from a pack of famished wolves; the three in wearied slumber resting from the fatigue of the day; the woman awakened by a hot breath on her face; her startled eyes see the fringing muzzle of a gigantic timber wolf within five inches of her baby's face; nothing for protection against the pack of famished animals; then the rest of the story is told in "Brown of the North," a Laurence Trimble-Jane Murnin production starring Strongheart, the wonder dog, a First National attraction which is fulfilling an engagement of two days at the Antlers Theatre.

The incident is but one of many which is fulfilling an engagement of the greatest dog star on the screen the most dramatic production he has offered to motion picture patrons.

WEAR MANY HANDSOME GOWNS IN DOUG'S NEW COMEDY

In Douglas Fairbanks' comedy, "Mr. Fix-It," which is to be displayed at the Majestic Theatre for the last time tonight, Whanda Hawley, Majorie Daw, Catherine McDonald and Margaret Landis, all of whom have important roles, will wear many beautiful evening gowns. The combined wardrobe of these young women amounts in value to a staggering figure, but they were necessary for the development of the story and they were promptly supplied. The story of "Mr. Fix-It" was written by Allan Dwan, who also was the director.

ISLAND MADE PLEASURE SPOT

Juan Fernandez, Made Celebrated by Daniel Defoe, Turned into Attraction for Tourists.

A holiday on Robinson Crusoe's island will be possible in the near future.

The charming little island of Juan Fernandez, where Alexander Selkirk spent four years of his life, and whose story led Defoe to write his famous masterpiece, is to be transformed into a holiday resort.

It belongs to the Chilean government and can be reached by steamer from Valparaiso. The island is thirty-six square miles in extent, and is heavily wooded with splendid tree ferns, orange trees, myrtles, and sandal wood. It is mountainous, and full of ravines and torrents. Crowds of wild goats roam through the underwood, and myriads of humming birds chat among the ferns. The climate is said to be ideal.

At Cumberland bay, where Selkirk landed, is the island's only hamlet, San Juan Baptista. A modern hotel is to be erected here, and a bi-weekly steamboat service is to be run.

Naturally, the great curiosities of the island are the places where Robinson Crusoe, according to the story, passed the best part of his life. First, there is the grotto where he made his dwelling; it is carpeted with ferns and climbing plants. All around it grows the pologony, a curious plant, from whose gigantic leaves he made his crockery—plates, dishes, soup tureens, and even washing basins and tanks. There is the little bay in which he used to moor his boat, and the plateau on which he built his cabin.

ALLIGATOR A GOOD MOTHER

Takes Care of Young in Much the Same Manner as Does the Hen of the Barnyard.

The female alligator lays a great number of eggs with hard shells, which in size and general appearance resemble hen's eggs. And she lays them in a nest built in a curious manner.

Along the bank of a stream is spread a layer of mud and grass, or leaves, and on this is placed a layer of eggs, then another layer of mud and grass about seven or eight inches in thickness, then another layer of eggs carefully covered, and so on, until often thirty or more eggs are deposited.

Although the eggs are hatched by the heat of the sun, and the decaying vegetable matter, the mother alligator watches the nest carefully. As soon as the young, which are helpless little creatures about eight inches long, are hatched, she leads them to the water and takes care of them as a hen does her brood of chickens, until they are strong enough to defend themselves.

Antelope to Be Cared For.

The antelope, noted for its coloring, delicate proportions and zephyr-like movements, is threatened with extinction unless some measures are taken at once to give it some protection. There are said to be 3,000 in the United States, and 350 of these are in the Yellowstone park. In 1908 there were 2,000 in the park alone. Agitation on behalf of the antelope has been started by the members of the American Bison society, which has done so much for the buffalo. The winter range in the Yellowstone park is not nearly adequate for the antelope alone and it is necessary to share it with other animals. It is proposed to enlarge this winter range and also to provide similar ranges in California, Oregon, Utah, Nevada, Wyoming and Idaho, and also to withdraw from public use certain parts of the Yellowstone where the animals congregate. The antelope herd in this country suffered last year from exposure and from the depredations of predatory animals.

