BEATING THE BUDGET

"Hell and Maria" Dawes isn't the only one who has trouble with a budget. The average woman today who stretches her husband's salary, even though a generous one, over the appalling number of needs of a growing family is a major general herself. But she does it-and in most cases far more successfully than any mere man could accomplish such a difficult task. She's perfectly frank to acknowledge, however, that she does it by "beating the burget." In the last few years American women by the thousands have discovered an easy and most effective way to stretch the family income to cover their own needs in dress. And the delightful surprise of the whole situation has turned out to be that they now have prettier clothes and far more of them. It's all due to the nation-wide revival of home dressmaking, which doubtless lins many causes. In the first place, women now rejoice in hand work of all kinds. While fine needlework has always been considered a great accomplishment, it is now being used for practical as well as purely artistic purposes. More than that, the loosely fitting, graceful modern styles may easily be followed and successfully attained by the amateur sewer. Fabrics were never more beautiful in color and design, or more varied in weaves and texture than they are today. But probably the thing which has made women so generally take up the revival of this old art with such fasting enthusiasm is not alone the desire to save money. These thrifty daughters of Eve have long since discovered that by making their own garments they can not only encourage lifty cents to do a dollar's work, but they can more easily attain that individuality of style for which American women are known the

Dear Folks:

When I left the house this morning, all the streets were glazed with ice and before I reached the corner I had tumbled on it twice for in spite of careful stepping, it appeared my feet were up your breath." it twice for in spite of careful stepping, it appeared my feet were bound to go shooting out from under and to land me on the ground, On my second somersaulting I was slow to rise again and I heard some laughs and cluckles from a group of watching men but an anto stopped beside me and a man leaned out to say "I'll be gind to help you sir, if you're going down my way."

With a groan, I kindly thanked him as I climbed within his car, but my thankfulness was ended ere we travelled very far. For most every frick that car could do in fancy whiris, it did. Just the moment that we started, it began to slide and slide. Every corner that we rounded I was sure woo I be our last, so I thought of all my wickedness and sins down thru the past, I began to think how lucky I had been the way I fared, and I wondered when I perished, who would be the one that cared,

Then I closed my eyes and waited for the final crushing blow. Yet I'm here to tell the story and I want you folks to know if you'd like to think of everything you've done since you were kids, take a ride in someone's auto and be sure it's one that skids.

PRUNE EMPIRE BUILDER GIVES

Famous Contractor Declares He Suffered 15 Years From Stomach Trouble, Then Gained 32 Pounds Taking Tanlac, and Robust Health Restored.

Benjamin F. Sullivan, 233 Rose St. Fortland, Oregon, is still another prominent citizen who decums it a pleasure as well as a duty to tell others about the benefits he has derived from Tanke. Mr. Sullivan stands among the empire builders of the great Northwest, having been for fifty years one of the leading railroad contractors of this vast territory.

"For fifteen years," he stated, "I suffered from a stubborn case of stomach trouble that refused to be budged by anything I took. My appetite was pretty fair as a general rule, but it just seemed that I could scarcely eat a thing that agreed with me. Why, I'd go for months on a Benjamin F. Sullivan, 393 Rose St.,
