LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

ARE IN SYMPATHY WITH DR. PRICE'S TEACHINGS

Editor News-Review:—Will you kindly give space for answer to the unfair, unchristian and uncalled for attack upon Dr. Price, in the article appearing in your paper of last night, being a copy of an article written by one of the professors of Kimball College and printed in the Pacific Christian Advocate of last week. I wish to say that this gentleman does not represent Methodism in the City of Roseburg, or the surrounding country in so far as the spirit of this article is concerned. It shows a very undignified position for a man of letters to assume, having only attended one meeting, and going with the evident purpose of finding fault with the service, and any one who insists on bringing this article to the attention of the public is not in a much better frame of spirit than the professor with D. D. attached to his name. I also wish to say that the great majority of the membership of the Methodist church in Roseburg, as well as other Methodist churches in Douglas County are in hearty sympathy with Dr. Price and his teaching and preaching.

YOUNG MAN'S MISFORTUNE IS GREATLY DEPLORED

Editor News-Review:—After reading the article in the Evening News of Feb. 20th, in regard to the arrest on the street of Portland of Mr. Virgil Opel I feel it my duty to say a few words in his behalf. For the past four months he has been my privilege to work beside Mr. Opel in the S. P. shop and during that time I have learned to respect and admire him. Mr. Opel is a man of strictly clean, upright, Christian character, always kind and helpful to all those with whom he dealt. Mr. Opel is one of the finest mechanics working for the S. P. He had been attending regularly at the Price meetings and playing his violin each evening. For several days before he went to Portland a number of the "boys" here had seen that his mind was unbalanced but I had hoped that when he was out from under the influence which I believed had caused his trouble that he would regain his mental poise.

Mr. Opel and his family have the heartfelt sympathy of all the "boys" here at the shop, and we sincerely hope that he will recover his health and soon be in his accustomed place.

MOTORISTS WILL PAY BRITISH DEBT

Those "philanthropists" who have been worrying over the problem of how the British government would be able to pay its war debt to the United States and suggesting that this country cancel the obligations in order that "that friendly feeling" between Great Britain and the United States might be perpetuated, will doubtless be shocked to know that the American automobile owners will foot the entire bill within a period of the next ten years. According to an article appearing in the New York Commercial recently by this last statement is a fact, and the American automobile owners are the fellows who need sympathy. Crude rubber has advanced from .13 to .14 a pound five months ago to .35 at this time and the Commercial says:

"Through manipulation of its crude rubber monopoly recently inflated, Great Britain will be enabled to pay its $4,500,000,000 war debt to the United States in a decade at the expense of American automobile owners and other rubber consumers, according to Senator McCormick, of Illinois. The senator has submitted to the senate a Commerce Department report detailing the new British export duties and other measures for restricting the production and increasing the price of crude rubber grown in the Malaysian States. The duties are practically prohibitive on exports in excess of 60 per cent of the 1920 volume of production rising from 8 cents a pound on exports between 60 and 65 per cent to 24 cents on exports in excess of 100 per cent. The cost of crude rubber already has nearly doubled as a result of the British restriction and the price of automobile tires has advanced sharply within the last month. Tires and other rubber articles are going to cost American consumers from $200,000,000,000 to $600,000,000 a year more than hitherto. At the latter figure the British, said Senator McCormick, would reap a profit sufficient to discharge their debt in about eight years.

Some 70 per cent of the total domestic rubber production in the world is grown in British possessions and nearly 10 per cent more is British grown elsewhere. America, if my memory serves me, consumes about 70 per cent of the rubber produced. In short, we shall pay the greater part of any increased price. It has been estimated that the cost of rubber to the American people will be somewhere between $25,000,000 and $50,000,000 a month. The services of the American automobile owner will then be enlisted for a decade in paying the British war debt to America.

Not only every tire manufacturer every automobile manufacturer and every dealer in the United States but every automobile owner would be directly affected."

STERILIZATION BILL NOW BEFORE PIERCE

SALEM, Feb. 20.—The house sent on its way to the governor Saturday Senator Brown's sterilization bill. Keeney and Kuhl were the only two members to vote against it.

Differing from the former sterilization bills it applies generally rather than to inmates of state institutions alone, and has for its purpose the sterilization of any person who may propagate the unfit.