And He Didn't Mean That, Exactly.

It was a concert in connection with the Sunday school anniversary, and when Freddy was called upon to give his recitation his nerve failed completely. Standing trembling before the sympathetic audience, he seemed as if he could not make a start. Perspiration was tried, but in vain. He broke into sobs and finally was sent back to his seat. The officiating minister seized the opportunity to pour out consolation and also give encouragement for the good of the boy. "Well, friends," he remarked, "it is not a very nice thing to stand here and look at all your faces." Then he wondered why the audience smiled. "Have you heard the news? It is printed daily in the Roseburg News-Review."

End Your Gate Troubles with "Can't-Sag" Gates

Cost Less
Last Longer
Look Better

No more heavy, tumble-down, sagging wooden gates. No more bent and twisted gas-pipe gates. Put up "Can't-Sags"—made of an ideal combination of iron and steel bolted securely together—no screws or nails to pull out. When closed and latched, the "Can't-Sag" gate is securely locked at both ends—stock can't break through to destroy growing crops.

Can't-Sag a Fraction of an Inch

In order to sag even a quarter of an inch, 45 bolts and 8 pieces of angle steel would have to bend. You know that is impossible. Yet, this ideal gate costs less than the old-fashioned kind. Thousands are in use on large and small farms everywhere. Drop in and see these gates when you are in town.

P. L. CAMPBELL HONORED

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Jan. 30.—P. L. Campbell, president of the University of Oregon, was tonight elected an honorary member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary literary and scholastic fraternity, by the faculty members of the fraternity, who are preparing for the installation of an Oregon chapter some time this term.

President Campbell was elected at a meeting of the faculty members which was called to elect alumni of the university to the fraternity. The meeting did not have time to consider the entire list of eligible alumni and did not announce any elections of graduates.

IDEA FOR FUEL CONSERVATION

New Jersey Man Has Evolved Scheme Which It Will Be Admitted Has Many Good Points.

Apprehension of a coal shortage, together with the upward trend in fuel prices, has caused the wise suburbanite actively to consider ways and means of providing for his comfort and warmth during the winter.

One enterprising Jerseyite has partially met the situation by capitalizing on his open fireplace in his Hackensack home in a rather novel manner. Not wishing to trouble with a log fire and also being of the opinion that it did not give off sufficient heat, Mr. Suburbanite purchased a small stove, which he set in the open fireplace, the pipe being extended up the chimney.

The stove burns wood or pea coal, of which there is no shortage, and radiates considerable heat, not only within the room, but in the adjoining rooms. With the furnace operating on a curtailed supply of fuel, the fireplace stove permits the registers in that portion of the house to be turned off, shutting whatever heat might be produced to other sections of the house.

The stove also serves a practical purpose, its flat top permitting the boiling of water, preparation of toast or other light housekeeping practices.

Other features in favor of the innovation are the fact that it is out of the way and takes up no additional space; and, unlike a log fire in an open fireplace, gives off no sparks nor smoke and consequently meets with the approval of the housewife.—New York Sun.

CHINA HAS OLDEST JOURNAL

Peking Newspaper Has Been in Existence for Something More Than Ten Centuries.

The oldest newspaper in the world is the King-Pan, or "Capital Sheet," published in Peking, China. It first was printed in the year 911 A. D., but for many years has been issued only at irregular intervals. Since 1851, however, it has been published weekly and in uniform size.

During the present century and perhaps longer, the paper has been released about noon. Until 1922, it contained its news to council and court news. Since then it has been issued in new form and on a new plan.

The King-Pan is printed on yellow paper. It sells for 2 kash, something less than a cent. Three editions are printed daily.

All issues of the King-Pan are edited by six members of the National Academy of Sciences. They are appointed by the Chinese government. The total number of daily copies is from 12,000 to 14,000.
