CHAPTERS FROM A WOMAN'S LIFE

By Jane Phelps

CHAPTER 45

Grace and George Harter had sent out invitations for a large dinner party. I had a new gown for the occasion. Mrs. Page had been with me when I bought it and I had spent far more than I should have. She had exquisite taste although she liked more imposing things than I thought appropriate. Yet when the dress was finished and sent home I acknowledged that I never had a more becoming one, never appeared to better advantage.

"A dignified woman, especially a married woman, always commands attention," she said. "And it is the same with her dressing. A dress that while beautiful is also dignified, always stands out where the ordinary fluffly ruffles sort, or the sweet girl graduate idea is completely overlooked."

When I tried the dress on after it came home she left the room for a moment. On returning she brought a lovely Jade ornament, on a fine gold chain. When she put it over my head the effect was perfect. I fairly gasped when she said: "You may keep it Doreen. It just suits you."

I wanted to throw my arms around her neck but knew that would displease her. She hated any exhibition of emotion and she was not yet quite recovered from her illness. So I thanked her as best I could and admired the lovely pendant enthusiastically.

"No wonder Walter is an artist," I said. "He gets his artistic taste from you, and I haven't a bit!" I added rather ruefully. It was rather a sore point with me that Walter thought me so inartistic.

"You may have other qualities just as valuable," his mother replied enthusiastically.

But nothing could dampen my delight in the beautiful gift; or the thought that had prompted it. I showed it to Walter the moment he came in and he said:

"Whew! The Mater certainly has fallen for you, Doreen. She always has thought a pile of that thing. It was brought her from Japan by a friend of hers. It's perfect on you. I had forgotten she had it."

"I shall treasure it always," I returned. That night I wrote mother a long letter telling her of my beautiful gift, of Mrs. Page's kindness. I had written in a different strain when she first came to us and felt ashamed of the impression of her I must have given them at home. So I added that she had really been wonderful, that I had not understood her at all at first, thought her hard and cold. That she was dignified, impatient of opposition, but that underneath she had a real tenderness, that I was becoming very fond of her, and thought she loved me a little. I felt better after the letter was dispatched. It would undo part of what I had done and would please mother who had written me not to be critical, but to wait until I knew my mother-in-law better before I formed an opinion.

But youth is always hasty and I was young.

Grace showed me a list of her guests.

"You haven't invited Helen," I said.

"No, why should I? Just because she is Walter's model is no reason we must entertain her socially. Although lately she seems to have butted in almost everywhere we have been. George would like to ask her, but I put my foot down hard! This is my dinner party. I don't like the girl, although she is lovely to look at, and I never shall."

I mentioned the list to Walter.

"She hasn't asked Helen? She will be hurt."

I repeated what Grace had said, and could see Walter didn't like it.

"She will be hurt," he repeated.

"She's sure to hear of the dinner party. Probably it will be in the papers. Most of Grace's affairs usually get noticed."

"Models aren't always asked to the social affairs of the people who know them, who have happened to meet them because they know the artist."

I returned quietly. "I don't see why Miss Ralston should be hurt, why she should expect an invitation."

Walter said no more, but all through dinner I knew he was thinking of it. He was distrustful, so his mother asked the cause.

I could not help a feeling of gladness. I had my lovely new dress and pendant. Helen with her vivid beauty would not be there to put me in the shade.

But as we dressed for Grace's dinner a week later he again referred to it, again said Helen would be hurt. I couldn't help but wonder if he also were a bit hurt that his lovely model hadn't been invited.

Tomorrow—A Successful Dinner Party.

TROUBLE IS OVER STATES DITTMAN

Declares Tanlac Ended Indigestion, Nausea, Weakness and Nervousness of Years Standing.

"Tanlac has given me strength and endurance that I hardly expected," declared A. Dittman, 734 W. 56th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

"I suffered from a badly run-down condition several years and was never able to get back my strength. I could not do a good day's work, and at night just felt so tired out I just had to drag myself home. I was nervous, couldn't sleep, and morning found me still worn out. I had practically no appetite, would become dreadfully nauseated, and my stomach was so fearfully upset I was simply miserable. My kidneys bothered me too, I had distressing attacks of biliousness, was subject to bad spells of dizziness, and since taking Tanlac I can work hard all day and go home feeling fine. I sleep like a log, stomach acts perfectly, nerves steady, and I could not ask better health. Tanlac will always have my highest praise."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 25 million bottles sold.

CORN AND POTATO SHOW DATES SET

Exhibition Will Be Held In Effort To Interest Producers of This County in Growing of These Products.

A corn and potato show will be held in Roseburg February the 22nd, and 24th. This show will be conducted along educational lines to stimulate a greater interest in production of these staple crops.

Douglas County does not produce corn and potatoes in sufficient tonnage to take care of local consumption. Douglas County farmers should be paid the money that now goes to the Yakima Valley for potatoes and to Nebraska for corn.

Many growers believe that corn or potatoes cannot be grown as a successful cash crop. This will depend somewhat on who grows the crop and where it is grown. It may not have come to the attention of many of the farmers in Douglas County that potatoes were grown in the county last year which gave a yield of more than five hundred bushel per acre.

Corn could be found in more than one field where the yield was seventy-five bushel per acre. These are not record yields, nevertheless they indicate these crops can be made to pay well.

Each year new things are learned about the production of our staple crops. There is no better way to get the inside facts about these crops than by attending a show of this nature. Premium lists can be obtained by writing or calling on the County Agent. This is a producers show and all growers are invited to bring or send their exhibits to the County Agent who will see that they are properly placed. It is planned to hold an interesting program each day of the show.

ON A BEAR HUNT.

Which would you use, a 41-gauge shotgun or a power rifle? If you want lower prices on what you buy and higher prices on what you sell, will you get quicker by shopping round by yourself with a power order of a carload at most, or a few hundred bushels of grain to sell, or by concentrating your power in buying contracts and big selling lots, and doing business with yourself?

That is what you do when you trade through Exchange. You put your buying and selling power together with your neighbor's, and get better prices. We can prove this to you.