It provides for a board of eugenics to be made up of various heads of state institutions and members of the board of health. Operations on inmates of the state institutions are to be under direction of the respective superintendents and on those other than by institution heads under the direction of the secretary of the state board of health.

IN MEMORIAM

Joseph Ann Bradford was born near Niagara Falls, Feb. 16, 1846. In 1858 she crossed the plains to Santa Valley, California, and married Elbert N. Bradford in 1863. In 1872 they moved to Elkhead, Oregon, and engaged in farming until March, 1917, they moved to Cottage Grove, Lane county. Elbert N. Bradford died Sept. 16, 1917. Mrs. Ann Bradford leaves to mourn her loss the following children: Alice Long, Grand View, Washington; Nellie Huff, Elkhead, Oregon; Nellie Churchill, Grand View, Washington; Annie White, Portland, Oregon; Oscar Bradford, Salem, Oregon; Walter Bradford, Hanford, Washington; Ernest Bradford, Dillard, Oregon; and Clara Spangenberg, Cottage Grove. Mrs. Ann Bradford died Feb. 17, 1923, at the age of 77 years and one day at the home of her daughter Mrs. Clara Spangenberg, of Cottage Grove, Oregon. She was laid to rest beside her husband in the Old Fellows cemetery, at Cottage Grove, Oregon.

CHAPTERS FROM A WOMAN'S LIFE

By Jane Phelps

CHAPTER 56

While they were discussing the draperies I stood looking on, feeling very much out of the indignation at Walter for ignoring me, or laughing at my lack of taste.

"You'd have white lace and pink over-drapes I expect if it was left to you, wouldn't you, Doreen?" He asked, good-naturedly. I flushed. It would have been my choice, something very like it anyway.

"I never pretended to be an artist," I said rather testily.

"No, that's one thing you are not; Thank Goodness!" Walter said so emphatically I looked at him in surprise. "I can't think of anything worse," he answered my look, "than an artist having a wife who also thinks herself an artist. Every day he'd work in a month. They'd be in the trade, dear, and yours is making the best, most comfortable home a man can have."

Now I flushed with pleasure. Walter had sensed my hurt and, in his own way, had saved it.

"So you think I couldn't make a good wife—being artistic! Helen Ralstrom asked."

"Not for an artist, no. Marry a banker or broker, Helen. Someone who can give you money enough to indulge your artistic tastes, but not an artist."

She turned away pouting, while Walter handed me soft stuffs lovingly and chatted with me.

Whether Walter meant all he said or not I left the studio all hurt gone. As long as he declared I made him a happy home that he was happy in it, why should I care whether I selected draperies and furniture or not?

Before the rooms were even finished I had to own he was right to do them without reference to me, my taste. I owned it to myself, though, not to anyone else. He had spent a good deal of money, but he declared he could afford it, and they were really the loveliest rooms I ever had seen. Simple, but everything blending, seeming to exactly fit the place.

Grace Harter went over to look at the rooms with me and she simply raved, about Walter, as well as the effect he had produced.

"You should be awfully proud of him, Doreen. I expect he's worked like a dog on this place. It's simply wonderful!"

"It is lovely," I conceded. "Lovely! It's perfect! And it sets off your beauty too, Doreen. These lovely colorings, the soft lights, would make any woman look beautiful; and when you are as good to look at to begin with as you are, the effect is marvelous. You must be careful what you wear in these rooms, the colors, I mean. That Ralstrom girl would wear just the right shades. I have noticed she has a knack of dressing for her surroundings."

"Walter says I haven't a bit of taste," I said ruefully.

"Then make him tell you the colors to wear. Use these rooms as a foil, Doreen. Learn to be clever about your clothes."

"I knew Grace was telling me this for my own good, yet I resented it in a way; that I had to have a background because of Walter, that he wouldn't love me as well in something inartistic."

"It isn't in me," I declared.

"Don't you dare say that after the hit you made at my dinner party. Fine feathers make fine birds all the world over, my dear Doreen, if the feathers suit the bird. The wren couldn't swagger in the robin's clothes but in his own colors he can put on all the swank he wants to."

