SAYS SERMON WAS REAL MASTERPIECE

It having been my great privilege to hear Dr. Price preach that masterpiece of a sermon entitled "The Potter and the Clay, or Broken Vessels," last Sunday evening, I shall herewith endeavor to share my good fortune with those not so privileged. Jeremiah saw in the potter's house the lesson which the children of Israel needed and so he went out to give it to all who would receive it. I believe that the children of Israel met in their lives the children of God today meet in theirs. I am glad we have the Word of the Lord today which comes to us with power. One voice which you should hear above every other in the world is the Word of God. It is the final court of authority. It is God's own voice coming down the ages with the same force as it had long ago. It came to Jeremiah, telling him to "arise and go down," and He is saying the same to you. If you are going to come up you have to go down. I believe we have to die to this old world before we can receive anything from the Lord. Now Jeremiah might have begun to argue with the Lord and say, "Let the potter's house come to me." God will never come to you unless you first come to Him. You must knock at His door before you will get in. Multitudes have not entered because they would not go down. The Lord promised him if he would go down then he would come up. So Jeremiah arose and went down and he saw a vessel which was marred on the wheel. But the potter did not throw it aside. No, he took it on the wheel and made it another vessel. I do not believe in the teaching that if you make a wrong step or go astray, He will abandon you. I went to the potter's house and I saw cold, dirty clay with rocks and other foreign substances. "What bench are you on, clay?" "Well, I am on the mourner's bench." "Perhaps the clay would say to me, 'I don't like to be on this bench. I want to take all the grit and other foreign substances out of myself before I go up to those high places.' No, you just lie there and let the Potter do it. That is His work. Just as I am. That is the way we have to come to Jesus, and we will find that the blood of Jesus will wash our sins away. The clay went into the fountain, where it was cleansed and softened. At the mourner's bench they begin to cry and the old stony heart is softened and God gives them a "heart of flesh." The next bench is a wide and hard one. You are not going to have an easy time. The Potter took it up and banged it down on this and then on that side, and there was a hard bump and the tears began to flow—the water begins to squeeze out of the clay. Everything works together for good to them now. You have to have some sorrow, some perplexities. It is a part of the experience that God gives to people to get them to the places where they ought to get. So, bang, there goes the paddle and it hurts. And next comes the molding. You say "I am going all the way with you, Lord." The Potter says: "Now I am going to mold you as you are now soft. It is going to be the Sunday School mold. But the clay says "Oh, no, I don't want to do that. I want to be an evangelist." The Lord will make of you just what He wants to make. Some are to be evangelists and etc. And so the mold is cast on the wheel. But grit is found which hurts the potter's hand. And so after conversion there are many things which have to be taken out of the Christian's life. He stops the molding in order to take out the grit, the temper, dancing, card playing, moving pictures, smoking, drinking, etc. "You deacons, what do you think of my reference to tobacco?" Yes, it has to go. You "Ladies Aid," what do you think of my reference to the moving picture show? Not all the machinery in your life will save unless you cut that out." You say, you are willing to have them taken out of your life. Now the potter has finished the vessel and I am congratulating myself that I am through. There was Peter. Look at him. The little maid said to him, "You knew Jesus of Nazareth." He said he did not. Then she sagged him on the other side "Yes you do know Him." Why Peter, what made you do that? "But I need some hardening process." And so Peter acknowledged that he needed something, as well as the other disciples. There was an oven and a fire and as that oven door was opened I saw fire and there was a rushing, mighty wind, and those fires were raging under them. The potter knew how hot to make the fire, just as hot as it was needed. There is no potter who hasn't got a fire. But now the oven door is opened, and you see beautiful glossy vessels. "And now I am all right," said Peter—no Peter, you be careful. You remember how you fell before the little servant girl. Now look at Peter on the day of Pentecost. Well, is he going to run? He goes to the fire escapes, and he sees a lot of people, and says "You want to know what is the matter. Are we drunk? No! We have not had time—this is only the third hour of the day." Oh, never stop! Go all the way. We have had too much of this wishy washy kind of Christian life until the man on the outside cannot tell the difference. There is no other way than the Holy Ghost way. Since there is no other way, then let us go all the way with Him. The Saviour carried the cross all the way and died there for you. We are in different stages of the potter's house. Some are ready for the washing and some the mold. Can we say, "Not my way, but thy way Lord?" God grant it. There will be a healing service at 7:30 o'clock. The building will be open for the High School students, until seven o'clock, when others will be admitted to fill the vacant seats. LAURA L. BITTMAN, Correspondent.