A month had passed since Mrs. Page had left us. The furniture for her rooms had come, and several wonderful pieces for us. Walter went into spasms of delight over an old carved chest for the hall, tall candle sticks, a bench, two chairs and a carved settle, and soft old rugs.

He had all the things unpacked then arranged his mother's room. Her things were wonderfully lovely, although all old, had been used for years. But the soft rugs, the mahogany furniture quaint in shape and beautifully carved, made her suite very attractive.

"The Mater will be delighted when she sees how well her things look here," Walter said. She was a bit afraid they would be unsuitable for so modern an apartment."

AMENDMENT MADE TO ELECTION BOARD LAW

SALEM, Feb. 20.—Under an amendment to the double election board law adopted by the senate this morning the counting board will hereafter not begin work until four o'clock on the day of election. The bill as originally introduced by Senator Joseph would have abolished the double board system entirely as tending to nullify the secrecy of the ballot. As amended it is believed the bill has overcome to a large extent this objection while retaining some of the advantages of the double board system.

Multnomah county is provided in a bill passed by the senate this morning. The bill was sponsored by a majority of the Multnomah delegation in the house and senate and in its original form called for three new judges. In its amended form the bill was approved by those who had opposed the original bill and was passed with only three negative votes.

WILBUR P. T. A. MEETS

The Wilbur P. T. A. held their regular meeting at the school house last Friday night. After the business was disposed of a short program was enjoyed by all.

The program consisted of several instrumental numbers, a talk by Mrs. T. E. Gray, and a set of slides from the University of Oregon on Josephine County.

After the program was over, games were played by the young people and refreshments were served by the ladies which consisted of pie, coffee, and cocoa.

More should attend these meetings and we trust they will when the weather becomes better and the days longer.

TRAVELING MAN MUST HAVE HOME

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 20.—It is necessary for an unmarried traveling man to have a "home" in order to claim traveling expenses as a proper deduction in computing his federal income tax. The 1921 revenue act provides for the deduction of "traveling expenses" while away from home in pursuit of a trade or business. "Home," as used in this law is not the equivalent of domicile. It has been held that a taxpayer, for the purposes of this deduction, may have no "home" as defined in Webster's New International Dictionary, is "One's own dwelling place; the house in which one lives; the house in which one lives with his family."

The existence of a "home" is a question of fact in each individual case. If an unmarried traveling salesman maintains a house or other living quarters to which he may at any time return or which is at all times available for his use, he has a "home" within the meaning of the Act. He, therefore, is entitled, under the Revenue act of 1921, to deduct all traveling expenses, including the entire amount expended for meals and lodging, while away from such "home" in pursuit of a trade or business, provided he substantiates his claim for the deduction. Unless the

GLENDALE NEWS

"The Million Dollar Beauty Chorus" the feature attraction with "The Legion Barstowers" royally entertained and delighted a Glendale audience at the auditorium in this city last night. Our comment of approval is Vent Vidi Vici. The Umpqua Five orchestra enlivened a gorgeous entertainment with thrilling and soul stirring music. Every number was a classic, the speeches gems of historical research.

We lack language in which to express our pleasure at this delightful visitation, we will add our invitation to them to come again. Our grocers are all generously supplied with choice edibles, and plenty of eggs.

Miss Carrie Sether of our public schools spent the week end visiting friends at Medford.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Brown have returned to their home in this city. John Hanks is visiting his brother Jessie Hanks at their home in Idaho.

George Morley, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Morley, had the misfortune to break his leg at the knee joint while he was coasting on the hill. He was taken to the Morcy Hospital yesterday. The break is a very serious one, and Mr. and Mrs. Morley have the sympathy of our city in this serious accident.

A Silver Tea will be held in the basement of the Olivet church this evening. A fine program will be rendered and a general attendance is desired.

Teddy, the baby son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Winkelman, died at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. E. Winkelman on Saturday, at 4 a. m. He died of acute indigestion. The funeral occurred on Sunday at 3 p. m. Rev. M. C. Davis officiating. The services at the cemetery were very touching. The young parents have the sympathy of many friends and relatives in their bereavement. Our Saviour said, "Suffer little ones to come unto me, for, of such, is the Kingdom of Heaven."
